"The Wild Oats Boy" Presented At High School By Local Characters

For the past several weeks, those who will take parts in the undergraduate play of the Chilton County High School, to be presented tomorrow night, have been going through their parts until now they are almost living their lines of the three-act comedy-drama, and those seeing it will no doubt acclaim it a success.

The name of the play, "The Wild Oats Boy," has a certain appeal to it alone, and the characters have been carefully picked for the various parts so that each would bring forth just the impression desired on the audience.

The play has been advertised and bids fair to bring a large crowd out to see it. Miss Margaret Kendrick, a member of the high school faculty, and competent in coaching such plays for high school students, has been drilling and coaching each one taking part, who in turn have been showing some real interest in the success of the presentation. Miss Kendrick has been assisted in the coaching by Miss Josephine Martin, another member of the school faculty.

The curtain is scheduled to go up at eight o'clock sharp. The part of the "Wild Oats Boy" is to be played by Erle Ellis, and the story around this young happy-go-lucky young man is amusing and yet serious at times, as in the story he has a chance to receive $50,000 from his uncle provided he is in bed not later than eight o'clock each night. Quite a number of amusing things can occur to a young man with that facing him, while he is the type who had rather be out at eight than in at eight.

Chestnut Creek Church

Dear Editor:

Please allow me space in your paper to write a few words in regard to our B. Y. P. U. here.

As last week was a nation-wide study course week, our church, too, had the wonderful opportunity of having a study course that was very much needed and appreciated.

We wish to thank Mr. Cornelius Hand of Clanton very much for teaching the Senior Manual, also Miss Lucille Taylor for teaching the Intermediate, and Mrs. Hattie Jones for teaching the Junior Manual. There was forty who took the course. We are very sorry that a few of our members didn't take it. I'm sure they can't realize what they missed. We adopted the Standard in each Union and are working to be A-1 by the beginning of the quarter, first of April

After examinations Saturday night, and I wish to say here everybody made good grades, we left the church and went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Patterson where a lively social was enjoyed, and I'm sure I can speak for all, we really had a good time.

We were glad to have all visitors, especially our pastor, Rev. J. S. Hand and Rev. Ollie Hayes. We welcome you back to our B. Y. P. U.

We wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. Patterson for allowing us to have the social in their home.

R. V. JONES,
The B. Y. P. U. Director.

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION

Editor Chilton County News:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to express my appreciation to the people of Mt. Nebo community for their kind and faithful help, during the illness of my wife and children, who had measles and whooping cough together. These people didn't allow us to suffer for the want of attention, and by the help of the Lord, and the skillful and faithful work of Dr. J. P. Hayes, and the help of these good people, we are all able again to sit at the table together again, and sit around the family altar and hold family prayer again, without the loss of one, for which I am very thankful. And too, I want to say just one year ago, a cyclone came by this way, and completely destroyed the top of my large barn, and in less than forty-eight hours by the help of these good people, I had a better top on my barn than was destroyed, for which I was thankful. And just ten years ago, a cyclone came by this way and destroyed many things around the place, and I almost lost my life. But these good people helped me all they could, for which I was very thankful. I am not only thankful to these good people, but I am thankful to God. For it was by His help we are all here today, and I trust, and I believe the Lord will abundantly bless all of these people who came to our rescue, and the many who wanted to and could not. The Lord knows all of you by name, and I know He won't let you lose your reward. For He does many things for people, by people, and there is much that we all can do to the upbuilding of His cause and Kingdom around us if we will be willing to answer when He calls. Here am I send me. Let's not be discouraged when affliction and disaster comes our way, for he has said many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth us out of them all, for the angel of the Lord encampeth around them that put their trust in Him and delivereth them. That is all we could ask of Him. Even though things go bad with us, we ought to be thankful they are not worse.

TOMMIE GLENN DIED AT HOME, MOUNTAIN CREEK

On February 17, 1931, just as the shades of night were falling, the spirit of Tommie Glenn slipped away to join the innumerable saints who have gone on before.

During the last years of his life he was in bad health and could not attend church as was his custom while in good health.

Funeral services were held on February 18, at New Harmony church. Rev. A. E. Trice conducted services.

He leaves to mourn his death four sisters, one brother, Miss Ellen Glenn, of Mt. Creek, Mrs. A. A. Culver, of Mt. Creek, Mrs. A. E. Trice of Clanton, Ala., Mrs. J. O. Culver of Birmingham, Ala., and one brother of Florida. He also leaves a host of relatives and friends.

Ravages Of "Flu" Quickly Yield To Nature's Tonic

Ferrac, The Non-Constipating Iron Tonic Is Widely Acclaimed By Sufferers

Containing ferric and ferrous sulphates of iron perfectly combined by nature. Ferrac is recommended as the ideal strengthener and builder-up for weakened, rundown system after the ravages of flu.

When the supply of iron has been drawn down dangerously low by illness, the mineral sulphate, as contained in Ferrac, goes straight into the blood making organs, it is stated, and stimulates them into vigorous activity in the manufacture of more blood. The matchless triumphs scored by Ferrac in cases of weakened, rundown and almost exhausted systems, is attracting wide comment wherever this remarkable product is on sale. But the ideal time to begin Ferrac is before the flu takes hold, warding off this dread illness by building up the system.

O. F. Bonham, Ensley, says: "My wife lacked strength from a protracted illness, and was so completely exhausted for almost a year that she was practically confined to bed. She started Ferrac and gained strength back so rapidly that it was almost like a miracle."

Mrs. Laura Rheinhardt, 1821 Copeland Ave., Birmingham, says: "An attack of flu left my whole system terribly weakened. My weight dropped from 124 to 88 pounds. I started Ferrac, my weight is already back to 104 and I am stronger and feel better than I have felt in years."

Ferrac is on sale at all Drug Stores, or if your druggist can not supply you, send $1.00 to The Greenville Products Co., Greenville, Ala. adv.

Those taking part in the interesting games were Mesdames Hance Alred, Frank Callen, L. F. Gerald, Hugh Simpson, Victor Heard, Arthur Johnson, Napoleon Johnson, Grady Reynolds, Julius Burnett, John Mullins, John Armstrong and Weaver. Mrs. Hance Alred won high score prize, and Mrs. John C. Page was tea guest of the afternoon.

Masked Bandits Rob Gas Station

Brewton, Ala., March 14. — Five masked bandits armed with sawed-off shotguns held up two men at a filling station on the Brewton-Andalusia Highway nine miles from here tonight, and, when no money was found in the place, ordered the proprietor, Walter Douglas, to go home and get the day's receipts.

His life threatened by the robbers, Douglas went to his home, a short distance away, and returned with approximately $25, which the holdup men took and fled.

S. J. Howard, Douglas's companion, was kicked about on the floor by the bandits when he made a remark that offended them.

Beyond stating that the five men were white and apparently experienced robbers, Howard and Douglas could not furnish a good description of the men. The sheriff's office was notified here and a search was started for the bandits.

Entering the filling station, the leader of the quintet demanded all the money, Douglas said. When Douglas replied that he had none a thorough search of the place was made.

Following the robbery, the five men escaped toward Andalusia in a small sedan, Douglas said.

Mrs. Rockett Hostess To Young Matron's Club.

Mrs. Dewey Rockett was hostess to the Young Matron's Sewing Club at her attractive home on Second Avenue on last Thursday afternoon. Lovely spring flowers were used in a most attractive manner throughout the home for the occasion and a delightful afternoon was spent by the members present, in sewing.

Late in the afternoon a delicious salad plate was served to the following: Mesdames Jack McMurray, Milton Smith, Joe Higgins, Loren Smith, Horsley White, Horace Jones, Irene Raspberry, Mrs. John D. Mullins and Mrs. Jimmie Taylor were invited guests of the club for the afternoon.

Mrs. Duncan and Mrs. Duke of Prattville were guests of their mother, Mrs. Glennie Phillips last Sunday.

The many friends of W. I. Mullins are glad to see him out again after being confined to his home with cold.

Mr. and Mrs. John DeRamus of Talladega spent the past week end here with relatives.

Elder and Mrs. A. B. Russell left Tuesday for Pensacola, Fla., where they will spend several days.

Circles Met At Baptist Church Last Monday Afternoon.

A very interesting program of Bible study was well attended at the Baptist church on last Monday afternoon by all Circles. The subject of the program was "Election."

Methodist Missionary Society Met At Church Monday.

The two circles of the Missionary society of the Clanton Methodist church met Monday afternoon at the church for their regular monthly business meeting. The meeting was opened by Mrs. D. W. Haskew, president of the society. Devotional was led by Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer.

Some very entertaining readings were given by Miss Emma Sue Morris and Mrs. L. C. Warr. There were eleven members present and the meeting was very interesting and inspiring.

The Circles will meet again for a business meeting at the church on the third Monday in April. Circle Number One will meet next Monday afternoon at three-thirty o'clock at the home of Mrs. A. S. Prince, while Circle Number Two will meet with Mrs. Grady Broadhead at the same hour Monday.

Mrs. Allen of Knoxville spent the past week end here as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Rena Rembert.

Mrs. Glenn Boyd and daughter, Gypsy Ann, of Selma were guests of Mrs. H. C. Falkenberry in Clanton last week.

Mrs. Charlie Plier returned to her home in Clanton last week after a delightful visit to relatives in Birmingham.

! HIGH SCHOOL NEWS !

We are indeed glad to correct two errors that occurred in last week's honor roll students. The names of Joe Hall Johnson and Mabel Harris were omitted. Joe Hall made A's in all his courses, and Mabel made an average of A in al lher work. Joe Hall is in Junior One and Mabel is in Senior One.

County Field Day

We feel that our play day was a success in every respect. Everybody appeared to enjoy the occasion, and to get a great deal of good from it. Comments were made during the day that the largest crowd of school children were assembled that has ever been in Clanton. Due credit is due the officials who organized the various committees together for sponsoring the plays and games. We feel that this should be made an annual affair. A splendid school spirit can be built up over the entire county on occasions like last Friday.

Combination Truck Shed And Gymnasium For High School

Bids are now ready for the erection of a building sixty by eighty feet on the campus of Chilton County High School for the purpose of storing 20 of the 40 busses owned by the county during the summer months. During the winter, this building may be used for any purpose the school sees fit. We plan to make a splendid indoor basketball court out of it. A similar building is in the process of construction at Jemison where twenty other truck bodies will be stored. We plan to break dirt next week.

We Retain Style Lines in Repairing Women's SHOES

In repairing women's footwear we not only retain all of the style lines designed into the shoe, but rebuild it to the original snug fitting shoe which was always so comfortable. Heels are our specialty—and quick service is a point of pride with us. All of this service at a charge no higher than it costs you elsewhere—and where repair work is lacking in real workmanship craft.

GREED:

The following is an editorial published in the Meridian, Miss., Star, May 7, 1928:

The greatest curse of the age is greed. Everybody is trying to "do" somebody else. Everybody is trying to get ahead of the other fellow and so the great procession goes fighting, tearing, squirming—"and the devil take the hindmost." And none of us gets much.

Yet there is enough for all. Nature is generous. Earth through its various channels is pouring its riches into the lap of humanity—there is plenty for all and to spare. Yet we fight.

In the world of traffic, the exchange of staples and in the marts the unsceptered money kings hold sway. Greed, reaching for more than a fair share, robs industry. Greed partly to show its power has been known to cause panic, brutal, senseless and hideous.

In one section of the country crops are permitted to rot on the ground, because there is no market for them. Within easy reach of these, the squalid cries of hunger go unanswered. In Kansas the farmer burns corn for fuel; in the coal lands they are starving for bread. The farmer would be glad to exchange his corn for coal, but the railways place a prohibitive schedule of rates.

Speculation dips its hands into every bushel of wheat and even the standing grain. It is everywhere, its stamp is on all things. It grinds human lives and profits by the gist of blood.

It is all our greed. Only a few have obtained the upper hand. They have control. So the rest of us fight for the few grains monopoly leaves.

'Tis a sad state and we have yet to find a deliverer. But there is hope. Hope is cheap and there is plenty of it. But hope doesn't satisfy a hungry stomach. But it helps a little.

And long ago we learned to be satisfied with little.

This Month Of March

March used to be the first month in the year, in the days when folk calculated the year's beginning from the day when the sun crosses the Equator on his journey northward. The Vernal Equinox occurs on the 21st of March, and from then on the days are longer than the nights until the third week in September. The old Anglo-Saxon name for March was "Lencten-monath," or lengthening month, because the days grow longer so rapidly.

In some parts of England and Scotland the last three days of March are called "the borrowing," the idea being that March has borrowed three days from April.

Wherever the world March, as the beginning of Spring, has been an important month in the religious ceremonials which are supposed to insure bountiful crops. The dead [illegible] to life again in March, and begins its cycle all over. There is sound logic in the old system of starting the year's reckoning with March, a custom which [illegible] not drop until 1699 and which persisted in [illegible] until 1752. Example

Every man has some power over others that is exercised without conscious effort on his part. It is a responsibility he can not dodge. If he is a strong man, others will strive to emulate his strength. If he is a weak man, others, in passing, will shudder at the thought of being like him. Both serve the noble cause of uplift.

In almost every group, organization or community there is one man who walks his chosen way without thought for the preferences, opinions and will of others. He is a strong man; original, dominant, cocksure. If he has looked the world over and decided against it; if it is his custom to attribute the worst possible motives to all men; if he is, in short, a cynic, those who come within his influence are almost certain to find themselves sneering at mankind and calling the world a failure.

But if this strong man is a conservative with a well-lined nest and a conviction that all who advocate change or a disturbing of dividends are dangerous cranks who should be jailed or deported, those who associate with him soon learn to use his pet phrases in denunciation of dreamers and to feel a certain awe of money in large piles.

Therefore, since it is a certainty that the average man, who lacks a dominating personality, will be remade after the image of the strong men within whose orbit he moves, why shouldn't he exercise what little discretion he has in the matter and attach himself to men who now are what he would like to be?

—o-c-o-o—

As a matter of suggestion, we might say that you farmers would not be making a mistake if you look over your farm equipment now and see if you can't save some money by doing a little repairing.

"ROUND TOWN"
---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

" * * * and the worms crawled out and the worms crawled in."

* * * *

Just what that saying above could pertain to in my thoughts this week, I have no idea. But, worms usually crawl in and out of those things that become more or less decomposed,—rotten, so to speak. It is all right for one to go about patting folks on the back for awhile, but the time comes when I feel like something ought to be said about some faults when they become so plain, that a person can't keep from noticing and even sometimes they become the gossip of the town. Now, I've been doing nicely for the past few weeks, just talking nice things about folks round town, and forgetting about some bad things that have been happening, and I've stood it about long enough, without busting loose and telling about it—in a nice way, however.

* * * *

The past week end brought with it some happenings in these parts that don't happen very often. A murder, two brothers fighting, and cutting, a fellow knocking another in the head, a woman throwing a fit on the highway about a man, and gossip about some misconduct of a couple of teachers. Phew—what scandal and gossip we do have sometimes. Gossip—"and the worms crawl out, etc."

* * * *

Truthfully, I'm glad that our teachers are not allowed to attend dances here. Dances are all right, I like them and think it's great. But, I can't put my O. K. on all the dances held, that I know of. Especially those where there are no restrictions except the one at the door, when you have to fork over a couple of dollars or so, to get you and the girl friend in. Dances—saloons on wheels—no regard for marriage vows—chasers galore—girls being shipped from college—bad whiskey—and a good time was had by all, provided they left their conscience at home.

* * * *

Sure, I think Clanton ought to have some dances, and often too. But again, how about some that are, what one would call "a real dance" like those they used to have up in the Woodmen Hall years ago. Them was the days—and a good time was had by all, even if they did bring along their conscience.

* * * *

Heard about a man the other day who is down on Clanton, so he says. He just cut loose with a big volley of criticism on the conduct here of the various classes of people. Bowling alleys—pool tables—hang-out places for small boys—criticism on things going on at night round town—what's the matter with the men governing the town?—whiskey just around the corner—no place to raise boys and girls. And on and on—poor fellow.

* * * *

But he didn't say a single word about the streets in the residential sections being in bad condition, just as bumpy as a alligator's back, and Clanton is to have a lot of out-of-town visitors here today. I sure have a hard time trying to make some folks see some things that are going wrong. Seems like they can't see any farther than that "dollar" that they think is stuck in front of them, and afraid they will lose it.

* * * *

Sorry folks, but this looks like it needs to be done—my telling you about it. Just some more of my infamous tips being given out in a friendly manner this week. Don't get sore with me for doing it, because it's for your benefit, just want to call your attention to some faults, and you'll admit I'm right, if you stop and think a minute.

* * * *

For awhile I noticed that both papers carried items from the Boy Scouts here, and they were interesting. Inquired about them from the editor, and he said he's been trying to get some Boy Scout Activities, but hasn't succeeded. On investigation I find there has been no activities. They meet regularly, call the roll, and the rest of the meeting is—well, boys, let's get to work and do some real Boy Scout work. You have a great running start with your organization, and let's keep running.

* * * *

And the Girl Scouts. What has become of them? Yes, I know they meet regularly. Girls, you got a great opportunity just like the Boy Scouts here. Wouldn't it be a great idea to have a contest between the Boy Scout Troop and the Girl Scout Troop of Clanton in attendance, achievements, etc. I know the leaders of these two troops are working hard in the behalf of the organizations, and they can't do it all alone. Clanton once had an eighteen-piece Boy Scout Band. That was years ago, so I'm informed, and why not now?

* * * *

Hats off to the teachers of Chilton County. We all owe them a debt of gratitude acording to an article on the front page of today's paper. Read it and smile.

* * * *

And now they say that the News is putting Chilton County on the map more than ever. Not bad for a bunch of newsboys used to hard knocks. Yes, there is a lot of good work going on in the News plant that folks don't know about. Modesty—bah. I'd tell the world about it. I've stuck around the News long enough to see information go shooting out about this fine county of ours, that looks good to me, and the ed just says nothing about it to anybody. Toot—toot—toot. Why not blow your own horn for awhile.

* * * *

They tell me that the fellow who is worthwhile is the one who, finds himself coming out at the little end of the horn, just simply appropriates the horn and blows it forevermore.

—o-o-o-o—

It is about time for the talk of improving the fishing grounds and clubs of Chilton County. This item makes our place very attractive to visitors far and near.

* * * *

Much of the value of barnyard manure may be leached out if hauling to the field is delayed until after the Spring rains have come. Not only is valuable plant food lost, but the barnyards are made almost impassable for the cows.

* * * *

Abraham Lincoln once said that God must have loved the common people because he made so many of them. It is well that He does, for the President, Congress or the Republican party don't care much for them.

* * * *

The citizen of Clanton who invests no thought or effort in the improvement of his home town, can't expect his home town to return him any dividends of increased prosperity.

MORAL ECHOES
D. W. Haskew

A Chilton County minister had in his home a son who was not mean at heart, but who was just a normal boy, full of frolic and fun. One day this boy did something that the father did not approve, and he thought to impress the boy with a religious correction. He called him aside to the shade of a tree and there had prayer with his boy. While at prayer he asked that God would come down and make his son stop doing the thing of which he was charged. At that point the boy snickered. When the prayer was over the father ventured to ask, "Son, what made you snicker while I was praying?" The boy replied, "Cause Daddy, you were asking God to do something that you ought to do." That is like the prayers of many parents. They are praying that God will come down and make their children stop going to picture shows on Sunday, stop them from running around at night, stop them from using slang, stop them from missing Sunday school. We are prone to petition God to do many things that we should be doing ourselves. It is enough to make devils "Laugh out loud" when they see parents with young children going about whining about not being able to make their children do the things they should do. God is not going to do a thing for your children that you are expected to do for them.

God sent a beautiful Sabbath and there was the call of the church bell for worship. The mother heard that call, but she said to her husband, "I am not going to church today. I am going to stay at home so that we can have a hot dinner." The husband yawned, and then he said, "Mary, if you are not going, I am not going either." They remained at home. Next Sunday going to church was not mentioned. A year passed and the young couple had formed the habit of non church going. Children came into that home, and they followed the example of their parents and an ungodly family was sent out into the world. It all came from the decision of that young mother to remain at home on the Sabbath that her little family might have a hot dinned. "A hot dinner" on Sunday has made a hot eternity for many lost spirits. It is far better to give the soul some good warm spiritual food on the Sabbath than it is to feed the stomach with steaming victuals.

I heard a young matron say this week "The longer I live and the more I observe, the more I am persuaded that there is nothing that will take the place of the home for the training of children in the right ideals of living." This young woman said, "You may preach ever so hard and warn with the greatest earnestness, but the child will go back to its home to continue to do the things that it has been trained to do." The statement of this brilliant woman is sadly true. The things that have become a habit in the home, are the things that will be the habit when the home is left behind. Parents, you may not have much education, but you can have right ideals. Make your home the place where correct ideals are held before the children. Listen to me, the greatest pain in perdition is not going to be the fire that burns, but it is going to be the remorse that comes when a loved one will shake his bony finger in your face and say, "I would not have been here if you had not brought me here." I can not understand how parents can live without linking the family to the church in loyal living.

—o—

Paul landed on the island of Melita and the crew from the broken ship started out to kindle a fire. Paul gathered some rubbish and carried it to the fire. Just as he was throwing his armful of sticks into the flames, a beastly serpent fastened its fangs into the finger of the Apostle. It was a poisonous reptile, and all who saw that Paul was snake bitten, looked for him to fall down dead. Paul was God's man, and he shooks the snake from his finger into the flames and no hurt came to him. You may be ever so careful in your handling of the things of this world, but if you do not watch, bad habits will cling to you. There is deadly poison in every bad habit formed. If you find that bad habits are fastening their fangs into your manner of living, you had better shake them off. If you will shake them from your way of living soon enough, they will not hurt you, but if you allow them to cling to you, the time is not far away when you will fall down morally dead. Shake off bad habits like you would shake off a snake that was clinging to your finger.

—o—

Yes, we are all sorry for that fine little boy who was bitten by a mad dog in West Clanton last Friday. It was too bad that the little fellow had to be injured by the madness and poison of that canine, but let me tell you, there is something worse than the tooth of a mad dog. Thank God, the skill of the physician can make safe the bite of the mad dog. How many boys, how many girls, have gone out from home to become infected with the poison of sin. There is no human antitoxin for sin. Christ is the only Physician who can handle the poison of sin. The devil's mad dogs are out. Look out that you are not bitten.

ton County again."

From Russellville, Ala.: "I have received and digested with interest your edition "Chilton County Booster Edition" which I think is one of the most complete and magnifying I have ever had the pleasure of reading, it is most interesting in eevry respect, and indeed a pleasure to see the growth of Clanton, Ala., my opinion is the growth of this city is due largely to men of character and ability such as yourself, as editor of the Chilton County News. It was with a deep sense of gratitude and appreciation I acknowledge receipt of this wonderful edition, and trust Clanton will continue to grow in the future as she has done in the past."

From Auburn, Ala.: "That was a dandy edition you published recently. I was especially impressed with the genuine spirit of cooperation in Clanton and in Chilton County as revealed by this issue. Congratulations to you and to the many others who worked with you."

From Pine Bluff, Arkansas: "It is with a great deal of pleasure that I write you in regard to the Booster Edition of your paper which I received the other day, and on which I wish to congratulate you and your staff to the fullest extent. It is very evident from the things shown in that issue that Clanton and Chilton County are certainly growing by leaps and bounds, and that fact was impressed on me after looking over the Booster Edition of your fine newspaper. In my opinion the people of Chilton County should feel proud to have such a newspaper in their midst, one that is so inclined as the News is, to boost for its county. I am looking forward to a visit to your section of the country."

From Portland, Oregon: "Although we have not had the pleasure of becoming acquainted with the editor of the News, nor his staff, we wish to take this opportunity to extend our heartiest congratulations to your newspaper and the people of your county on the extraordinary issue just received by this office, your Chilton County Booster Edition. If at any time any of our representatives have cause to travel your part of the United States, it will be a treat to them to visit Alabama and above all, Chilton County, of which we note Clanton is the county seat."

From Montgomery, Ala.: "The Chilton County News Booster Edition just out is worthy of a larger paper in its scope, coverage and news matter. That special edition is in keeping with the general editorial excellence of this enterprising weekly newspaper. It is certainly meant as an epitome of the activities of the town of Clanton and Chilton County."

From Birmingham, Ala.: "It has been our pleasure many times to pass thru your fine little city of Clanton, and now after receiving and digesting the contents of the Booster Edition recently printed by your outstanding newspaper we will take time in the future to linger awhile there. You can truthfully say, in our opinion, that the News has placed your county on the map, more than it has ever been, and when next in Clanton the writer shall take the privilege of calling in to see the editor of such a wide-awake and progressive newspaper."

From Denver, Colorado: "Allow me to extend heartiest congratulations to you and your fellow workers on the splendid edition you just published called the "Chilton County Booster Edition." Having some relatives in that section of the country, I was deeply interested and am now looking forward more than ever to my next visit to your county. Permit, me also, to extend congratulations on the general appearance of the edition, and its contents. I have never seen anything its equal. I noticed sometime ago in one of the daily papers an account of the Hanson award to you and your newspaper, and now can readily see why the award was so made."

Other comments, which we are unable to publish came from Chicago,, Atlanta, Birmingham, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Atlanta, Chicago, Columbus, Miss., Birmingham, Ocean Springs, Miss., Montgomery, and it would be almost an impossibility to publish all the complimentary comments that came in to the News office over the telephone.

These people who have written and telephoned their compliments and congratulations, spoke highly of Chilton County and its growth during the past few years.

McDaniel Wyatt

The death of McDaniel Wyatt Monday night brought to a close the earthly career of a man whose simple and beautiful life has been a blessing to everyone who had the good fortune to know him. The end came peacefully about eleven o'clock, after an illness of three weeks with pneumonia. As his loved ones stood beside his bed and watched his eyes close into eternal rest, it was as a sweet calm after the storm.

He had lived a life that had carried him through some rugged places, strenuously engaging the conflicts that came his way, and always maintaining a sweet spirit and cheerful disposition. His family and his intimate friends have ever been impressed by his unusual ability to see the bright side of every perplexing situation. He never failed to see the light of the sun shining behind every dark cloud of his life.

McDaniel Wyatt was 73 years of age He was born and reared in the Providence community,in Beat 16, where he lived until 31 years ago, when he moved to a farm about a mile east of Clanton. About six years ago he left his farm and moved to Clanton.

He was the oldest son of Francis Marion Wyatt, who died about 25 years ago, and Jane Popwell Wyatt, who died in 1929. Surviving him are his wife, Rebecca Ann (Parrish) Wyatt; five sons, Monroe, Will, Reuben, George and Mack Wyatt, all of Clanton; two daughters, Mrs. G. C. Armstrong and Mrs. W. B. Cox, of Clanton. One of his sons, John T. Wyatt, died in the United States Navy during the World War

Three sisters and three brothers survive him. They are Mrs. Dora Dupree of Montgomery; Mrs. J. J. Maddox, of Clanton; Mrs. W. W. Robinson of Providence; Reuben, Jim, and Tom Wyatt, all of Clanton.

Mell Martin had charge of the burial at Concord Tuesday afternoon. The funeral was conducted by Rev. G. G. Williams and Rev. S. J. Ezell.

For many years Mr. Wyatt had been a member of the Baptist church, first at Providence, and later at Concord, where his membership remained until his death. He was a devout Christian man. His first great purpose in life was to live right himself. Next to that he was interested in helping everybody else to live right. The Golden Rule was his plan of life. Noble men, loved and respected as he was, are the result of such purposes as he had in life.

The children of Clanton will miss him much. He was known and loved by many of them. To everyone he was "Grandpa." As they passed his home on the way to and from school, he took special interest in greeting them with some word of cheerfulness every day.

We who come after this good man well may stirve to emulate his noble example. No higher hope of reward could we have than that we might come to the end of our earthly ways with the peaceful benediction that was his, the crowning glory that awaits all who will take up their cross and follow humbly in the footsteps of Jesus.

A FRIEND.

IN MEMORY OF BERTHA LOU GRIFFITH

It was only a few days ago; we can never forget the day;
When came the silent reaper, and took our dear niece away.
Although unable to speak to us, and could not even say good-bye;
We know her thoughts were with us,
when she was called to die.
We miss her, O! we miss her, for our Savior called her away;
But we are praying to meet her in a better world some day.
We know she is waiting, with our Savior on high;
She's there ready to greet us, where there is no good-bye.
No more on earth we'll see her face;
her voice we'll hear no more;
But let us live to meet her, on that bright and sunny shore.
We love our dear niece, no human tongue can tell;
We said good-bye for a little while,
but we didn't say farewell.
She has gone and left us desolate, but she is so glad and free;
All our tears would turn to smiles, if her rapture we could see.
Oh! how loving, good and jolly, she was every day by day;
All the sorrow that she gave us, was because she went away.
She's not dead, just sweetly resting, from her trials and troubles here;
But if we live as Jesus has taught us, we will meet her over there.

—Her Aunt, Mrs. Carire Lee Nelson.

Billingsley News

The Study Course at the Baptist church last week was in every way a success. Between seventy-five and a hundred participated in the different classes. The inspirational addresses of Dr. Ezell of Clanton, Dr. Harris of Prattville and Dr. Seymore of Fayette were indeed helpful and the music was directed by Rev. J. C. Hill of Clanton. It was voted at the close to make this an annual affair.

Mr. E. B. Mills was carried to the Central Alabama Hospital at Clanton Friday night for medical treatment.

Mrs. Mary Lou Wonder of Tuscaloosa is visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Marlar

Messrs. J. O. Simmons and Emmett Beadlescomb, spent the week end in Louin, Miss., visiting the parents of Mr. Simmons

Misses Mary Collier and Anne Turk pent the week end with their parents it Prattville and Autaugaville

Mr. A. G. Thompson of Bessemer was the guest Sunday of Mrs. W. A Gandy.

Miss Thelma Baxter is quite ill with flu.

Mrs. Willis Lawrence of Eoline spent the week end with Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Marlar.

Miss Willie Jeanne Patrick returned Sunday to Montgomery to Massey's Business College after several days illness at home.

WOMAN FOUND ON HIGHWAY CREATES EXCITEMENT HERE

Clanton's usual peaceful Sunday afternoon life was disturbed in the downtown section Sunday afternoon when the report was circulated that a strange woman had been found on the highway near Jemison and brought to Clanton in a semi-conscious condition.

According to the story given the News the woman was really found by passing motorists who stated she was apparently going into a fit. They brought her to Clanton, and Chief of Police carired her to the hospital where she refused for a while to talk. However, later a man, her companion, arrived on the scene and things were straightened out. Just another quarrel, so they say, and Clanton again went back to its peacefulness with comments here and there about the incident.

HOME OF BILL DICKERSON BURNED EARLY SATURDAY

The home of Bill Dickerson, negro, in West End, burned early last Saturday morning. The alarm was sounded at two-fifteen o'clock, however, it was stated that the flames had consumed quite a bit of the home before the alarm was sounded in town.

The origin of the fire was not learned. Very little of the furnishings of the home were saved, as the house was burning to a large extent when the family awoke.

The volunteer firemen answered the call, and did some fine work in extinguishing the blaze before the entire house was destroyed, as well as protecting nearby homes. It was necessary to stretch practically the entire supply of hose carried by the truck to get water to the fire, as no fire plugs were nearby.

Mt. Springs News

Miss Dora Brackin, Sunday School Extension Worker, is holding special services heer this week. The next meeting will be Thursday night. Everybody is invited to attend. She will be with us next Sunday in our Sunday school and give us a talk on Sunday school work.

There will be preaching here next Sunday at 11 a.m. by our pastor.

There has been a lot of sickness in our community, but some of them are reported to be improving.

If you find a welcome at Mt. Springs, tell others, if not tell us.

CHARLIE AND EVAN MIMS GO TO HOSPITAL FROM QUARREL

Charlie Mims and Evan Mims, brothers, were admitted to the hospital here the latter part of last week suffering from cuts and bruises received when they engaged in a scrape following a quarrel. Neither was seriously injured.

SAMUEL MINTURN PECK PREFERS POET LAUREATE HONORS TO PRESIDENCY

Samuel Minturn Peck, of Tuscaloosa, Poet Laureate of Alabama, by action of the Legislature and Gov. Miller, would rather be Poet Laureate of his native State than to be president, he wrote the Governor Monday in a letter thanking the Chief Executive for appointing him.

In his letter which came to the Governor by special delivery and marked "personal" Mr. Peck said:

"I have received today my commission as first Poet Laureate of Alabama, with your Excellency's signature; permit me to thank you.

"I would rather be first Poet Laureate of my native State than be president of the United States of America.

"I receive with pride this great honor from your distinguished hands."

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS

"The modern farmer knows that the law of supply and demand has not yet been repealed."—Renick W. Dunlap, Asst. Secy. of Agriculture.

You don't have to irrigate potatoes. Plant onions with them; the onions will make their eyes water.—Mixed Goods.

Soil is the foundation of farming; soil is the sole source of income.—The Country Gentleman.

"In an era of low prices, a reduction in production cost may mean the difference between profit and loss." — Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture.

W. D. Joyner, leading merchant of Rocky Mount, N. C., sold his first bag of V-C fertilizer about 31 years ago, and his sales of V-C have been growing ever since. "I furnish what my trade specifies," says Mr. Joyner. "This growth is proof of the merits of V-C."

You can move either hand —or both

You can't control markets, but you can control Profit. You can grow top quality at bottom cost by using plenty of V-C fertilizer on every acre and by intensifying your whole crop on fewer acres. The difference between selling price and growing cost, between top hand and bottom hand—that's Profit! You can open this difference, you can move either hand or both, you can control Profit, with V-C fertilizer.

Fertilizer improves quality and therefore adds to the value of each bushel or bale or pound.—The Fertilizer Review.

"The farmer should not work land that does not produce a high output for each hour of labor," says an authority. "He should obtain high crop yields by using fertilizers."

It's not the size of the farm, but the brains of the man at the head of it, that spells the difference between success and failure. Skilled farmers are making good money farming little farms intensively, making every acre pay. Other skilled farmers are making good money managing enormous farms, making every acre pay.

Always be on the safe side by using enough fertilizer, as it is more dangerous to use too little than to use too much.—A. and M. College, Mississippi.

J. H. Coppage of Hahira, Ga., planted 8½ acres of tobacco, used 1,000 pounds of V-C Tobacco Special 12-3-5 per acre, and gathered an average of 1,400 pounds of good leaf per acre, selling the crop for $2,745.

"I just fixed it all up with a man to take my debts off my hands for $10,000."

"But where's the $10,000 coming from?"

"That's the first thing he's got to worry about."—Exchange.

IN MEMORY OF MRS MAGGIE TYUS

—o—

Mrs. Maggie Tyus, wife of Mr. A. J. (Bud) Tyus, of Clanton Route 3, died last Friday a.m. about seven o'clock at the family home and was buried at Mt. Pisgah church Saturday morning at eleven o'clock, Rev. J. H. Limbrick officiating.

Maggie was 45 years of age at the time of her death. She was the mother of eight children, all of whom are still living, and were at her bedside when the end came.

Mrs. Tyus, before her marriage, was Miss Maggie Culp, a sister of A. J. Culp, local merchant of near Clanton, and was born and reared in Chilton County.

She was married when a young girl and spent a most happy life and was active in community and religious affairs. She was a member of the Methodist Protestant church, having joined when quite young.

Mrs. Tyus is survived by her husband, A. J. Tyus, and the following children: Julius, Preston, Lewis, Newel, Willie, Bert, Mary and Bud, all of whom are still at home except [illegible] She leaves also a mother, Mrs. Culp, two brother, J. O. and A. J. Culp, two sister, Mrs. G. W. Mullins and Mrs. I. B. Yeargan, and a host of friends and loved ones.

A FRIEND.

Mrs. David Morton of Chicago testified in her divorce suit that although her husband was a florist the only flowers he sent to her were the "left-over corsages that he couldn't sell."

Mrs. Ethel Theobald of Bournemouth, Eng., a nurse convicted of defrauding her patients, was characterized in court as "the worst liar in the world."

BETTER QUALITY

Give to the selection of seed one-tenth the time spent in choosing working tools for your garden—and you will find new pride in your blooming plants—or more highly flavored and tender vegetables. Also, more of them.

Selected Seed Corn: of the following varieties: White and Yellow Dent; Trucker's Favorite; Hickory King; Hastings Mosby's Prolific. Will have very best grade of velvet beans.

The success—or the failure of your garden, flower or vegetable, depends now upon the selection of good seed. Lionard's bulk seeds will not disappoint you. Buy in bulk and save money.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT

Maggie Johnson, daughter of a letter carrier, as a stock girl in The Mack a San Francisco Five-and-Ten, falls in love with "Joe Grant," who also works there. His real name is Jospeh Grant MacKenzie Merrill, son of the owner of the store. He wants to learn the business from the bottom. Because he fears that Maggie will be frightened by his wealth and social position, he does not reveal his true identity, even when he proposes to her.

Joe finally tells his father about Maggie. She is invited to a dinner at a fashionable restaurant, where she discovers that Joe is not a poor young man at all. She thinks that she has been deliberately tricked. She starts to leave in mortification when she sees her poorly dressed father and dowdy mother coming toward the dinner party.

They explain that Maggie's sister, Liz, is at night court with her friend, who has been arrested for speeding.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"You'll say nothing and you'll do nothing," she said, in a voice that silenced all five of her hearers. "You've done enough, Joe Grant. We aren't—your sort. We don't belong—here, in a room like this. And we do belong—together. I'm not much—you've been laughing at me all this time, and I guess anyone who understood what was going on would laugh at me!—but I wouldn't be anything, I wouldn't have a right even to try to be ideal—if I wouldn't stick to my own folks! I don't care—" Her eyes were blazing, her level pitiless voice bored through him—"I don't care," said Maggie, trembling, "what you think of us! My father and mother belong to me, and my sister does, and I'm as glad, Joe," she ended passionately, tears spilling from her eyes now, but her mouth steady, "I'm as glad to be done with you as you are with me!" She turned to Mr. Merrill who had sat with a fan of bills open in his fingers, watching her with a sort of berathless concentration. It was almost as if he were afraid that she would not dare say what she was so rapidly and furiously saying, and as if he liked to hear her.

She took three of the bills, folded them, shut them into her flat worn purse.

"That's thirty," she said to him with a nod. "I owe you thirty. Thank you. It won't be more than that. Don't—" and, with a glance of utter contempt toward Joe, she dropped her voice to onifdence—a confidence that George Merrill, under the circumstances, found nfinitely touching, between his humbest little employee and himself— "Don't et Joe follow us, Mr. Merrill," said laggie. "I mean it. I'm never going o see him again. I'm done!"

Blindly, swiftly, hugging her father ightly to her on one side, holding her nother's hand tight on the other, Mag- went with them from the room. he reclaimed her shabby coat, and hey three went through the foyer of he big hotel and out into the cool evning darkness together. Magige sig-

w, it's all right, Ma," she said, a breathless, light voice. "We'll get z out, and she'll stop running with hess after this night's work, you'll e and may pick up someone who's orth something."

"Oh, dearie, I feel so awful that Ma nd me follered you! But I'm afraid ou'll feel bad, Maggie," her father ltered.

The nightmare went on and on. They ere in a horrible smelly wide place of nches and spittoons and harsh lights, d her mother was crying noisily, and op, pale and disheveled and very quiet, s asking her, for God's sake, to stop. aggie was pleading with a clerk, askg him to hurry a certain case, and odnaturedly enough, he did hurry it d almost immediately a little door the right opened, and 'Lizabeth and ess Rivers and another girl and man me out.

The instant she saw her daring, pret-, independent sister frightened and arful and white-faced, Maggie's heart emed to turn liqdid, and she ran oss the courtroom and held out her arms, and 'Lizabeth caught her, and they cried together. And when the Judge looked down over his desk, disapproving of this confusion, Maggie, with her face wet and her lips trembling and her little arm linked tight in 'Lizabeth's, was looking imploringly up. A policeman, ranging the prisoners, told Maggie to go back and sit down, but Maggie only burst out more imploringly:

"Oh, please—please let my sister come home! She's never run with this kind of man before—she isn't like you think—my father and mother'll die if my sister has to go to jail."

Somebody rapped, and Maggie was silent, and the murmuring and glancing at papers went on between the Judge and the clerk. And then, quite suddenly, His Honor looked down again at Maggie, unsmilingly but very kindly, and Chess had to pay one hundred dollars' bail, and nobody else had to pay anything at all, and the charge against Elizabeth Johnson was dismissed.

Dismissed!

They were blundering toward the hall and street, between the almost empty brown wood benches, and the hinged brown wood gates, and the spittoons, under the harsh lights, when suddenly Joe Grant—only he wasn't Joe Grant any more!—came hurriedly in, with an important-looking sergeant of police, and came up to them.

"Everything all right?" Joe said anxiously and quickly, looking keenly at Maggie.

"Thank you, yes. It was a mistake. We're just goin' home."

"Quite a fam'ly party," said Chess Rivers sneeringly, coming up.

And then the nightmare began again—Maggie could never remember exactly how. 'Lizabeth turned on Chess and told him that never as long as she lived would she go out again with a man who was a bootlegger, and blamed it on the girls who went with him, and Chess said something quick and ugly about the Johnsons not being able to put on airs with Maggie Johnson running around the way she did with a millionaire—Chess had recognized Joe that very first day, at the cottage, because he used to see Joe at the boxing matches.

Then Chess was lying on the dirty marble floor, with blood on his cheek, and Joe was looking quite tall and calm and proud, but a little breathless, with two policemen holding him. And as Chess, still shouting, got to his feet, Joe jerked loose and sent him spinning again, and that time the policemen gripped Joe again and walked him away, and a third policeman began to shove Chess roughly out of the room. The clerk took the Johnsons out thru a big greasy swinging door, and they were in the dark street again.

All a nightmare. All a nightmare. And yet, as the endless night wore by, she began to be afraid she would never wake up.

They got home, somehow—partly walking, partly in a street car. And they sat in the kitchen, and Maggie made tea.

"Maggie, for goodness' sake, how did you feel when you learned that your friend was really Joe Merrill? I never will get that straight," said Liz.

"Oh, all right."

"Maggie, if you get him we're fixed for life," Liz said eagerly.

"I won't," she assured her sister.

"Maggie—why do you act so funny about it? As far as my shaming you to-night goes, why, I didn't do anything that all the girls of his crowd aren't doing every day!" Liz pleaded eagerly. "And if he makes that an excuse for breaking his engagement—"

"I'll sue him," said Ma heavily. "Here in this kitchen he sat, last Sunday afternoon, and tole me with his own mouth——"

"You don't have to sue him!" Liz said. "He's crazy about her. Isn't he, Maggie?"

"I wasn't listening, Ma. I'm sorry, Liz, but I'm going to bed."

"I'm going to sit up with Ma," said 'Lizabeth. Their topic was good for several more hours of exclamation, analysis, and debate.

Mrs. Johnson and her oldest daughter slept late the next morning. They reached the kitchen together at about ten o'clock, having had not more than five hours of rest, and began at once on the leisurely breakfast that Maggie, as usual had left ready to heat. There were cups on the table, and coffee in the pot, and bread was sliced; there was a fat little bottle of cream, and Maggie had left half the mixture of an omelette waiting in a yellow bowl.

'Lizabeth was the one who first found time to pick up the newspaper, and her involuntarily horrified, "Oh, God!" caused her mother, startled, to join her at the stove. They read it together.

It was all there. Joseph Merrill's picture on the front page, was embellished, in a rococo border, with a sketch representing two silhouetted youths fighting in a courtroom, with horrified women fleeing in every direction.

"It'll just about kill Maggie!" said 'Lizabeth, aghast.

"Go on readin', Liz."

"'. . . young Merrill, who, as far as could be ascertained, has been masquerading, since his departure from college, as a day loborer, and who, according to reports, has acquired an enviable acquaintance with the city's underworld, was detained without bail and spent the night in the city jail. At an early hour this morning, efforts to reach his father at the country place at Elmingdale were met with the continued on page four column three . . .'" 'Lizabeth read rapidly.

And suddenly, in their midst, was Pop. He had come home for his early Saturday lunch; he was as shocked as themselves.

"Where's Maggie?" he asked apprehensively. "Did she see the paper?"

"She's at the store, of course," Ma answered disapprovingly.

"The store was closed to-day. They are puttin' in the automat. She must—" Pa said vaguely—"she must of went out!"

"Maggie wouldn't never do anything—des'prit—" 'Lizabeth was beginning, when Maggie herself came in.

She came in quietly, through the kitchen door, and stood looking at them as if she were surprised to find them all together. Her plain little new suit was brushed and trim—the homespun upon which Maggie's heart had been set for weeks before she really dared to spend the necessary dollars on it. Her cheeks were red, but her beautiful eyes looked tired and were set in delicate shadows.

"Fevven's stakes, where've you been? You had Ma and me worried," 'Lizabeth said.

"Well," Maggie explained quietly, "I went to see Mrs. Merrill."

"What'j' do that for?" demanded the mother.

"There was something I wanted to talk to her about, Ma," Maggie said wearily.

"What?" The question was shot, like a bullet.

"Joe," the girl said simply. And she sat down at the table and leaned her forehead wearily on her hand.

"You never had the gall to do that, Maggie Johnson," 'Lizabeth whispered, impressed.

"Oh, yes, I did. I told her where Joe was, and they sent over to the jail, and Joe came in while I was there. And him and his fath r and mother and me talked it all over."

"Maggie!" It was the older sister. "Don't he like you any more?"

"He says he loves me," she said dully.

"Oh, Maggie—fevven's sakes! Joe Merrill!"

"And because he loves me," Maggie said deliberately, "he's going to sail this morning for Japan. He sees that he'd only hurt me and make it harder here."

Her shamed, hopeless voice died away.

"So I guess I'd better do these dishes," she said.

"He'll forget you before he's past the Heads!" her mother predicted in the awful silence that followed.

"You can't depend on them rich people, dearie," her father, sorrowful and sympathetic, said timidly.

"Maggie, they just got him to say he'd do that so's to break it off!" 'Lizabeth said indignantly.

Maggie looked at them all apathetically. "I know all that. I know he loves me now, but that they're going to kill it, if they can. I know his ship pulls out in twenty minutes and that I'll never see him again," she said simply. "But—" she glanced from one to the other—"with things here like they are," she said, "and Ma like she is, and Pa like he is, and you like you are, Liz—what can I do? I've worked, I've tried to make myself look good, and I've gone to night school, and I've lived the ideal life—but it doesn't seem to work, for me. If Joe had been what I thought he was, we could have climbed up together. But he wasn't, and I guess his mother's right—I guess the time is coming when he'll think of me as only a girl he knew whose mother wasn't very strong, and whose father was a postman, and whose sister ran with a bootlegger that got us all pretty nearly into jail!"

She did not cry, she spoke evenly and gently, almost without expression. But at the finish she reached up suddenly to the shelf above the sink, and snatched from its position the ideal leaflet, with its cryptic mesasge: "The way to begin living the ideal life is—to begin."

Maggie looked at it a minute, and her face worked oddly. Then, quite quietly and composedly, she tore it into tiny scraps and fluttered them into the wet sink. And after that she walked slowly from the room, and they heard her bedroom door close behind her.

A LETTER IN MEMORY OF MRS. A. J. TYUS

On the 13th day of the present month death came to the home of Mr. A. J. Tyus and claimed as its victim his wife, Mrs. Maggie Tyus. The age of the deceased was 45 years, 4 months and 16 days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Culp. She leaves to mourn her going a husband, A. J. Tyus, seven sons, Julius, Preston, Lewis, Nuel, Bert, Willie and Ben; one daughter, Mary Elizabeth; a mother, Mrs. C. M. Culp, two brothers, A. J. and J. O. Culp; two sister, Mrs. G. W. Mullins and Mrs. I. B. Yeargan, besides a host of relatives and friends.

She was a member of the Mt. Pisgah church, joining early in life, and holding steadfastly to her profession. She will be missed in the church and in the community. But most of all in the home where the husband will be lonely, and the hearts of the children will be yearning for mother's presence and mother love, with only the pleasant thoughts of the past reflecting in their minds.

Mr. Tyus has the sincere sympathy of the many friends of the family, and we commend them to God, who alone can comfort them in their sad bereavement.

A FRIEND.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

Whereas, default was made in the payment of the indebtedness secured by that certain mortgage, executed on the 10th day of March, 1927, by W. S. Peeples and wife, Lue Peeples, to A. Latham, which mortgage is recorded in the office of the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama, in Book 229 of Mortgages, at Page 213, and which mortgage was to secure an indebtedness of One Hundred and Forty Two and 78-100 Dollars, ($142.78), which was evidenced by one prommisory waive note bearing even date with said mortgage, for said sum and due and payable on October 20, 1927, and which mortgage conveyed, as security for said indebtedness, the following described real estate, situated in Chilton County, Alabama, to-wit:

"One block of land beginning at the Southeast corner of the Southwest Quarter of Section Twenty Three, Township Twenty Three, Range Thirteen, thence north to the corner of Y. O. Freeman's Lot, thence west to the Randolph and Jemison public road, tehnce in a Southwesterly direction along said road to the section line between section 22 and section 23, thence East to the point of beginning being in all three (3) acres, more or less, and known as the 'B. M. Gentry place'."

Now, therefore, the undersigned mortgagee, in said mortgage, will, on Monday, April 13, 1931, during the legal hours of sale, in front of the Courthouse door of Chilton County, Alabama, and in the town of Clanton, offer for sale to the highest and best bidder, for cash, the above described property conveyed in said mortgage for the purpose of paying the indebtedness secured by same, the expenses of the sale, including a reasonable attorney's fee, and the remainder of the proceeds of said sale, if any, to be turned over to the mortgagors as provided by law.

This the 14th day of March, 1931.

Field Day Here Is Successful

High, Verbena High, Mount Pleasant, and Enterprise. Chilton High School was represented in a remarkable spelling way by Miss Nell Neighbors. Verbena was represented by Miss Edna DuBose. Mount Pleasant by Renfroe Price, and Enterprise by Miss Vivian Silas. These four champion school spellers stood the gaff of the steady flow of words pronounced by a most competent person, until Miss Neighbors was the first to misspell a word of the four. Then Miss Silas for Enterprise fell before the constant flow of adjectives, nouns, verbs, etc Miss DuBose for Verbena and Renfroe Price for Mount Pleasant remained and received in rapid fire, words taken from a difficult group, spelling them correctly until Price for Mount Pleasant met defeat with a complicated word hurled at him. Miss DuBose won the county championship for Verbena. These two spellers will go to Jacksonville to take part in the district contest to be held there in the near future.

Much credit for the succes of this Field Day is due to Buford Lawrence, superintendent of education, Mrs. C. E. Stapp, welfare superintendent, I. J Quinn, principal of the Clanton Grammar school, Prof. L. C. Warr, principal of the local high school, Miss Madge Scarborough, elementary supervisor, C E. Stapp, county agent, and others who gave their utniring efforts in the behalf of the program

The class rooms and hall of the high school were flanked on every wall by exhibits from thirty-three classes of county schools. These exhibits were made up from art work, needle work, from home economics classes, drawings of maps, and mechanical projects, drawings from biology classes, manual art pieces, pastry, writings, etc. The following schools had exhibits:

Clanton Grammar School: Art display. Hand paintings, drawings, writings. Fifth and Sixth grades had a most interesting and well arranged exhibit showing articles and products manufactured in and near Clanton, and an attractive arrangement of articles showing medieval methods of warfare.

Jemison Elementary School Needle work from girls class Art work. Geography studies, and an original book of poems.

Isabella Elementary Grades: Art and writings.

Thorsby Elementary Grades: Art work and geographic drawings.

Verbena Elementary Grades: Art work and geographic drawings.

Pates Chapel: A most attractive display in the hall of the building showing art work and drawings of geographic nature neatly arranged.

Mitchell Dam: Art work, drawings of various kinds, and a model of a modern home. Attractively arranged.

Enterprise Junior High: Showing art works and geographic drawings.

Chilton County High Junior Grades: A very attractive display of neat art work, mechanical drawings and geographic work.

Collins Chapel: A very niee arrangement of complicated drawings of mechanical nature. Art work and history of that community well written.

Jemison Junior High: Neatly arranged display of needle work from home economics class.

Mount Pleasant Junior High School: A display of art work, spelling, needlework, and geographic drawings.

Thorsby Junior High School: Art work and drawings of different natures.

Manual Arts Class, C. C. H. S.: A very wide and attractive display of many useful articles of furniture and handy materials showing competent instructing and attentive workmanship.

Biology Class, C. C. H. S. A most attractive exhibit showing drawings from this class on items of interest in their works. Drawings enlarged from actual size of subject.

Pinedale School: Art work and drawings.

Lay Dam School: Art and picture work

Pilgrims Rest: Art and other drawings.

Cross Roads: Art work and story writing.

Chestnut Grove: Art work and special lettering

Collins Chapel: Art work, writings, and neat wood work.

Union Grove: Geographical work, art work, and drawings of various natures.

Baker Junior High: Neatly arranged display of needlework, art work and drawings.

Concord Junior High: Attractive drawings, art work, maps.

Thomas Jr. High: Work on books, art work and writings.

Isabella Home Ec. Class: Some very fine needle work, dresses, and pastry.

Home Ec. Class C. C. H. S.: Dresses, and other work.

Jemison Home Ec. Class: Dresses, and other needle work.

Isabella Vocational Class: A well constructed miniature modern farm and farm home.

Verbena First Year Home Ec. Class: Dresses and other needle work.

Isabella Sr. High: Essays on various poems and papers. Letters.

During the day's activities the members of the Senior Class of the local high school operated stands, selling sandwiches and drinks for the benefit of the athletics at the high school.

Contests and races of various kinds were carried out for the boys and girls. The News was unable to secure the results on all the contests.

In the running broad jump for boys, Ratliff representing Isabella won with a measure of 17 feet and 12 inches. Glasscock for Jemison followed second with 17 feet, 11½ inches.

In the running high jump, McMurray for Clanton and Traywick for Mt. Pleasant tied with a jump of five feet and ten inches.

In the Junior contest, for boys under 110 pounds weight, the high jump was a tie between Hilton Crickett of Verbena and Horace Gray of Enterprise. In the broad jump Charles Retherford for Union Grove came in first, followed by Milton Hughes for Verbena, second.

One of the features of the Isabella Exhibit was a small newspaper, "The Raveloe Herald," published by the Senior I Class under the direction of Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin.

RESULTS OF THE EVENTS FOR GIRLS

Ed Goodgame was carried to the Central Alabama Hospital late Monday afternoon from an auto accident which occurred on the old Thorsby highway, just north of Clanton. Seems from the information gathered that Goodgame and T. E. Carlton were returning to town and missed the bridge that spans the small creek, their car running off the road and overturning. Latest reports stated that Goodgame is all right again, and Carlton was not injured.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Fiddlers To Convene In County Soon

April 3, beginning at 7:30.

Many requests have come from fiddlers and others that this convention be held, and many have been the requests as to when it would "come off." In the past there have been capacity numbers of fiddlers and capacity houses. This year, hard times or not, the same is expected, as the additional prestige the Verbena conventions have gained from year to year have an added advertising force and this year the attraction promises to be even bigger and better than ever. Fiddlers had best be practicing away, as with added years to some who have competed in the past and the interest in fiddling pioneered in this section by Verbena has produced a much better class of music. Remember the date—Friday, April 3.

Further announcement will be made through the local papers next week, and posters will be distributed. Fiddlers, tell your friends. Friends, tell the fiddlers. Let's get ready to drive Old Man Depression and Poor Spirits from the country on the night of April 3. There is more good feeling and more good time in the music and mingling of fiddlers and folks on such occasions than "depression" can stand. So "good times are coming" they are just around the corner of April—and on the night of the third we will be at Verbena and help rout old depression. 1931 style prices will prevail for admission.

Eastview News

The Death Angle visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Griffith and took away their loving little girl. Death came last Thursday at 10 a.m. after only a few hours of illness. Mr. Griffith and family lived two years here and are members of the Congregational church here. He moved to Birmingham last fall, where they are still living. The little girl was only about eight years old, when it pleased God to say to her, come up higher. Her body was brought to Eastview for burial. She was laid to rest Saturday at 10 a.m. Rev. George Watson officiated. He was assisted by Rev. A. C. Nelson. She leaves to mourn her loss a father and mother, five brothers and one sister, and a host of relatives and friends.

Miss Dora Brackin, Sunday school extension worker, who is spending this week with the Mt. Springs church, will be here Sunday night and give us a talk on Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work. Everybody is invited to attend.

Mr. J. A. Dobbs and Mr. Joe Dennis made a business trip to Clanton Saturday.

Mr. Abner Cox and family were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Nelson Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mims had for their guests Friday night Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Mims and Rev. A. C. Nelson and Mr. S. P. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Rushing had for their Saturday dinner guest Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Henson and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Rushing.

Rev. George Watson was the Saturday dinner guest of Mr. J. W. Nelson.

Don't forget to come to Sunday School next Sunday.

There will be a singing here next Sunday evening. Come and bring your song books.

Mrs. A. C. Nelson, who has been sick for a long time is able to sit up some this week.

Largest Tire In World To Visit Chilton County

That intense interest will be aroused is a foregone conclusion, as this gigantic tire, an outstanding curiosity, has been an awe-inspiring spectacle wherever it has been shown.

"This massive tire, which has traveled thousands of miles, visiting various sections of the United States and Canada, has been an object of wonderment. It measures twelve feet in height and four feet in width, and the total weight of the tire and yoke is 3,900 pounds, just a fraction under two tons," said Mr. Dief.

"This tire was built by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Akron, O., in line with the company's policy of pioneering and research, through which have come many of the most important developments in the tire industry. The longer folks look at it the more interested they become.

"A well-known airplane manufacturer, while focussing his attention on the unique exhibit, remarked that the day was not far distant when planes of huge type would demand tires of the size of the one to be exhibited in our city.

"This great tire was not built in a day, or a week, or a month. Three months' time was required to construct the rubber giant, which is, except for size, an exact replica of the regular Goodyear All-Weather tread Supertwist Cord tire, the measurements being in exact ratio to measurements and manufacture of the regular size tire.

"Air? Yes, plenty of it is necessary for this mammoth casing. Forty-five minutes times is required for inflation to a pressure of three pounds.

"The tire is attached to a specially constructed bus by two shafts extending from the chassis."

ROAD MEETING HERE THURSDAY WAS A SUCCESS

Many Prominent Delegates Here From Six Counties, And From Georgia

What was possibly one of the most representative meetings held in Clanton in some time was held at the courthouse last Thursday for the purpose of organizing an association to promote the early paving of an important highway route from the Georgia line, near Piedmont, Alabama that also runs thru Anniston, Columbiana, Calera, Clanton, Maplesville, Plantersville, Selma, and on to Mobile. A large part of this route through the state is already paved and steps are to be taken, according to this meeting, to get the remainder of the route paved.

The meeting was opened with an election for a temporary chairman and secretary. Judge L. H. Reynolds was named as temporary chairman with H. H. Frazier, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Selma, as temporary secretary.

It was found that the following counties in Alabama were well represented at this meeting by men of high standing: Dallas, Shelby, Chilton, Talladega, and Calhoun, with representatives from Cedartown, Ga., which is just across the state line from Piedmont, Alabama. There were sixty-two visiting delegates from out of the county at the meeting.

AMON JONES AND MISS VELMA MIMS MARRIED LAST SATURDAY

Bringing together two well known families of this county took place last Saturday night, when Miss Velma Mims became the bride of Amon Jones. The ceremony was performed at the home of the Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the Thorsby Baptist church, in Thorsby, Ala., in the presence of a few intimate friends of the popular couple.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Victoria Mims of Clanton and her friends over the county are countless. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Jones of Clanton, and is connected with the Farmers Hardware Company of this place, and a graduate of the Chilton County High School. The News is delighted to join in with the many friends of this young couple in wishing them much happiness.

COOPER SCHOOL DAMAGED BY FIRE THURSDAY AFTERNOON

The school building at Cooper, Alabama was damaged considerably last Thursday afternoon by fire. Origin of the blaze has not been determined according to information given the News. One corner of the wooden structure, near the library was almost consumed by the flames, it was stated. School had not been dismissed very long when the fire was discovered and several of the young men students did some fine work in extinguishing the flames before they could make any headway.

Jemison O. E. S. Will Give Manless Wedding

The Jemisonian Chapter No. 398, Order of The Eastern Star, will put on a "Manless" Wedding at the Jemison High School Auditorium on the night of April 3rd, according to an announcement sent to the News this week.

This presentation bids fair to be one that will bring forth laughs where none have appeared, but where possible. Those taking part in the wedding, where no man will be allowed, are of the members of the Jemisonian Chapter O. E. S. A complete list of characters will be carried in next week's issue of the News. Admission will be ten and twenty cents.

CHILTON WON THIRD PLACE IN DIST. CONTEST

Miss Helen DuBose and Renfroe Price Represent Co. In Spelling Bee

Proving that Chilton County has some exceptionally fine spellers in its schools, Miss Helen DuBose, age 14, and a student of the Verbena High School, and Renfroe Price, age 15, of the Mount Pleasant school, took third place in the district spelling contest held last Saturday in Jacksonville, Ala., at the State Teachers College.

These two students named above were winners in the county-wide contest held at the high school on Field Day, March 13th. Those going to Jacksonville from this county to witness the district contest were the ones representing Chilton County in the contest, Miss Madge Scarborough, Miss Mae Wibel of Verbena and Robert B. Johnson, principal of the Mount Pleasant School. This party was entertained during their stay in Jacksonville, by the college.

One of the outstanding points shown in the representation of Chilton County by Miss DuBose and Mr. Price was the fact that they were the only two from any one county who were able to stand up as long as they did, and they are to be highly congratulated on the splendid record they have made for themselves, and Chilton County is justly proud of them.

Anniston City School won first place in the contest, with Talladega County taking second place.

1930 COTTON CROP LARGEST IN 15 YEARS

Total Of 22,507 Bales Ginned In Chilton County Shows Large Increase

There were 22,507 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County from the 1930 crop as compared with 18,794 bales ginned from the 1929 crop, according to Robert J. Jones, of Clanton, who looks after the accounting of the number of bales ginned in this county. This shows an increase of three thousand, five hundred and thirty-three bales over the crop of 1929, and possibly one of the major reasons for the extremely low price of this product as is in evidence at this time, and should be a warning to the farmers in their plans for planting crops for 1931.

According to Mr. Jones, this figure of the number of bales ginned in this county from the crop of 1930 is the largest given out in the past fifteen years, during which time Mr. Jones has had charge of this work.

It could no doubt be said that the price of cotton at this time is perhaps the lowest experienced in quite a number of years also. Seems as the conditions are that the more cotton, the smaller the price.

BIG GOODYEAR TIRE DELAYED FOR ONE DAY

Due to Some Kind of Trouble World's Largest Tire To Arrive Friday

The world's largest tire was scheduled to be in Chilton County today, stopping at the Howard's Garage at ten o'clock this morning, at Verbena, Alabama, and then on to Clanton, Thorsby and Jemison, and Maplesville, but due to some misfortune in schedules, the tire will not arrive as was stated in last week's issue of the News, according to the arrangements announced at that time by the Goodyear Company.

The tire was to arrive, according to the company's schedule, in Clanton this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock and remain until ten o'clock tomorrow morning. This schedule has been moved up one day, and the tire will arrive in Verbena at Howard's Garage at ten o'clock Friday morning and in Clanton at Dief's Service Station at 4:45 Friday afternoon and remain over until Saturday morning at ten o'clock.

4-H CLUBS TO GATHER HERE NEXT TUESDAY

All Four-H Club Boys In The County Expected Here for Annual Get-Together

The annual rally day for all the 4-H Club Boys of Chilton County will be held in Clanton next Tuesday. The meeting will be held at the Baptist Church, the program starting at 9:30 o'clock, and ending at 2 p.m.

Last year a little over 350 boys attended the rally day, and County Agent Stapp expects at least that many, and perhaps more to be here Tuesday. All club boys of the county have been notified of the plans for the meeting, and everyone of them is urged to come.

Mr. Stapp says he has not been able to perfect organizations of the boys in all communities. Boyes in those communities which have not been organized are urged to come to the rally just the same. Mr. Stapp will finish the organization in all communities on next Tuesday while the boys are here.

Following are the communities which have been organized and the officers of each of the clubs:

COMING EVENTS TO BE SPONSORED BY KIWANIS

Series of Entertainments Will Be Given Under Auspices Of Local Service Club

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton announces a series of coming events in which some extraordinary amusement events will be offered to the public under the auspices of the Club.

The first of the series will be, "The Long Journey," Friday night of this week. This is a picture showing the work of the clinic for cripple children in Birmingham. It will be shown free at the Wadesonian Theatre, beginning at seven o'clock. The public is invited and urged to see this picture. After the cripple childrens picture the regular picture show program will be shown.

On April 13, 14, and 15 the Kiwanis Club will offer another great feature picture, "Just Imagine." This picture shows an imaginary description of the world fifty years from now. It has been seen by a number of Clanton people, and they declare it is the greatest wonder of the year.

On April 24th, the members of the Kiwanis Club will put on a negro minstrel at the County High School auditorium. This will be more fun than a barrel of monkeys.

"The Birth of a Nation," in a sound picture, is booked for a date sometime in May.

Beauty Specialist Is In Clanton This Week

Those ladies of this section who are careful of the appearance of their complexions now have the opportunity to have their individual analysis of the skin made by one who is well up on her profession of skin analysis. This specialist, Miss Jeanne Chadwell, is now at the DeMabel's Beauty Shoppe in Clanton, and will be here all this week.

Miss Chadwell is from the Luzier Laboratories of Kansas City, Mo. She will examine the skin, show you the analysis of its needs, and from that chart will be prepared a special cream, or lotion to suit any individual. This method of beauty care, it was stated, is much more satisfactory than using a standard formula cream or lotion. The analysis is sent to the laboratories where the proper cream is prepared for the individual. Miss Chadwell is not demonstrating any particular make of beauty treatments, but is merely giving advice on the care, etc. Miss Mabel Howard and Miss Chadwell invite the ladies of this section to come and have this analysis made at no cost. Miss Chadwell will return at regular intervals to Clanton, to consult with those who take advantage of her advice.

Jury Commission Is Named For Chilton

Governor B. M. Miller announced last week the members of the Jury Commission of Chilton County. These members are M. A. Gore, Clanton; Dr. N. S. Johnson, Clanton, and John W. Foshee, Maplesville, Alabama.

These men are widely known thruout this section, being prominent in the public and business life of this county for a number of years. Governor Miller shows great care in selecting the men for such offices and his selection for the members of the Chilton County Jury Commission proves without a doubt that he knew his men in this county as men fully capable of carrying on the duties of such commission in a most straightforward manner.

NEWS WILL GIVE READERS STORY ON WORLD WAR

Gen. Pershing To Tell of His Experiences In Story To Begin In The News

Again the News takes a step forward and brings to the people of Chilton County and all its readers a story that the public has been eagerly waiting for. It is the actual story by General John J. Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the A. E. F., telling of his experiences during the World War

After a silence of more than twelve years, General Pershing speaks. With amazing frankness he tells the straightforward story of the American Army's participation in the World War. In sincere directness and unadorned truth: in bearing upon widely controverted points and in force and importance of its disclosures, it is the most sensational story that has come out of the great conflict. The title of this story is "My Experiences in the World War."

It has been said that large metropolitan newspapers paid as high as $75,000.00 for this same story, and now the News is able to give it to its readers. If you are not a regular subscriber and get the News each week, then you should begin at once, and get this thrilling story of the World War, told by the man in command of the American Army, the man who saw the fight from beginning to end.

This story will begin in the News on April 9th, and run serially, each installment carrying with it, actual photographs of scenes and persons figuring in that great conflict between the nations. Be sure to get the first installment of this great narrative, and keep up with the experiences of General Pershing during the war.

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS

fertilizers

"Grandpa was right..."

"GRANDPA was right about V-C," says the youngster just learning to check by results. And the youngster himself is right, for the V-C fertilizer of today is as dependable, as reliable, as trustworthy in every way as the V-C fertilizer of Grandpa's own boyhood—it's got to be! V-C's good name must be KEPT good.

Behind the results are their safeguards: years of successful experience in the making of fertilizers—laboratories that stay busy at the planning of better results—factories where watchful supervision insures accuracy in the finished goods—sales offices that are always ready for prompt and hearty service—and finally, our V-C agricultural service bureau, yours to command. These are the things that protect the results that the youngster checks . . . Grandpa WAS right about V-C!

"If a man fails to produce high crop yields, he fails in everything else," says a writer in The Country Gentleman.

There is little hope that prices for farm products can be pushed up. There is little hope that total production can be cut down. But there is a lot of hope that the unit cost of growing a bale or a bushel or a pound of yield can be lowered, and this will leave more room for profit. V-C fertilizers help in the lowering of unit cost.

"When an unwieldy surplus burdens the market, the crop must sell for whatever the cheapest user will pay." —Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture.

Over 3,000 industrial products—many of them from former waste—are now being manufactured from the yields of farming. And chemists are still at work to discover more uses.

The right use of good fertilizers offers the best possibilities of any investment the farmer is ordinarily called upon to make.*—The Ohio Farmer.

Any manufacturer would go broke if he paid no attention to market demand and no attention to cost of production, but went ahead anyway, manufacturing the full capacity of his plant and shipping the whole output somewhere to be sold on the open market to the highest bidder. Of course he would go broke! Who wouldn't?

"Farm real estate is now a highly attractive investment."* — Renick W. Dunlap, Asst. Secy. of Agriculture.

"The banker, the time merchant, the fertilizer dealer and the farmer should cooperate in producing the best crop at the least cost. All these have a common interest and a common obligation."—Governor Max Gardner of North Carolina.

R. H. Woodward has sold V-C fertilizers at Talladega, Ala., continuously since the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corporation was organized. "And the tonnage has increased every year," says Mr. Woodward, who sees four reasons for the increase: uniformly high standard of V-C fertilizers, efficiency of the company's representatives, farmers' good will toward V-C, and confidence on his own part in the goods and in his customers.

High yields per acre, economically obtained, form the basis of low-cost production.* — Alabama Experiment Station.

Thirty-one years ago W. D. Farrar became the V-C dealer at Canoe, Ala., and began using V-C fertilizers on his own farm. "Perfect satisfaction," Mr. Farrar reports, as to V-C on his own and his tenants' farms and on the farms of his many customers.

In the great majority of cases the applications of fertilizers are too small to produce the maximum profit from their use. —U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

Using 1,000 pounds per acre of V-C Prolific Tobacco Grower, S. R. Moore of Pinetops, N. C., gathered 5,902 pounds from five acres and sold the crop for $2,014 —an average of 34 cents a pound.

The practice of stinting in the use of fertilizers when crop prices are low seems to be the very opposite from economical. The only possibility of maintaining profits is by reducing costs. The increased yield per acre resulting from proper fertilization considerably more than offsets the cost of fertilizer.—The Guaranty Survey.

The individual farmer can exercise little or no influence over crop prices, but he controls production costs—and costs affect profit just as directly as prices.— The Guaranty Survey.

Hector Supply Co., Miami, Fla., has sold V-C fertilizers to the discriminating planters of the Miami district for 17 years or more, continuously and exclusively. "And our sales of V-C have increased each year," says H. H. Hector, president of the company. "Many satisfied growers in this territory have used V-C fertilizers ever since we started handling the line."

If you scatter your crop, you scatter your profit. Don't scatter. Concentrate on the good acres, farm them well with plenty of V-C fertilizer, grow heavy yield at less cost. Use the other acres to grow everything else you need for living at home.

"We have noticed that the farmer who uses V-C is the one who hauls the most cotton to the gin. We have one customer who made 12 bales of cotton on a one-horse crop, with V-C; and another who made 20 bales of cotton and 400 bushels of corn on a two-horse crop. The majority of our customers won't use anything but V-C."—Winston Gin Co., Haleyville, Ala.

When our boys assume the mortgage on the land that's had our toil, they'll not have to ask the question, "Here's the farm, but where's the soil?"—National Fertilizer Assn.

There's money in farming—but the men who make it are the men who farm good land right. With V-C fertilizer, for instance.

Demand V-C, insist on V-C, buy and use no other fertilizer but "old reliable" V-C.

A BIG TRADE BATTLE

One of the most spectacular trade battles of 1931 will be waged among manufacturers of electric refrigerators, according to a business magazine, that discusses the intensive advertising and sales campaigns now under way or planned for the coming summer.

A million new units in American homes this year is the goal of a drive by a national association of electric companies, and all the leading manufacturers, as well as some newcomers in the field, are arranging sales and advertising schedules to obtain a share of the new business which is expected to be created.

Besides the campaign for more home refrigeration, the possibilities of extending commercial use of cooling equipment will be developed intensively. Water cooling systems for office buildings and industrial plants, automatic refrigeration for railroad cars, motor trucks, business houses and a variety of other uses are expected to swell the industry's total output enormously

All signs point to a hot battle over a cold proposition.

New Trial To Be Asked For Burns

Birmingham, Ala., March 24.—A new trial will be asked for E. J. Burns, who was given 25 years in the penitentiary by a jury in Judge H. P. Heflin's court for the slaying of Dr. W. H. Godwin, attorneys for the former real estate man declared Monday.

If the new trial is not granted the case will be appealed to the higher courts, counsel said.

The defense was given until April 4 to make their motion or file notice of appeal following announcement of the jury's verdict before Judge Heflin.

Burns, back in his cell at the county jail, where he has been confined since his arrest the day after the killing, January 6, refused to comment on the verdict.

Dr. Godwin was slain in a negro house in East Thomas, where he had been called by telephone, ostensibly to minister to a sick woman.

Charlie E. Burns, brother of E. J. Burns, and Clifford Ogletree, negro, also are under indictments in connection with the slaying.

UNEXPECTED FARM AID

Good news for American cotton farmers has recently come from an unexpected source. And it is from a most potent and authoritative source at that —the world's fashion headquarters—Paris.

An association of cotton manufacturers engaged in promoting a greater use of the South's fleecy staple has just issued a bulletin which contains the following:

"Paris is featuring cotton this season as never before. The French people, although they do not produce a single pound of cotton within their own country are nevertheless the greatest friends of the American cotton growers today.

"They recognize the inherent beauty and serviceability of our great product and lead the world in featuring cotton dresses. Following the lead of Paris, prominent dress manufacturers and department stores in America are also featuring cotton."

Continuing the statement declares that cotton has thus come to public attention as never before, having been modernized in new weaves, textures and designs.

So, with cotton again in style and recognized as the most durable of textile fabrics, certainly the well-dressed woman should not hesitate to wear it. Style shows featuring cotton are being organized in many cities, and the new and finer fabrics now available are receiving enthusiastic acceptance.

Thus it appears that the fashion authorities of Paris may prove to be a greater aid to the cotton farmers of the South than any of the other agencies which have been set up for their relief.

Alabama To Get Fund For Rivers

Notice from the War Department that $530,000 was made available by Congress for river and harbor maintenance and improvement work in the Montgomery district, including a major portion of Alabama, the Western arm of Florida and a part of Georgia, was received yesterday by Maj. R. A. Sherrer, U. S. district engineer.

The major appropriation, $200,000 will be expended on construction of an intercoastal canal between Pensacola Bay and Mobile Bay.

Other appropriations were: Apalachicola Bay, Florida, $22,500; Flint River, Georga, $48,500; Andrews Bay, Florida, $45,000; Narrows in Santa Rosa Sound, Florida, $3,500; Choctowhatchee River, Alabama and Florida, $11,000; Pensacola Harbor, Florida, $36,000; Alabama River, $154,000 and general contingent fund, $10,000.

Maj. Sherrer said the appropriations did not cover the entire fund to be expended in Alabama, as allotments for the Mobile and Chattanooga Districts were not available here.

The $154,000 appropriation for the Alabama River will be expended largely for contraction work a point 50 miles below Selma to the River's mouth. This work consists of building spur dykes perpendicular to the river bank, causing the stream to flow in a more narrow channel.

PENSION WARRANTS FOR CONFEDERATES MAILED OUT

Pension warrants totaling $373,380 for the quarter beginning April 1, were mailed out yesterday by State Auditor Brandon to the probate judges of the respective counties for distribution to the 5,070 pensioners whose names appear on the State's pension rolls.

Of these 985 are Confederate veterans, the remainder being widows of Confederate veterans. For the quarter now drawing to a close the amount disbursed in pensions was $385,605.

SOME NEW BEVERAGES WITH GRAPEFRUIT AND ORANGES

By ROGER CRETAUX
Chef, The Roosevelt, New York City

MORE and more the orange is coming to be considered primarily a juice fruit, particularly desirable in the preparation of refreshing and healthful beverages. The grapefruit, too, is now coming to many tables in the form of juice, for breakfast eye-openers, or for luncheon and dinner cocktails. No doubt one reason for the popularity of juice is that breakfast is not a leisurely meal for most of us. An orange or a grapefruit can be drunk quicker than it can be eaten.

Roger Cretaux

Hasty breakfasts, of course, are never to be recommended, but one of the neatest and most nourishing quick breakfasts that can be suggested for the commuter, who measures his breakfast time in terms of seconds, is a combination of orange juice and raw egg beaten up, with a pinch of salt, and sweetened with sugar if desired.

To lend variety to citrus fruit beverages, particularly those served at luncheon, dinner, or more formal occasions, ice cream, honey, plain cream, maple syrup, coffee, sherbet, or eggs, may be used to enhance flavors or give more substance to the liquid. To retain the full flavor and subtle aroma of orange and grapefruit in citrus beverages, the juices should be extracted shortly before serving.

Orange Frost

Fill a tall glass one-fourth full of cracked ice. Pour over this orange juice to within one inch of top. Frost the top with a spoonful of stiffly beaten egg white. Sweeten slightly and flavor with lime or grapefruit juice.

Florida Fizz

Juice of 6 oranges
Juice of 1 grapefruit
1 cup of sugar
3 eggs

Beat the eggs well, add fruit juices in which the sugar has been thoroughly dissolved. Shake with one cup of shaved ice until well frapped. Fill glasses three-fourths full and fill to top with chilled ginger ale, or carbonated water. (Six portions).

Frosted Orange Juice

To a large glass two-thirds full of orange juice add a large spoonful of vanilla ice cream or orange ice. Stir until partially dissolved and serve immediately. Grapefruit juice may be substituted for orange juice. This suggests itself for an afternoon drink.

Honey Orangeade

Mix orange juice and honey thoroughly, using two tablespoons of honey for each serving. For each portion add one cupful of chilled water in which the thin paring of an orange has been boiled. Pour mixture over crushed ice and allow to stand for several minutes before serving.

Iced Coffee With Orange

To four cupfuls of fresh, cold coffee, add a liquid that was made by boiling together one cup of water, one cup of sugar, and the thin parings of one or two oranges. Immediately before serving add juice of one or two oranges and a half cupful of rich cream. Serve in tall glasses with finely crushed ice.

Orange Cream

Blend together one cup of orange juice and the well beaten yolk of one egg. Stir in one-fourth cup of cream, sweeten with sugar or honey, and serve at once. Chill if desired.

Citrus Punch

1 pint grapefruit juice
1 pint orange juice
2 oz. clear honey
3 pints light ginger ale
Whites of 3 eggs
½ cup grenadine

Blend fruit juices with honey and grenadine. When ready to serve add the beaten egg whites and beat thoroughly into the mixture. Then add the ginger ale.

My Best Girl

BY

KATHLEEN NORRIS

FINAL INSTALLMENT

They could hear the rending, grinding sound of Maggie sobbing bitterly, deeply, as a child sobs and as if her heart would break.

The three exchanged glances, and presently 'Lizabeth said slowly: "It seems like we have the worst luck of any fam'ly in this city."

Her mother took the theme up readily.

Pop, up to this point, had been silent, as Pop generally was.

Now, suddenly, he rose to his feet and dashed to the ground the striped tea cloth he had been using as a napkin.

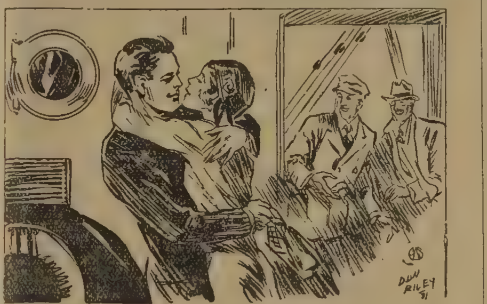
"Maggie!" he shouted.

Immediately she was in the kitchen.

"Maggie, we've had enough of this!" said Leonard Johnson, in a loud, authoritative voice. "I can't stand no more of it, and I ain't a-goin' to! You take that towel there and wash your eyes and fix your hair. And, Liz, you pack your sister some clothes! She's got seventeen minutes—if that clock's right—to catch the steamer, and she's goin' to catch it! She's goin' to get married on board to-day, or maybe in San Francisco or Los Angeles tomorrow or next day—you help her out there, Ma. Quick, now—while I 'phone for a taxi!"

"Len, are you crazy?" Ma began [illegible]. But Pop, crazy or not, was at least unafraid.

"You quit talking, Minnie," he said sharply, "and get up and stir yourself!" Pop said tenderly, solicitously, to Maggie, guiding her to the sink, switching on the cold water, the furious glare in his eyes as he looked at the other women in curious contrast to the gentleness of his voice when he addressed her. "In this envelope is my half-month's pay, dearie," he said.—"You kep your mouth closed, 'Lizabeth, till I give you leave to speak!" Pop interpolated fiercely— "and you can get yourself some clothes first place you stop. Hurry up there, Ma—the taxi's li'ble to get here any minute."



"Len—it seems like I'm going to faint," said Mrs. Johnson, pausing pathetically in the act of rushing Maggie's black silk dress and her new clothes into a suitcase and adding 'Lizabeth's best nightgown and the Chinese wrapper she herself had won at a fair.

"Well, you faint, then, but let-me get Maggie off first!" Len said briskly and heartlessly.

"Len, don't yell that way!" Ma said, weeping as she put on her black-veiled hat.

"And we ain't going to miss you, Maggie, and we ain't going to slump," Len interrupted the frightened chorus to say loudly. "Now, you come on out—put your gloves on in the taxi—we ain't got but fourteen minutes."

Laughing, crying, but always clinging tight to this newly found and amazing parent, Mary Margaret had only time to leave a hysterical good-bye with the dog, and the cat, and the beloved, despised, shabby kitchen, with its cooling coffee and congealing sausages and limp dish towels and greasy sink.

Then they were all four jammed into a taxi, and racketing through the Saturday morning streets, past the church, and the market, down the schoolhouse way—among the warehouses.

Their talk was incoherent—inconsequential—monosyllabic.

"Can he make it?"

"He says he doesn't know. Depends on the traffic on River Street."

"This ain't exactly an ideel weddin', dearie."

"Ah, don't, Pop, you'll make me cry!"

"Driver, we goin' to make it?"

"How much time have we—Lean forward there, Pop, and see can you see the clock at Rubenstein's?"

And then, down outside the big free-market, suddenly the agony of a halt.

An officer's imperative whistle and a blue-coated figure approaching.

But Ma, even though speechless, was not entirely without resources. She dismounted from the taxi, met the policeman, and as an interested little crowd gathered, and before that officer could speak, fainted from sheer emotion, heavily, into his arms.

"She's all right—go on," Pop said in an undertone.

Maggie sat back on the seat, holding Liz's hand, beginning to breathe again.

"Pop, can we make it?"

"We could, dearie, if nothing else happens," Pop was beginning doubtfully, when another whistle, this time a soothing long breath, as of relief, interrupted him, and the driver, muttering something unintelligible that sounded like a prayer, turned in to a curb, stopped the car, and uttered alone the single disgusted word, "Flat."

'Lizabeth Johnson had sprang from the machine, hailed another taxi, pushed her father and sister into it, and shouted feevrishly: "To the Allegria. Dock Seventeen. Quick, now! I'll stay here and pay this man, Pop," she said, hurrying them on. "Good-bye, Maggie darling, forgive me if I've been mean to you, and have a good time, and don't worry."

Then Maggie and her father were rushing on again; they had reached the piers at last, Pier Eleven, Pier Thirteen—still so far to go! And they could see the big clock saying that the hour had come and gone. It was three minutes past eleven.

Maggie turned deadly white, but she managed an agonized smile of reassurance for her father.

"That's all right, Pop. We did our best!"

"Maybe they didn't sail on the minute," said the new driver encouragingly. "I've seen 'em twenty minutes late!"

"Oh, go on, then—go on!" the girl said feverishly.

"I can't go no faster than this, lady!" the driver said, hurt. "There ain't many of these cars can jump over or under trucks, you know. You'd do better to take your little suitcase and run for it."

"Do that, Maggie!" said the newly authoritative and decisive man who was her father. "I'll stay with him, dear. Look out where you go—ah, God bless you, my darling!"

"God bless you—and thank you, Pop dearest!" she whispered.

Then Maggie was running—running like mad toward the big arched entrance that said, "Pier Seventeen." A baggage boy had caught her bag and coat, and was running along beside her.

"The Davenport Line, miss?"

"No—the Allegria!"

"Oh——" And his feet stopped, and hers, too, and they stared blankly at each other. "She's sailed, miss; she went out on time this morning," the boy said. "That's her—out there in the bay."

As in a dream, Maggie stood still, on the rough, splintery boards of the dock, and looked through the great arched opening, and saw the vessel, balanced like a beautiful great swan, not moving now, but far out o nthe blue water.

"The pilot's going to drop her any minute, now, miss. Ain't that a shame!" said the baggage boy sympathetically.

The girl did not stir. Her eyes were fixed on the Allegria, her hands clasped.

Somebody touched her arm, and she looked up and saw it was Joe's father. With him was Joe's mother; she had been crying, and his father's face looked grave, and his lashes were wet, too.

But Maggie did not cry. She gulped, and her wan little face twisted into a smile as she said simply:

"I was going with him. I couldn't—I couldn't bear it. But it seems— he's gone."

"You were going with him!" his father said, sharply.

"Here!" Where are the launches, boy?—Mayne's launches—they're somewhere around here! This girl and boy aren't going to be any use apart, Lilian," he said to his wife, smiling, yet blinking tears from his eyes. "Let 'em both go off to Japan and console each other!"

He was hurrying them along the dock and Maggie found her hands filled with big green bills from Joe's father, and found herself kissing him, and liking the firm, fatherly embrace, and—much more amazing!—received a perfumed, powdery, half-crying kiss from Joe's magnificent mother, too.

She was helped into a dancing little launch, the dirty surface of the water was bubbling close beside her. They were cleaving a straight track toward the big liner, and Maggie, leaning over toward it, was clapping her two hands over her head to attract its attention, to hold it one minute—one half minute more!

The pilot's tug was alongside, ready to cast off from the sheer great side of the steamer; a rope ladder dangled from the high steerage deck of the one, to curl loosely among the hatches and marlinspikes of the other.

An everyone who could find a place at the long rails, first cabin, tourist cabin, steerage alike, saw a launch racing out from the city, and a small girl standing bare-headed—in the launch, an aureole of gold blowing about her head and her hands clasped high above it, like the hands of a small martyr at the stake.

And suddenly, in their own ranks, on the steamer's decks, there was a corresponding commotion, and a tall, lean boy, with a desperate and anxious look upon his face, broke through them, ran down a companionway, and another companionway, to the break in the railing where the pilot's ladder hung, and shouted:

"Wait a minute, down there! I've got to go back! Don't take that ladder down—wait a minute!"

Then—so quickly that eevn during the whole voyage, with the blissful young bride and groom affording a reminder before their very eyes, some of the passengers couldn't remember in exactly what order it all occurred—then the flying launch had reached the pilot's tug, and the boy had descended the rope ladder, and the girl had sprung from the launch to the tug, and there was a double scream of "Maggie!" and "Joe!" and the two young things were in each other's arms, and crying—not but what everyone else was crying, too.

They stood on the rocking tug for whole minutes—minutes—minutes, and the world looked on, and laughed, and wiped its eyes, and they neither knew nor cared. And it was only when the great Allegria actually blew her whistle and the little tug blew hers that Joe put his arm about Mary Margaret Johnson and said, dazedly and happily, without moving his hungry eyes from her exquisite and radiant face:

"Come on, darling, we've got a lot to do—we've got to start to Japan, and get married, and have lunch, and talk, and everything!"

And then they negotiated the rope-and-plank ladder, and the passengers made an aisle across the deck for them.

"We're going to have a wedding, some time this afternoon," Joe said excitedly, and proudly and youthfully, to the lingering groups that simply couldn't disperse in the face of this fascinating drama and comedy in one. "And you're all invited!"

"Oh, thank you—thank you—thank you!" Maggie whispered.

And Joe showed her boats and ropes and writing rooms and dining rooms and a Japanese baby in the steerage and his own big cabin—their cabin, with its bath.

"You'll hear the bugle for lunch soon," he exulted, as the cool sweet ocean airs began to blow over the ship, and she careened slightly, and the color was whipped into Maggie's face, and the gulls and the city dropped farther behind—and farther behind—and farther behind. "You don't mind that rocking? You're a wonder! You're going to love it, at

"I shouldn't wonder if it's the ideal life, Joe," said Mary Margaret.

Calf Club News

On last Thursday, March 19th, 1931, the Calf Club boys of Chilton County assembled at the County Agent's Office. Mr. Ling, a livestock specialist from Auburn, was with us. The purpose of the meeting was to elect new officers of the club and to have Mr. Ling tell us more about the proper feeding of dairy cows and calves. First, we elected new officers as follows:

Clyde Popwell was re-elected President; James Dennis Vice-President; Osmond Glenn, Secretary-Treasurer; Quentin Kelly, Reporter; and E. J. Foshee, Yell Leader. Other members of the club who were present were Chester Messer, Morris Foshee, Howard Martin, Morris Popwell, Elbert Foshee, C. A. Foshee, J. P. Culp, and Odean DeLoach.

After the electing of officers, Mr. H. C. Armstrong, President of the City National Bank, Selma, Alabama, made a most interesting talk, also Mr. Cobb, Commissioner of Chilton County, made a brief but very interesting talk on the value of pure bred livestock We were then very glad to have Mr Ling give us wonderful advice on the proper feeding of dairy cows.

There being no further business we adjourned until the next meeting.

WHALES CUT HOG DEMAND

It may sound strange, but it is nevertheless true that the growing whaling industry is having an adverse effect upon the demand for hogs. In several foreign countries whale oil is being used for making margarine, thereby reducing the market for American lard.

One large packing company reports that the production of whale oil has increased 300 per cent in the last four years, and now equals one-half of all the lard produced in the United States. This has been due to the discovery of a process whereby the fishy taste of whale oil may be removed, making it more palatable as human food.

To supply this vast quantity of oil, about 30,000 whales were killed last year, each yielding more than 100 barrels on an average, there being 400 pounds of oil to the barrel. In modern whaling the animals are killed by an explosive carried by a harpoon fired from a gun, and the carcass is reduced to oil, fertilizer and canned meat by a large ship on the spot equipped for the purpose. Whale meat is not very desirable for food, but on account of its cheapness it is used in some Oriental countries.

NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES

The combined circulation of daily newspapers printed each day in the United States is more than 40,000,000. More than 20 magazines have a circulation exceeding 1,000,000 copies per issue.

Employment was given to 133,797 people in publishing newspapers and periodicals during 1929, and they received $249,995,595. These figures are from the Government Census of Manufactures.

The amount paid for advertising in newspapers practically doubled in the ten years from 1919 to 1929. The sum paid out for advertising in daily newspapers and magazines the latter year was in excess of one bililon dollars.

FARMS' CORN SHORT 5 MILLION BUSHELS

Farm stocks of corn in Alabama are over 5,000,000 bushels short of the supply on hand the same date last year, reports F. W. Gist, State and Federal statistician who stated yesterday afternoon that the farm stocks on March 1, this year amounted to 11,507,000 bushels compared with 17,608,000 bushels on the same date last year and a five-year average of 19,681,000 bushels.

Regarding the farm stocks of corn in the United States, Gist said that there were 709,000,000 bushels March 1, compared with 987,000,000 bushels a year ago and a five-year average of 1,051,000,000 bushels.

BATTERY BROODERS

Many poultry raisers now use battery brooders. Both individual and long tiers of batteries are used. Some have heating devices—usually electricity or hot water. Others are kept in a heated room. These brooders are especially adapted for raising broilers for market but are also used for raising pullets. From 60 to 100 baby chicks are put in each compartment, and from one-fourth to one-third as many can be raised to broiler age there, the remainder being transferred to other brooders or put on range as the chicks grow. Battery brooders are usually of metal, with floors of 1½ inch hardware cloth or wire which permits the droppings to go through. The advantages claimed for battery brooders are less disease in rearing chicks, saving of brooder space, reduced labor costs, saving in fuel, and operation independent of the season of the year and weather conditions.

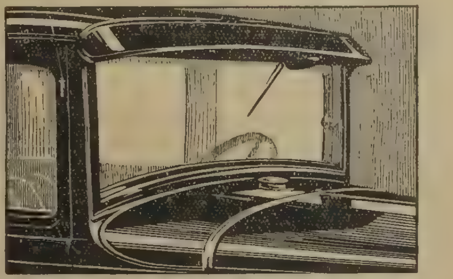
FORD SAFETY



Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield has saved many lives in collisions

EVERY new Ford is equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof windshield. This is made so that the glass will not fly or splinter under the hardest impact. It has saved many lives and prevented injuries in many automobile collisions.

This shatter-proof glass windshield is just one of many features that make the new Ford a value far above the price. Others are the silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, sturdy steel body construction, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

ALA. FILLED C. M. T. C. QUOTA; THIRD STATE TO DO THIS

Major S. R. Tupper, U. S. Army, Birmingham, in charge of enrolment for the Citizens' Military Training Camps in Alabama, has been informed by the Commanding General of the Fourth Corps Area that Alabama filled its allotted quota on February 28th, being the third state in the union to enroll the designated number.

The Alabama boys and young men selected for these camps will receive four weeks training at an army post at the expense of the government.

Early enrollment has been stressed by Major Tupper to insure acceptance on account of the large number of applicants throughout the Fourth Corps Area, which consists of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida. Only 4400 applicants can be accepted from the entire Corps Area. To date more than 1000 have been received from Alabama boys.

Major Tupper states that the unprecedented response this year was due to the assistance and cooperation of educators, public officials, the various county chairmen and their assistants and newspapers.

According to Major Tupper, vacancies still exist in a few counties and interested young men should get in touch with him immediately.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Williams and family visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williams Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Deason of Birmingham and Mr. J. D. Williams visited their sister, Mrs. O. Y. Sims, Saturday.

Mrs. J. P. Williams and daughters were the Wednesday evening guests of Mrs. W. W. Williams and family.

"FIT" THE HORSE

The farm horse should be "fitted" for spring work several weeks before heavy work actually begins. Gradually put the horse on a smaller ration of finer-quality hay early in the spring and start giving a light feed of grain three times daily. When light work commences, a 1400-pound horse should be getting daily about 14 pounds of grain together with 14 or 15 pounds of fine-quality hay. This gradual change from the coarse roughages which are fed in winter will prepare the horse to digest the 18 or 19 pounds of grain and 16 to 18 pounds of hay which he needs at heavy work such as disking or plowing. Changes in both kind and quality of feed should be gradual.

Ensemble Important Factor In Spring Styles

Stylist Forecasts Vogue For Darker Shades In Spring Fashions

WITH the coming of the Spring season many new and interesting models are being shown in women's shoes. Leonard A. Shea, a leading authority in this field, declares that the trend in women's wear for the Spring is toward plain-cut and definite lines, tracing back to the historic periods of the 19th century.

Mr. Shea, who is the stylist for the five hundred Thom McAn stores, and in close touch with style trends throughout the entire country, forecasts the predominance of black as an important note in Spring shoe fashions. Black, particularly in lightweight calf, with glossy finish and bright finish kid will be very popular. These shoes will not be plain but will be trimmed to some extent, the most favored trims being grey reptile and gun metal silk.

Another color that will predominate in women's clothes this Spring is blue. This will mean that blue footwear to match ensembles will be increasingly important. Admiralty and navy medium blue will be two of the favored shades. There will also be a strong trend toward swagger brown, worn as an attractive contrast to the blue ensemble.

As the warmer weather approaches, the beige family will come into its own probably slightly less strong than last year but still very popular. The mode seems to predict that beige costumes will call for matching or slightly matching footwear, as well as footwear in decided contrast, such as swagger brown.

As the season progresses white shoes will be much in evidence at the fashionable resorts. Spectator sport shoes will also increase in popularity, those with perforations completely through the shoe and those with underlay stitching effects being particularly popular.

An Early Spring Model. Note Sharp Contrasts.

On all these shoes white will be the outstanding base, but in all cases they will be trimmed. The outstanding trims will be white in grain leathers, black, brown and beige. In certain "high" styles, blue, green and red will also be seen.

As to types, the pump will lead in popularity, with ties fast gaining in favor and straps running a close third.

In the accompanying illustration a popular new Thom McAn Spring model is shown. It is a dainty narrow center-buckle strap, in the extremely smart new putty beige kid. It is trimmed with copper silk kid applique around the forepart and strap. Putty beige, it should be noted, is the leading color for harmonizing with the beige ensemble, or for a contrast with any ensemble in the light print group.

The ensemble being an ever present and important factor it is very essential that all parts of it properly blend or contrast, according to the individual taste, to complete the outstanding attractive picture of a 'lady in the vogue.' The woman of today considers herself as a style picture, with the base of the ensemble the picture worthy of attention, and the accessories such as the hat, bag, gloves and shoes as the frame.

It is interesting to note that men's shoes also are showing a refinement in line and pattern in keeping with the general Spring trend in styles. Generally speaking lasts are narrower and the English and custom types are coming into favor.

Men's shoes are generally becoming lighter in appearance. Some types known as light weights and feather weights, are being constructed of lighter materials. The patterns and decorations are showing signs of becoming more refined in that the alleged wild styles are being replaced with shoes of carefully balanced patterns. The perforations are smaller. They are based generally on grace of line rather than unusualness of line.

Our Sunday school is doing fine work. When the weather gets better we are expecting a larger attendance.

EVENTS OF HOLY WEEK

The most significant period of the Christian year is Holy Week, the week before Easter, beginning with Palm Sunday, which this year falls on March 29th.

Palm Sunday celebrates Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem and the strewing of palm branches in his path by the multitude.

Maundy Thursday commemorates the Last Supper and the washing of the disciples' feet; also Christ's agony in Gethsemane and his betrayal by Judas.

Good Friday represents the day of the crucifixion and is celebrated in Catholic and Anglican churches with great solemnity.

Easter Even is the name given to the entire day of twenty-four hours between Good Friday and Easter, a period for prayer and religious contemplation.

Easter Sunday, the most joyous day of the Christian calendar, commemorates the resurrection, and this year falls on April 5. In the early history of the church, Easter was observed on various dates by different bodies of Christians, but the Council of Nice in the year 325 fixed it as the first Sunday following the full moon occurring on or next after the vernal equinox, March 21.

Easter Sunday may come as early as March 22 or as late as April 25, and its date governs all ecclesiastical days from Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, to Trinity Sunday, eight weeks after Easter.

"INSIDE" INFORMATION

Leather furniture coverings look better and last longer if they are rubbed occasionally with castor oil. This restores to the leather the oil that gradually dries out. Rub the oil in well and wipe off any excess.

Remember that the table is a place for good comradeship with one's children and not for discipline or nagging. Take it for granted that the child will eat happily everything served to him, and be sure that he becomes acquainted with a variety of foods. Prepare and serve everything appetizingly and he is more likely to enjoy his food.

CRUDE OIL is not an automobile lubricant. It is converted into motor oil by a refining process which removes the wax and extracts the gasoline, kerosene and lighter fuels.

The lubricating value of a motor oil depends upon the method of refining and the care used in the refining process, rather than the source from which the crude is secured.

The best quality crude oil, regardless of its source, is selected for the refining of "STANDARD" Motor Oil. Then comes the refining process, based on our 50 years' experience in the manufacture of petroleum products. The result is "STANDARD" Motor Oil that year after year leads all other motor oils in sales in the territory in which it is sold.

TELEVISION PROGRESS

Those who expect to see the development of inexpensive and satisfactory television sets in the near future are probably doomed to disappointment, according to The Business Week, which states that many of the rumors concerning the new art are greatly exaggerated.

Engineers engaged in television experiments think it may be several years before practical sets for home use are produced. In fact, some important new inventions must be made before the goal is reached. Progress is being made only with respect to minor details, it is said.

Still, with a number of eminent scientists and inventors working on its problems, no one can tell what day some epochal discovery may hasten the development of television to a degree now only faintly hoped for.

Budgeting Calories

by Jane Rogers

Fewer, Well-Seasoned Vegetable Dishes Replace Quantity Offerings of Grandmother's Day

THERE was a time, not so long ago at that, when the housewife felt it necessary that the principal meal of the day should always include three or four, or on special occasions even five, vegetable dishes.

Tables groaned under the weight of vegetables—potatoes, corn, beets, tomatoes and carrots—and the strange part is that everyone accepted this as a matter of course.

Today, the housewife with one eye cocked toward the family budget and a wealth of dietetic and culinary advice at her fingertips, has learned how to limit the vegetable courses to two or possibly three dishes, and still meet all the demands of health and appetite.

Science has taught her that it is possible to provide all the vitamins, calories and other food elements needed by active people without stuffing them until they resembled the proverbial Thanksgiving turkey.

But along with the reduction in the quantity of foods served has come an added responsibility for the quality of the dishes. The few vegetables should be served more attractively and with flavor more in mind, than were the four or five dishes of grandmother's day.

In France, methods of seasoning that give added zest to vegetable dishes have long been familiar to all experienced cooks and one of the seasoning agents most frequently used for this purpose is sugar. A small amount—just a dash—helps to restore the natural sweetness which the vegetables lose after being picked, and when two or more vegetables are cooked together it tends to blend their contrasting flavors.

A few housewives have long used a little sugar in cooking certain vegetables, but not until recently has its use been general with green vegetables as a whole.

The sugar has another value recognized by science, but not so widely known to housewives. It is a quickly assimilated energy food which becomes available for muscular use within a short time after it is eaten.

Thus, with this new trick of seasoning, not only is the flavor enhanced, but the food value of the dish as well.

News from Thorsby

Miss FRANCES WILSON, Correspondent

Next Saturday night at 7:30 the Helen Keller Literary Society of Thorsby Institute will give a program consisting of circus stunts and a debate on chain stores. Everyone is invited. Admission ten cents.

The Senior class members have their rings. The school has a standard ring designed by Miss Catherine Perry, a former teacher, who wrote the Alma Mater.

Monday at chapel Fred Boyd read his Senior essay. The title was "Aviation as a Career." Seniors are all required to write essays which are read at chapel except in the case of the two who have the honor of reading Commencement Day.

In spite of the weather there was a good attendance at the Thorsby Institute Faculty and Alumni play given Saturday night. The play was given again Monday night for the benefit of those kept away by bad weather Saturday. The play was a comedy by Booth Tarkington entitled "Clarence." The cast of characters is as follows: Mrs. Martin, Miss Agnes Leary; Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Earl Leary; Mrs. Wheeler, Miss Lillian McKee; Bobby Wheeler, Mr. Clyde King; Cora Wheeler, Miss Onita Klingelhoefer; Violet Pinny, Miss Odie Lee Arthur; Clarence, Mr. Rascoe Maddox; Della, Miss Frances Wilson; Dinwiddie, Mr. Cecil Each; Hubert Stem, Mr. Ronald Lucas.

Canton Boy Is Writer In Paper

In a small paper published by the students of the Southern Industrial Institute, at Camp Hill, Alabama, is carried an article appearing on the front page, by Grady Gillespie of Clanton, who is a student at that school. Grady has been showing some splendid work at the Institute, and will complete his course there this year. He is the son of Sheriff and Mrs. W. H. Gillespie, of Clanton. Following is the article as it appeared on the front page of the school paper:

TALLAPOOSA HALL

Up on the highest hill of the Southern campus, perhaps the highest hill in Camp Hill, stands the newest S. I. I. building, Tallapoosa Hall At the entrance of the building we can see, unfolding away to the west, almost the entire Southern campus from Ross Hall, right at hand, to Mr. Ward's home, the "Haunted House," and beyond this the forest, stretching away to the north and west. From the other side of the building we look upon the little city of Camp Hill. It is a splendid location.

The building itself is of red brick with stucco paneling. It is more of an English style than any other, it seems, but there are only two buildings built along the same line in this vicinity. One is in Georgia and the other here. The entrance is a square with arched doorways on the south and west sides, two doorways to the side. In the southwest corner is the cornestone, which was laid by former Governor Bibb Graves. The eastern side of the entrance leads into the beautiful auditorium and the northern side opens into the lower hall and classrooms.

The building contains seventeen large classrooms, nine on the first floor and eight on the second floor. Also there is Mr. Ward's office and an antique room upstairs while, over the entrance, there is the library. Above this is a tower from which the face of a large clock looks down upon us and chimes out the passing of each golden hour.

The auditorium will seat five hundred people comfortably and has a stage to present our plays in the very best manner. The roof is sixty feet high. All the building is, of course, heated by a modern steam plant

The whole building is very beautiful and leaves the impression of massive grandeur, commanding, as it does, a view of all the surrounding country.

This is my vision of the completed Tallapoosa Hall. We will indeed be fortunate to have such a building to work in.

—Grady Gillespie '31.

Soldiers' Bonus Money

The first effect of the distribution of several hundred million dollars among ex-soldiers, in the form of loans against their compensation certificates, will be felt by retail storekeepers in every line. More money in hand means more money spent. The effect will not be more noticeable in any one part of the country than in any other, but it will spread pretty evenly all over the United States.

Increased sales by retailers will compel the speedier replenishment of stocks, and thus will stimulate wholesale trade and, in turn, manufacturing. Just how much effect the Government financing, necessary to provide the funds for these bonus payments, will have upon the curtailment of credit for industrial expansion, remains to be seen. Secretary Mellon opposed the project because of the added burden upon taxpayers and the drain upon general credit facilities. It may not prove as serious as he anticipated.

In the meantime, one fact stands out clearly. The merchants who will gain the chief benefit from the increase in business through this new spending will be the one who are enterprising enough to keep up their stocks and courageous enough to tell the people of their communities about their wares, through intelligent advertising. There never was a situation, it seems to us, when advertising had such an opportunity to prove its value.

The United States might be compared to some would-be athlete, who has trained his left arm to feats of high prowess, but who has allowed his right arm to remain feeble and flabby.

Such a disparity exists between our progress in science and our progress in honesty and moral character. In science we have turned the world upside down. Our electricians tame the lightning and make it turn our wheels and lighten the toil of housewives. Our fliers ride the wings of the storm. Our business men talk across the oceans.

As respects character, where are we? Not so far ahead of our great-grandfathers. Graft and corruption fatten on politics, gangsters and gunmen terrorize cities, dirty frauds grasp the money of the poor.

Yet the people say they don't want preaching. They don't like to be told about their faults. Choose pleasant subjects, they say. But life's lessons have to be learned. The boy who won't study will probably spend his life digging ditches. Such digging is honorable work, but ambitious people look for work with more opportunity. The nation that won't learn to be honest and clean is attacked by a foe more menacing than any ironclads.

What this country needs is some influence that will make the fight for character and honesty seem as fascinating and romantic as the triumphs of science over dead matter.

o-o-o-o

It is the great boon of such characters as Mr. Lincoln's that the re-unite what God has joined—in him was vindicated the greatness of real goodness, and the goodness of greatness.—Brooks.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Folks, I came very near disappointing you this week, if you pardon my saying so. I had a sudden attack of the sickness commonly known as "belliakin," caused from not my own source, and had to get out of town suddenly on account of the heat, so to speak. I wrote the ed a letter telling him I wouldn't be back n time for this week's issue, but I did manage to slip back into town without too many people seeing me.

My hat is off to the orchestra composed of students of the Chilton County High School. They certainly played well at the play Friday night, and I hear that they sure showed some real music at the Kiwanis Club last Thursday. Now that is what Clanton has been needing, and we ought to be proud of that school orchestra.

Mr. Dief, Mr. Lande, J. E. Easterling, Alex Margolis and H. T. Pipes went up to Gadsden the other day and took a good look at the Goodyear plant there to see how the tires are made, and I'll bet our friend Mr. Lande uses Goodyear tires on his Buick, too.

Now comes something folks that is going to stir up some interest round these parts, but I can't help it. Somebody took it upon themselves to write me a letter, send it special delivery and it got to me just in time for me to beg the ed to let me publish it this week. As a matter of explanation, I wrote a little squibb about dances last week, and too, you know I have been handing out some of my infamous tips in a nice, friendly way quite often. But, somebody took exception to my piece about dances, and called my hand at it so to speak, in a nice, respectable letter, so I'm doing what it sounded like they wished me to do this week—publish that letter, so here 'tis:

"Clanton, Ala., March 24, 1931.

"Editor "Round Town."
Chilton County News,
Clanton, Ala.

"Dear Sir:

"Your remarks in last weeks issue of the News with reference to the recent dances in Clanton are very misleading and a gross misrepresentation of the facts. Your statements will lead the people not attending to believe a drunken brawl was held with a bunch of immoral, indecent, liquor drinking reprobates attending and that all the laws of decency and honor were broken. I do not know the source of your information, but I do know that you have not attended any of the recent dances and therefore you did not get your information first hand. You might have been one of the crowd that congregates around the outside for the purpose of trying to find something to criticise and talk about. If any of the things you referred to happened they must have happened in this crowd for they did not happen in the crowd attending the dance. It might be possible that you have been talking to some street corner loafer who makes it his business to spread all of the gossip that originates among the brotherhood. However, you might have obtained your information you have lowered the standard of your newspaper to print such unfounded rumors and you have injured the character of every person who attended the dances.

"As a matter of facts these dances are attended by the most respectable people of Clanton, people who are high class ladies and gentlemen, people with as good morals as you have, people with as high ideals and standards of life as have, people who think as much of their character and reputation as you think of yours and yet you publish rumors and slurs which if you were called upon you could not begin to establish or prove as facts.

"I am sure that most of the people who go to the dances in Clanton consider you their friend, you mingle with them every day on the streets, in their places of business and in their homes and will venture that you will not accuse a single one of them of being guilty of the things that you have charged them with collectively. You have hidden behind your column and done something that you would not do if you did not think your identity was hidden. I wonder if you are man enough now to admit that you did not know what you were talking about, I wonder if you are man enough to correct your mistake in your next issue.

"What about this business of helping each other along this old road of life, how about a pat on the back instead of a kick. You have printed a lot of that kind of stuff but you have forgotten to practice it. We are all traveling the same way, so let's mark the slate clean next week. Let's admit we made a mistake and start all even again. You will feels lots better, we will feel lots better and the other people will have a better opinion of both of us.

Boy, howdy. They kind of got me told, didn't they, or he or she? 'Sfunny how some folks take so many things for granted. Musta hit sorta low, below the belt, or something. I was about to forget the thing until I received that letter, bawling me out. I would suggest that the author of that letter read what I said about dances last week, again, and see just where they made a mistake, by taking exception. Anyway, I'll forgive them this time, and still be a good sport.

* * * *

You can just bet your life that I knew what I was talking about. I agree that those attending these dances are of high standing, and all my friends. Due to my having more respect for whatever young lady that is referred to in the letter, whoever she may be, I am not using that paragraph about her, because I did not refer to any particular one. Here is a reprint from last week's column, judge for yourself, dear readers. There are no mistakes to correct:

"Truthfully, I'm glad that our teachers are not allowed to attend dances here. Dances are all right, I like them and think it's great. But, I can't put my O. K. on all the dances held, that I know of. Especially those where there are no restrictions except the one at the door, when you have to fork over a couple of dollars or so, to get you and the girl friend in. Dances—saloons on wheels—no regard for marriage vows—chasers galore—girls being shipped from college—bad whiskey—and a good time was had by all, provided they left their conscience at home."

He who goes down into the battle of life giving a smile for every frown, a cherry word for every cross one, and lending a helping hand to the unfortunate, is, after all, the best of missionaries.—Anon.

Road Meeting Here Thursday Was Success

nence of Cedartown, acted as spokesman for that place. The mayor of Piedmont acted as one of the spokesmen for that town in the meeting. Judge Luther Lisle of Anniston also gave some good pointers on the proposed efforts of the organization. Judge Cage Head of Shelby County was one of the speakers, and W. W. Fox spoke for this county.

A committee was named by the meeting to suggest a name for the organization and nominate a president, secretary and treasurer, and directors. This committee named the following men for these places, and all were voted in, with the name of the organization to be the Anniston-Selma-Mobile Paved Highway Association, Judge L. H. Reynolds as president; H. H. Frazier of Selma, secretary-treasurer, with Chas. Varn, Geo. P. Haswell of Calhoun County; H. H. Thornton, H. F. McElderry of Talladega County; Judge Cage Head, P. O. Luck of Shelby County; W. W. Fox, Percy M. Pitts of Chilton County and Bruce K. Craig and Judge Vaughn of Dallas County as the Board of Directors.

The meeting began at ten o'clock Thursday morning and continued until noon when the entire gathering was entertained at luncheon by the Clanton Kiwanis Club, at the Baptist church. The student orchestra of the Chilton County High School rendered several selections at the luncheon, where 104 were present. Immediately following luncheon, the Board of Directors and president and secretary met for a conference.

Shaw-Ellison Wedding One Of Much Interest

A wedding around which was centered a great deal of interest was that of Miss Mildred Shaw and Mr. Ross Ellison, which took place at the home of the bride's parents Sunday afternoon, March 22, at three o'clock, in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives.

The living room was a bower of lovely spring flowers. At the far end of the room was an improvised altar which was a beautiful setting for the bridal party. Against a background of ferns was a white trellis entwined with souther smilax and in the center was a huge bouquet of pink snap dragons. Flanked on each side were seven branche candelabra holding burning tapers. The pretty effect was completed with tall standards in which there was an artistic arrangement of snapdragons and plumossa fern. An isle leading from the entrance of the hall to the altar was formed with floor baskets holding large bouquets of pink snapdragons. Festooned from each basket was pink tulle tied in fluffy bows at intervals.

A program of nuptial music was furnished by Miss Emma Morris, Mrs. Grady Broadhead and Mrs. Barney Roberts. Miss Morris, who possesses a beautiful lyric soprano voice, sang "I Love You Truly."

To the strains of Loengrin's Wedding march played by Mrs. Roberts at the piano, and Mrs. Broadhead, violin, obligato, the bridal party entered. Dainty little Martha Higgins, dressed in a lovely pink georgette, carried an arm basket of pink sweet peas and scattered rose petals in the path of the bride.

The bride entered on the arm of the groom. She was becomingly gowned in a fashionable grey suit with which she wore a grey hat with a touch of blue and accessories to match. She carried a shower bouquet of Columbia roses, tied with pink tulle. Rev. D. W. Haskew performed the ceremony.

The bride and groom received the congratulations from the guests in the dining room where the bride's book was presided over by Miss Louise McSwain and Mrs. Horace Jones. Others assisting in entertaining the wedding guests were Miss Bernice Williams and Miss Clara Mae Popwell.

The bride is the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Sanford Shaw of Clanton. She is a graduate of the Chilton County High School, and by her sweet personality, has won a host of friends throughout the county. She has taken an active part in church and social life of Clanton.

Mr. Ellison, the groom, is the son of the late John M. Ellison and Mrs. Victoria Ellison. He holds a responsible position with the Alabama Power Company at Lay Dam, where he has been for four years. He is held in high esteem by his many co-workers and by all who know him.

Wedding guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Mullins, Mrs. W. E. Holcombe, Mrs. R. C. Jones, Mrs. Geo. W. Borders, Miss Ruth Prince, Elsie Busby, Mrs. G. T. Evans, Mrs. J. F. Holcombe, Miss Ruth Sessions, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Haskew, Mrs. C. B. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Crit Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Polk, Jr., Mrs. James McCraney, Jr.

Miss Clara Mae Popwell, Mrs. Grady Broadhead, Miss Louise McSwain, Miss Berniece Williams, Miss Ethyl Mae Jones, Mrs. R. B. Harrison, Mrs. Barney Roberts, Miss Emma Sue Morris, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Carter, Mrs. Horace Miller, Mrs. Bill Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Smitherman, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Ellison and son, Frank, Misses Dorothy, Grace and Tootsie Carter, Miss Madelyn Orr, Mrs. Bob Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Littleton, Mrs. Carrie Ray, Mrs. Victoria Ellison.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Burdette, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, Mrs. Reuben Wyatt, Mrs. M. A. Gore, Velma Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Shaw, Miss Martha Higgins, and others.

Mrs. McSwain Hostess at Miscellaneous Shower Honoring Miss Shaw.

Among the outstanding social events of the month was the shower given recently by Mrs. T. C. McSwain in honor of Miss Mildred Shaw, who became the bride of Mr. Ross Ellison Sunday, March 22nd.

The McSwain home was lovely in its decorations of early spring flowers. In the living room masses of narcissus were attractively arranged in silver baskets and bowls. Floor baskets held an artistic arrangement of peach blossoms.

The guests were met at the door by Miss Ruth Sessions and Miss Louise McSwain and were ushered to the receiving line where they were presented to Mrs. T. C. McSwain, Mrs. Shaw, Miss Mildred Shaw and Mrs. Victoria Ellison.

The guests were ushered to the bride's book by Mrs. Marcus Polk, Jr. Presiding over the bride's book was Mrs. Horace Jones. Mrs. Norman Roberts took the guests to the dining room wheer a profusion of cut flowers added to the attractiveness of the room.

The beautifully appointed tea table was centered with a huge silver basket of pink and white carnations arranged with graceful sprays of plumosa fern. Tall tapers in silver holders and dainty mints in silver comports completed the beautiful effect.

Serving at the tea table were Miss Clara Mae Popwell, Miss Bernice Williams, Miss Elsie Busby, and Miss Gladys Williams. Mrs. Reedie Taylor ushered the guests into the gift room, where hundreds of lovely gifts were displayed.

Music was furnished during the evening by Mrs. Barney Roberts, Mrs. Percy Pitts and Miss Nell Wells, piano and Miss Mary Foshee, Miss Madelyn Orr, Miss Emma Sue Morris and Mrs. C. N. Bradford, Jr., vocal. Mrs. Grady Broadhead gave several violin solos.

Guests at this delightful social affair were Miss Madelyn Orr, Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, Mrs. Percy M. Excerpts From L & N Employes' Magazine

Six new mountain type locomotives have been received by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad from the Baldwin Locomotive Works and placed in passenger train service between Cincinnati, Ohio, and Etowah, Tenn. The engines are numbered 416 to 321 and represent the ultimate in modern locomotive design according to the L & N Employes' Magazine for March.

The first man to complete fifty years of continuous service with the L & N Railroad was Major James Geddes, superintendent, Nashville, Tenn., it is learned from the L & N Employes' Magazine for March. Mr. Geddes, a native of Scotland, began his L & N service on September 2, 1851, on the construction of the line from Louisville to Nashville, was later general agent at Bowling Green, Ky., and in 1872 was promoted to superintendent of the Nashville & Decatur Division of the L & N at Nashville.

On September 2, 1901, the day on which Major Geddes completed half a century with the road, the L & N arranged a banquet in his honor at the Union Station in Nashville. The guests included high officials of the company and distinguished persons from many walks of life. At the completion of the banquet a handsome silver service was presented to the Major by the L & N and he was notified that effective on that day he was appointed assistant to the general manager of the L & N system.

Major Geddes served the L & N for 13 years longer, until he died at the age of 86, on November 13, 1914. He was buried at Bowling Green, Ky.

"THE VALUE OF COUNTY PLAY DAY TO YOUR COMMUNITY"

By Hilda Hart
Member Junior III Civics Class of Chilton County High School

County Play Day is one of the important days in each county every year. It is looked forward to by all people and it brings excitement to the entire county.

The date for our Play Day was set at the beginning of early spring by the County Superintendent and the Board of Education. The program was carried out at the County High School on March 13th.

Each school in the county took part in all activities of the day, contributing one or more students to each game. Each school had an assigned place where the activities of that school were carried out. They were divided into two groups, one group of boys and the other group of girls. The boys and girls had separate programs.

The way in which pupils were selected for these activities was by try-outs. In each activity those who wanted to take part in them came out for the try-out. The one that proved to be the best player of that game was chosen to represent that school in that game.

County Play Day was important to this community because it brought all the people of the county together. Some people, who probably, had not been to the town before came on this day. It threw together the people of the county and the people of the town and therefore it brought about better cooperation to the county. This not only brought about better cooperation but in days to come it might prabably increase the trade.

County Play Day was also helpful to the students. It taught them useful activities that will be of great value to them in later life.

This also brought out a good example of fair play, the thing that should be taught every person in any activity of life. Fair play is one of the things that was stressed most on County Play Day and each school had an equal chance with the other schools.

Not only did County Play Day help the people of the town and county to cooperate, but it helped the schools to cooperate and caused a more friendly spirit between them. The teachers had the opportunity to meet the teachers of the other schools and therefore it made every person able to cooperate on that day.

County Play Day also helped to develop one of the important departments in our high schools, the department of Physical Education. It encouraged more play and exercise in our high schools. It also taught the students to take part in different activities and gave the Physical Education classes a good outline of play.

County Play Day will always be looked forward to by all people and will be one of the most important days in the county each year.

"THE VALUE OF A COUNTY PLAY DAY IN YOUR COMMUNITY"

By Joe Moore
Member Junior III Civics Class Chilton County High School

The definition of a County Play Day is when the different schools of each community in the county come together in a general meeting one day and try for different events in which only the student body takes part and tries to carry it out to the very last word.

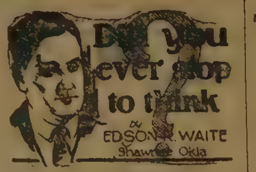
The County Play Day brings the schools and the school spirit closer together that day and makes the student feel that he is a part of that school. The students also take pride in the events that their school wins and try to feel the real sportsmanship in the games that they are playing and the part they are taking in them and also they not only think of themselves but the school as a whole and as one body. The body of a school is composed of the entire school and the pupils that day are in one body and are pulling together for their school to win.

The competition is perhaps one of the greatest things or the greatest goal that is trying to be reached on a Play Day. The diffeernt schools in the communities train their boys and girls for these different meets so they will be in the best condition to take off the prizes and the honor of beating the other teams and schools throughout the county.

Cooperation is another one of the chief problems in a Play Day. If the cooperation is not gotten and the program doesn't fuction right the day is not a success.

One of the most important of all the things on a Play Day is fair play or sportsmanship. The thing above all is to play clean. Unfair play just reveals the lower things in a student and demoralizes his character as well as his word. In fair play you must have a clean bunch of boys and girls as a clean team that meets these other teams. It is not altogether the honor of winning the prizes for the schools, but it is how you played the game, if you were square and on the level about it and not trying to cheat your opponent of a point.

Another one of the most important things about a Play Day is what it does to its community as a whole and the good will it will do the pupils. It will give the pupils a sportsmanship outlook as well as trying to win the game in a fair and square way.



Paul Porter, publisher of The Mangum (Okla.) Star, says:

That advertising is as essential to the progress and development of the average business enterprise in a period of depression as it is during normal eras.

In the smaller cities, merchants too often take the attitude that as volume declines the first overhead to be reduced is advertising. They feel that it is impossible to create a demand for their products. This erroneous assumption accounts for the present condition of many mercantile and business enterprises of other types.

Every well regulated and properly managed business should operate on a budget. Advertising should be proportioned to the volume of business and if additional sales effort is made through the proper advertising mediums, the merchant will find his volume more stable.

If every business enterprise in a community would expend a proper proportion of their volume of business for advertising, they would find the results surprising.

Too many of America's big and small business men are "Fair Weather" boys. When the clouds of depression hover about, they run for shelter to hibernate until the sun peeps out. Intelligence, aggressiveness and confidence will win the battle for those who have the 'Guts' to fight.

THE COMMUNITY AND ITS BANKS

By ROME C. STEPHENSON
President American Bankers Association

R. C. STEPHENSON

While upon the individual bankers there rests without qualification the direct responsibility for the prudent, honest conduct of their institutions, nevertheless the soundness of banking as a practical matter of fact is a community problem in which the public has a part to play as well as bankers and government officials charged with the supervision of banks.

In the first place, the assets of a bank, outside its government bonds, consist mainly of loans to business men and of investments in securities created by corporate enterprises. The deposits of a bank are not kept in the vaults as idle cash but are employed in these loans and investments to earn the money to pay the expenses of the bank so that it can render services to its customers and also pay them interest on such deposits as bear interest. If there were no such thing as unsound business men or enterprises there would be no such thing as unsound assets in a bank.

It is of course the unquestioned duty of the banker to choose only sound loans and investments, but the difficulty of such judgment, and human judgment is never infallible, is plainly increased in such times and under such conditions as we have been passing through, with many businesses not making expected earnings and therefore hampered in meeting their obligations. Unfortunately some investments and loans created by persons outside the banks which found their way into the banks in a relatively few instances have reflected the unwise business policies and conditions that became more than usually prevalent in our business activities and contributed to the difficulty of banking. The vast bulk of bank assets, however, are 100 per cent sound above all question.

"Hard Boiled" vs. "Easy" Banker

In another aspect the people of the community have a part to play in maintaining the soundness of their banks, and that is through the medium of patronage. The existence of a bank is dependent on public patronage. If only those banks were patronized in which the most careful policies were practiced and the most conscientious and able men in charge, it would go far toward maintaining the standards of banking. If business men in a community when refused loans by their banks for good and sufficient reasons because conditions are not favorable, thereupon withdraw their business to banks where less careful methods prevail, they clearly contribute to the creation of a less sound banking situation.

Also if, in the heat of competition, a banker offers higher interest rates or more free service to attract customers than the earnings of conservative banking justify, and is encouraged by the patronage of the public as against a more conservative bank, obviously the public is again playing a part in bringing about a less sound banking situation. It is an unfortunate fact that the banker who is strict, "hard boiled" if you please, is liable to be less popular than the "easy" banker, and by that same token the public itself has a voice in influencing the character of banking. Also it is the public in the end which pays the main part of the penalty if unfortunate results follow.

Still again the public can exert an influence in shaping the character of banking by supporting the purposes of bankers to maintain intelligent, independent, honest banking supervision by the public banking departments through insisting that this function of government shall be kept as free from political influence as the judiciary itself and shall be manned only by men of the highest ability and character.

In still another way can the people themselves contribute to maintaining the ability of their banks to meet their obligations, and this is by granting them the fullest possible confidence. As I said, the deposits are not kept as cash but are invested in loans and securities. Even the soundest assets of this type require some time to reconvert at full value into cash deposits. In many cases of bank troubles the only thing wrong with a bank was an unduly suspicious and apprehensive state of mind in its customers created by no act or condition of its own but by baseless rumors which sometimes led them to destroy the value of their own deposits by demanding them immediately, forcing a bank to sacrifice its assets and otherwise disrupt its financial operations.

Bankers Help

During the year 1930 the Bankers' Association of Langlade County, Wisconsin, worked out the finances for a cooperative milk plant, which entailed the raising of $100,000, and also sponsored an active 4-H-Club campaign that culminated in an "Achievement Day" program, in which upwards of 400 young people participated. The increase in the number interested in this work was 200 per cent over the past two year period.

Hors D'Oeuvres Jog Jaded Appetites

By ETIENNE ALLIO, Chef,
Hotel New Yorker, New York City

NOTHING can contribute more to assure the success of the meal, whether it be a formal or informal repast, than a hors d'oeuvre, skillfully prepared, of carefully selected ingredients to insure their freshness, and served in a manner to appeal to the eye as well as to the appetite.

CHEF ALLIO

Whether the hors d'oeuvre be hot or cold, its chief purpose is, of course, to act as an appetizer and this it can do as much by its appearance as by its taste, for there is a full measure of truth in the old saying, "The eye does half the eating." The portions should be small, merely large enough to stimulate the appetite, without any danger of dulling the diner's zest for the dishes that are to follow.

Vienna Hors d'Oeuvre—Simmer calves liver until very tender Chop fine and rub to a paste. To one cup of liver add one tablespoon melted butter, one-half teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper to taste, and enough thick tomato sauce to make the mixture of the right consistency to spread. Lightly toast strips of graham bread about four inches long and an inch and a quarter wide. Spread with the paste. Garnish with a border of chopped whites of hard-boiled egg and the riced yolk. Serve cold.

Clams in Nest (Individual)—Halve a grapefruit, remove the pulp, and fill with shaved ice. Place a small glass in the center for the sauce. Place five small clams on the half shell on the ice. For the sauce mix one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, one tablespoon horseradish, one tablespoon vinegar, and one tablespoon tomato ketchup. Add two tablespoons lemon juice, one-half teaspoon sugar, one-fourth teaspoon tabasco, and one teaspoon salt. Chill by placing sauce in the glass a sufficient time before serving.

Southampton Hors d'Oeuvre—Scoop out the stem ends of six whole, firm tomatoes, leaving a cone-shaped cavity. Sprinkle with pepper, salt, and a little sugar. Fill with butter. Bake in a moderate oven until tender. Just before serving place the tomatoes on the individual plates and pour over each of them two tablespoons of hot cream seasoned with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with minced parsley and serve hot on thin toast strips.

Dr. H. C. Bass of West End Baptist Church, Birmingham, to Preach Commencement Sermon, May 24, at The Baptist Church

It is of more than passing interest that we have been fortunate enough to secure the time and service of Dr. H. C. Bass, pastor West End Baptist Church, Birmingham, to deliver the Commencement sermon for the graduating class of Chilton County high school, 1931. The sermon will be preached at 11 o'clock, May 24, at the First Baptist church in this city.

Dr. Bass is a distinguished and learned gentleman whose services are always in demand, and it was only by applying early that the school is fortunate enough to get him for this occasion. He is well known generally over the State of Alabama, and particularly well known among the Baptists of the State, and his coming will be anticipated with much pleasure and interest.

Senior One Soils and Crops Class Start A Potato Project

The Senior One agriculture boys under the supervision of their teacher, J. B. Varnell, have started a very interesting and practical project, namely that of bedding sweet potatoes. The boys are looking forward to and hoping to realize enough in commensurable returns to finance a trip to A. P. I. at Auburn.

Each of the twenty boys have shared equally the expense and are keeping a record of their expenditures and also will keep a record of their receipts with the goal in view of an interesting and beneficial visit to our State Agricultural College. They will also share equally in the profits and are hopeful that the potato market will have been made better by their project.

The buyer of seed corn does well to consider the productiveness of a variety, its uniformity, and its adaptability to the soil and climate where it is to grow, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The varietal name may be of little importance because of the mixing of names by seed-corn dealers and the mixing of varieties through cross-pollination by the wind.

Coverings of rather heavy cloth laid directly over garden truck or other low-growing plants are effective protection against moderate frosts. Place the coverings over the plants early in the evening and remove them as soon after sunrise as possible. Tin cans or other metal coverings are not effective in protecting plants from frost damage, because such objects are good conductors of heat and moreover are too small to conserve the original warmth of the plants.

Lower production costs, a tendency toward improvement in market demand, and a greater degree of stability in general commodity prices are predicted for 1931 by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in its agricultural outlook report. Outlook reports are prepared by the bureau to help farmers make plans for planting crops and breeding livestock in view of the market conditions that will probably exist when the crops and animals are ready for market. Clanton Methodist Church

We begin our revival meeting next Sunday morning at 11 A. M. We are inviting all of the people of Clanton and surrounding territory, regardless of denominational affiliation, to attend our services. We are expecting Dr. N. B. McLeod of Selma to arrive in the city and preach for us next Monday night. He will do the preaching during the week. Dr McLeod has few equals in the pulpit in the South, and his coming to Clanton is a rare treat. He is not sensational, but will lead you into deep thinking and holy living.

The morning services will be from ten thirty to eleven thirty, and the night services at 7:30. Leave home in time to reach the church on time.

We have several good song leaders in our church and in the other churches of the city, and we want to make the singing a special feature of the meeting.

Our Sunday school meets at 9:45 a.m. Preaching at 11 a.m. by the pastor.

The night service Sunday night will be a musical program under the direction of Mrs. Percy M. Pitts, and special artists from Selma and Birmingham. You will want to hear this special program of music.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

Whereas, default was made in the payment of the indebtedness secured by that certain mortgage, executed on the 10th day of March, 1927, by W. S. Peeples and wife, Lue Peeples, to A. Latham, which mortgage is recorded in the office of the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama, in Book 229 of Mortgages, at Page 213, and which mortgage was to secure an indebtedness of One Hundred and Forty Two and 78/100 Dollars, ($142.78), which was evidenced by one promissory waive note bearing even date with said mortgage, for said sum and due and payable on October 20, 1927 and which mortgage conveyed as security for said indebtedness the following described real estate situated in Chilton County, Alabama, to wit:

One block of land beginning at the Southeast corner of the Southwest Quarter of Section Twenty Three, Township Twenty Three, Range Thirteen, thence north to the corner of Y. O. Freeman's Lot, thence west to the Randolph and Jemison public road, tehnce in a Southwesterly direction along said road to the section line between section 22 and section 23 thence East to the point of beginning being in all three (3) acres, more or less, and known as the 'B. M. Gentry place'."

Now, therefore, the undersigned mortgagee in said mortgage, will on Monday, April 13, 1931, during the legal hours of sale, in front of the Courthouse door of Chilton County, Alabama, and in the town of Clanton, offer for sale to the highest and best bidder, for cash, the above described property conveyed in said mortgage for the purpose of paying the indebtedness secured by same, the expenses of the sale, including a reasonable attorney's fee, and the remainder of the proceeds of said sale, if any, to be turned over to the mortgagors as provided by law.

This the 14th day of March, 1931.

Felt Bad After Eating

"BEFORE I started taking Black-Draught, three years ago, my health was very bad," writes Mrs. C. C. Carson, 945 Concord St., Beaumont, Texas. "I suffered constantly from constipation. I had headache when I got up in the morning, and I felt dull and sluggish. I hardly ate a meal that my food agreed with me. Frequently I would have gas on my stomach, and felt awful.

"I read about Black-Draught, and I thought it might help me. After I had taken it a little while, I felt much better. It relieves constipation. I keep it on hand so when I need a laxative I will have it. In the three years I have been taking it, I have never found anything as good for constipation."

Farms' Corn Short 5 Million Bushels

Farm stocks of corn in Alabama are over 5,000,000 bushels short of the supply on hand the same date last year, reports F. W. Gist, State and Federal statistician, who stated yesterday afternoon that the farm stocks on Mar 1 this year amounted to 11,507,000 bushels compared with 17,608,000 bushels on the same date last year and a five year average of 19,681,000 bushels.

Gist also stated that the ratio of supply to demand of farm labor on March 1 this year was 175 percent [illegible] the same date a year ago.

Regarding the farm stocks of corn in the United States Gist said that there were 700,000,000 bushels March 1 compared with 785,000,000 bushels a year ago and also a five year average of 1,051,000,000 bushels. Based upon estimates of total supplies at the beginning of the season and March 1 the domestic consumption of corn for the period [illegible] was about 250,000,000 bushels [illegible] than for the corresponding period of last year, while the total amount [illegible] for the remainder of the season is around 200,000,000 bushels [illegible] March 1 to [illegible] last year, he said.

GOV. FROWNS ON PRISON FARM COMPETITION WITH PLANTERS

Gov. Miller, who on his way to the coast for a brief rest last week stopped over at Atmore to inspect the State farm there, has in mind the making of some changes in the objectives of the operation of this farm before his administration ends.

The changes which he is thinking over contemplate suspension of the producting of various crops to come into competition with similar ones produced by Alabama farmers generally and raise only food crops for the feeding of prisoners at Atmore as well as at other State prisons and prison camps and even county jails also the furnishing of food to the State's various eleemosynary institutions.

It is the Governor's idea that the cotton crop should be limited to that required for the State's cotton mills, and that production at the Atmore farm of strawberries on an extensive commercial scale shall cease when the present strawberry beds play out, which will probably be some two years hence.

The Atmore prison farm is already equipped with a modern canning plant where surplus vegetables and fruits produced, can be canned for use in prisons, camps, jails and eleemosynary institutions during the winter months

Co-op Poultry Cars Bring In $192,112

To date 64 carloads of poultry have been marketed cooperatively by Alabama farmers, according to a farm bureau report. The birds brought producers $192,112 and more than 23,000 persons, living in 55 counties participated in the sales.

The fowls went direct to eastern markets, mainly New York and Boston.

The poultry began to move along the cooperative route January 6 and will continue until about June 1. Total marketing for the season is expected to be about 100 carloads. The movement this year is much earlier than last, shipping being about 20 carloads ahead of this date a year ago

"New York is absorbing more poultry this year than ever before," said J. B. Sylvest, marketing specialist of the extension service, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, who has worked with farmers through county farm bureaus in an advisory capacity in making the sales. He said it is hoped that the rapid movement would reduce the surplus to a point that would enable later prices to show improvement.

HISTORICAL FILMS

Citizens of the future will see history enacted as well as read about it, if a plan proposed by Will H. Hays, head of the moving picture industry, is put into effect.

He suggests that space be provided in the new Archives Building to be built in Washington for the storage of many thousands of moving pictures of events which will have a permanent historical interest.

Think what it will mean to posterity to be able to witness on the screen historical events exactly as they were enacted centuries before.

Many such films are now being preserved in various vaults throughout the country, beginning with the inauguration of President McKinley, and including pictures made during the World War.

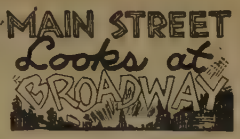
With proper care negatives as now made will last for many years, and duplicates may be made from time to time when originals begin to show signs of deterioration. Attempts are being made to develop a process whereby the life of films may be prolonged indefinitely.

Railroad Man Now Feels Like New He Says

"I never make a trip now without taking a bottle of Ferrac along and it has made me feel like a new man," recently stated John L. Sanders of 4211 2nd, Ave., Birmingham, who is in the transportation department of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. His full statement follows:

"I was in a badly rundown condition; had mighty little appetite and my digestion was so poor I couldn't eat anything hardly without feeling upset all over. I was forever taking some kind of medicine that didn't seem to do me a bit of good. Then I started Ferrac and I never saw such a change in anybody as there is in me. I am eating man size meals and enjoying them; my digestion is as good as anybody's and I feel fine from head to foot. I will always be thankful that I got away from 'druggy medicine' and started this natural prescription."

Ferrac is on sale in All Drug Stores, or if your druggist can not supply you, send $1.00 to The Greenville Products Co., Greenville, Ala. adv.



Pinched Paws—

If you're going to take Fido along on a shopping trip to a certain large department store you must carry him when you ride the escalators, or moving stairways.

That rule was made because the firm is convinced that dogs can't learn to ride the moving stairs. They're always getting their paws severely pinched when getting on or off. The store bought about three columns of advertising space in a local paper to make the announcement, which read:

"The pups just can't learn to ride on escalators. Several of them have been seriously injured. Even the brightest little wuff-wuffs don't watch their step getting on and off."

Let's Investigate—

Dark whisperings and hints of favoritism were cast about when it was discovered that while one entrance to a subway station was built of the conventional iron, the one across the street was fashioned of rich bronze.

An investigation was informally launched to get to the bottom of the matter, viz., how come the city spent all that extra money to build one of bronze when an iron one would have done just as well?

The sleuths were due for a jolt, however, for it was discovered that the classy entrance cost the city nothing. The financial house in front of which it is located paid for the entire cost of the railing, instaled by city labor, so that the city saved money instead of lost money.

Everyone is satisfied and the country is apparently as safe as ever. Incidentally, you may use the doggy stairway for the same nickel that gets you into the more vulgar subway entrances around town.

History Lesson—

It rather looks as though two gentlemen who applied for citizenship papers will have to wait and get better acquainted with United States history.

"Who," inquired their examiner, "is president of the United States?"

"George Washington," responded the candidate promptly.

Slightly dissatisfied with that answer the examiner asked, "Who is governor of New York?"

Again the snappy answer; "George Washington."

Turing to the man's companion, the examiner weakly said, "Who is Calvin Coolidge?"

Neither candidate had ever heard of him.

Yes, they'll have to wait.

Glittering Gold—

Real gold will glitter from the top stories of a skyscraper nearing completion.

Designed to withstand the acid test of the city's atmosphere, 14-carat gold, suspended in oil, was sprayed into the terra cotta before it was fired in the kilns.

It will have a distinct golden glaze under certain lights, the manufacturers say. The terra cotta on the lower floors has received a similar treatment with mettallic alumninum.

Chicago isn't the only city that has an "Al Capone."

A gentleman thus named achieved limited fame here when arrested on a disorderly conduct charge. He wants fame, though, for he is convinced that there is gold in his name.

For "half a grand," he will let someone interview him about his "mysterious past." He thinks his life story is worth a whole grand, but because of the depression, he's willing to let it go for half that much. He claims he has had experiences "that would make that Chicago boy blush."

The line forms to the right.

FARMERS MUST HELP THEMSELVES

The Federal Farm Board is no fairy godmother, warns its Chairman, Alexander Legge, in an informal report on his stewardship.

'It would be a wonderful thing," says Mr. Legge in The Country Home, "if we could utter a few magic words and turn all the pumpkins into coaches and all the wheat and corn and beans and cotton and cattel into gold. But there is no hope for that kind of farm relief."

A great and powerful Government has backed that plan with a fund of half a billion dollars. What has the Farm Board done with that money? And what has it been able to do for the farmer? And what does it hope to do?

Mr. Legge started out about 18 months ago with two or three clear facts. He believed, for instance, that the wheat farmer's troubles came from the fact that he produced too much wheat: in other words, he was being destroyed by his unsalable surplus. Since that time, the surplus has grown steadily, until today the surplus is enormous, not only in this coun-

After 18 months, Mr. Legge finds ganization of farmers for restriction only one possible solution—by or- of product and improved marketing. Probably a lot of people will throw up their hands and say, "For Lord's sake, you don't plan to start more farmers' organization! Haven't the farmers got enough organizations already?"

The answer, of course, is yes, plenty! If all the farm organization secretaries were to come to Washington in a body and march four abreast past the Capitol, the parade would be hours in passing. Nevertheless, they are not yet as effective as they should be, and farmers do not support them on a 100 per cent basis. Will the farmers join? That, according to Mr. Legge, is the vital question and on its answer hinges the success of the Farm oBard's efforts.

SOUND ADVICE
by your Fertilizer Dealer
No. 4
in a Series appearing in this newspaper

GIVE first thought to nitrogen this year in ordering fertilizers. It's nitrogen that gives your crops healthy growth and healthy yield. This year, more than ever, on account of unusual dry weather, nitrogen is most lacking in the soil.
Play safe. Buy plenty of Chilean Nitrate of Soda. I've got a big supply. Cheaper than it has been for years. New 100-lb. bags, too. Order now and be sure of your requirements.

Your Fertilizer Dealer

CHILEAN NITRATE now comes in new 100-lb. bags that make it more popular than ever. It always has been the dependable fertilizer of Southern farmers. Side dress, top dress with Chilean Nitrate...and increase your yields, quality and profits.
Be sure you specify "Chilean" when you order your nitrate. "Chilean" is the one important point to remember. It is your protection and your dealer's too. When you get "Chilean," then you'll get the real, money-making fertilizer — the natural nitrate. Remember the two kinds — Original Chilean (Crystalline) and Champion Brand (Granulated) both natural nitrate.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh r. But even that early there were rastic physics and purges for the relief f constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which ut in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, s a liquid vegetable remedy, intended r women, children and elderly people, they need just such a mild, safe el stimulant.

IT'S A GREAT LIFE; SAYS HE CANNOT PAY

A newspaper in Oklahoma published the following letter from one of its subscribers recently, after mailing out its year crop of subscription statements:

Anywhere, Anytime, Now.

Dear Sir:

I beg to inform you that my bank account makes it impossible for me to send you a check in response to your request for a remittance.

The state of my present financial condition is due to the effect of federal laws, state laws, county laws, corporation laws, by-laws, brother-in-laws, and outlaws that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through these various laws I have been held up, walked on, set on, sand bagged, battered and squeezed until I do not know where I am, what I am or why I am.

These laws compel me to pay a merchant tax, capital stock tax, excess profit tax, income tax, state auto tax, city auto tax, gas tax, tag tax, light tax, road tax, street tax, amusement tax, cigar tax, cigarette tax, real tax, school tax, sewer tax, syntax and carpet tax.

In addition to paying these taxes I am requested and required to contribute to every society or organization that the inventive mind of man can organize. To the society of John the Baptist, the Woman's Relief, the Navy League, the Children's Home Fund, the Policeman's Benefit, the Dorcas Society, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Belgium Relief, the Near East Relief, the Gold Diggers Home, also every dog, cat and humane hospital and every charitable institution in town, the Red Cross, the Purple Cross, the T. P. A., S. P. C. A., and others.

The government has so governed my business that I do not know who owns it. I am suspected, expected, inspected, disrespected. Examined, re-examined, informed, required, commanded, expelled and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every human need, desire or hope of the human race, and because I refuse to donate all I have and go out and beg, borrow, and steal more money to give away, I am cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about, held up, held down and knocked about and robbed until I am nearly ruined, so the only reason I am clinging onto life now is to see what in the hell is coming next.

Yours very truly,
Almost Anybody.

Jefferson County Builds New Courthouse

Here is the new $3,000 Jefferson County Courthouse in Birmingham, Ala., which will be ready for occupancy early in September. It is held by nationally known architects as the most beautiful building of its kind in the Nation and brings to the South a New type of architecture. The building next to the courthouse is the central headquarters of the Birmingham Public Library and Museum.

Birmingham, Ala., March 4.—Jefferson County's new courthouse, which when completed early in September will have cost more than $3,000,000, furnishes startling contrast to the little one-room log cabin structure which once stood some seven miles from Birmingham, the present county seat.

The new courthouse is the fifth to be built to serve Jefferson county

The first stood at a crossroads, two miles west of Powderly, Ala., which is seven miles from Birmingham.

The second stood in the center of Elyton, Ala., prior to the birth of Birmingham.

The third was built in Birmingham, as was the fourth—now in use—until the fifth, the $3,000,000 structure is completed.

Little is known of the first three courthouses in Jefferson county. There are no photographs of the old building.

The courthouse now in use—the fourth building—was considered too big when built in 1888. For many years its tower was nationally known as the tallest in the Southeast.

It is an off-shoot of Romanesque architecture, of the type developed by Richardson. It has three stories and a ground, or basement, floor, and is constructed of brick, terra cotta with stone trim. When planned, it was to accommodate 17 courts, an addition having been added in 1914. The addition is of four stories with a jail attached. As in all old buildings of that type, its walls are self supporting, with a slate roof.

There is one amusing incident connected with the moving of the county seat of Jefferson to Birmingham from Elyton. Following the moving the third Jefferson county courthouse was constructed.

Alabama came into the Union in 1820. Jefferson became a county in 1820 (prior to that it was a part of Blount county) and Elyton, Ala., a mining village, became the county seat in 1821.

In 1871 Birmingham was born.

As Birmingham made rapid progress in 1872, Colonel J. R. Powell, known as "The Duke of Birmingham" called upon the sheriff of Jefferson county to call an election to decide whether or not the county seat of Jefferson should be moved to Birmingham from Elyton.

That election was held under the loose election laws adopted by the Reconstruction Legislature which permitted a voter to cast his ballot at any precinct in the county without regard to residence, and under the operation of which the newly enfranchised "citizen of African descent" might vote at two or more places the same day with very little danger of detection.

Colonel Powell was a man who, when he made up his mind to accomplish a certain object, allowed no ordinary obstacle to defeat his purpose. Elyton citizens fought hard to retain the county seat.

Colonel Powell determined to capture the Court House and he at once organized a vigorous campaign. His plans were of a most elaborate and comprehensive character and were carried out in all details with consumate skill. On the day fixed for the election, the first Monday in May, 1873, he had prepared, on the lot selected in Birmingham for the future courthouse, a barbecue on a most extensive and liberal scale to feed the hungry voters which he proposed to bring to Birmingham.

He had perfected arrangements with the railroads to run special trains from the furthest confines of the county and perhaps beyond, and to transport free, every voter, without reference to "race, color or previous condition of servitude" who would vote his way.

About noon on the day of the election, the trains packed almost to suffocation with a dark mass of perspiring, hungry, humanity, rolled into Birmingham. Colonel Powell, mounted on a calico pony, with a drawn sword in his hand, was at the depot to marshall his forces and march them to the barbecue, by way of the voting polls.

Some wag let it be rumored that the tall, dignified man with the sword riding on the calico pony was General U. S. Grant, and forthwith every dusky voter swore he would vote as "General Grant" wanted him to.

Naturally the contest resulted in an overwhelming majority for Birmingham and the courthouse of Jefferson county was moved here to the new county seat.

Jefferson county's new courthouse is an immense, imposing structure, standing on the east side of Woodrow Wilson Park in the very heart of Birmingham, and adjoining the new Public Library.

The building occupies an area 280 by 185 feet and is ten stories high, including ground floor and basement. It is built of Indiana Lime stone.

The building proper is of steel frame, reinforced concrete pan floors. The total area covers 4,100,000 cubic feet, and the building is 138 feet high. The jail will be on the two top floors of the building with other floors given over to courtrooms, county offices, etc. A law library will be contained on the very top floor.

Architects were Holabird and Root of Chicago, with Harry B. Wheelock, Birmingham, associate. Jack B. Smith, representing the architects, superintended the construction.

Quarantine Ban Lifted At Kilby Prison

Quarantine of Kilby Prison because of an outbreak of spinal meningitis was lifted Monday and the transfer of 700 convicts to Atmore for the strawberry picking season will begin immediately.

Announcement that quarantine was lifted was made after a conference of convict department heads, W. F. Feagin, president of the board of administration, Roy Nolen and H. H. Stuart.

Five convicts died at Kilby Prison from miningitis and more than 100 inmates weer discovered as carriers and were immediately isolated. Work of controlling the disease and eradicating it has been under the supervision of Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer, and his staff.

Picking of strawberries from the state's 225-acre "patch" will begin April 1, and the crop, estimated at 80 cars, will be shipped to Eastern markets for disposal.

At the Convict Department it was stated that erection of portable 'shacks' in the prison enclosure at Atmore was practically completed.

Camp N, at Stapleton, where four convicts died from meningitis, still is under quarantine, Dr. Baker said Monday, adding that he was waiting for a report that the disease had been eradicated before lifting the ban.

REPORT ON PRODUCTION IN CHEVROLET PLANTS

February production of the Chevrolet Motor Company was 67,318 cars and trucks, according to W. S. Knudsen, president. While the total is 3,448 under that of January when 70,766 were produced, daily output was higher in February, with its three fewer working days, than in the previous month.

Final figures on Chevrolet's February production show an increase of 2,678 over preliminary reports and indicate that schedules originally set for the month were followed.

March schedules, according to President Knudsen, have been placed at 78,00 and confidence is expressed that the figure will be surpassed. Current factory employment of Chevrolet is approximately 34,500 men.

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

Wilsonville Bank Is Robbed By Experts

Wilsonville, Ala., March 24.—Yeggmen who entered the Wilsonville State Bank, Monday night escaped with currency estimated between $4,700 and $5,000, G. W. Carter, cashier, stated.

According to Carter the men worked with care and were evidently experienced cracksmen as they left not a trace and emptied the safe of its contents. He said they entered the bank by prying off the bank door and used an acetylene torch in getting into the heavy safe. Carter said the men must have been equipped with gas masks as the safe was equipped with anakin gas protective system, and that despite the fact that this gas was released it did not thwart the robbers.

The robbery was discovered by W. J. Weldon, president of the bank when he arrived at the bank Tuesday morning.

No trace of the robbers was found by officers and no car marks were seen around the back door where they entered. Carter said no one had seen or heard anything of the robbers during the night.

That several men did the job was evident in the fact that the large safe was wheeled from the vault to the main office and then the torch applied. Carter said the safe was half full of water and that there were two tubs of water left in the main office of the bank.

Nothing but currency was taken, he said, although the top of the note case had been burned to a crisp.

METHODIST ARE HAVING REVIVAL HERE THIS WEEK

Dr. N. B. McCloud Delivering Forceful Sermons to Many At Each Service

A revival meeting began at the Clanton Methodist church last Sunday night when a special musical program was presented through the efforts of Mrs. Percy M. Pitts. Alonzo Meek, eminent organist of Selma, assisted by Mrs. Roderick Beddow, soprano, of Birmingham, gave an organ recital.

Services are being held each morning throughout this week beginning at ten-thirty o'clock, and each evening at seven-thirty o'clock at the church with Dr. N. B. McCloud, Presiding Elder of the Selma District, delivering some splendid sermons.

There will be a special service this morning at eleven o'clock for high school students, according to Dr. D.W. Haskew, pastor of the local church. And at seven-thirty o'clock tonight will be a special young peoples night at the church, and all young people are urgently requested to be present.

Saturday morning of this week at 10:30 o'clock, the hour has been set aside for the children, and no services will be held Saturday night. Local talent will have charge of the music thruout the meeting, with a cordial invitation extended to the public to attend each service.

J. L. Conway and son, Wilbur, of the Isabella community were among the callers at the News office last Saturday, while in Clanton attending to business

Fiddlers' Convention At Verbena School

Much interest has been manifested in the announcement that the Tenth Annual Fiddlers' Convention would be held in the auditorium of the Verbena High School Friday evening, April 3. This convention, being the pioneer in this section, has grown in proportions every year, both as to interest on the part of the audiences and as to number of fiddlers. As the years have passed by the interest manifested has resulted in a number of new devotees to the art of the resined bow, and this year a number of younger men will try their skill with the old timers.

This year, as usual, a number of nice prizes will be awarded the contestants who win the upper places.

The prices of admission this year will be only fifteen cents for children and twenty-five cents for adults. Fiddlers will be admitted free, as will one accompanist for each fiddler.

Remember date, Friday, April 3, at 7:30 p.m. at Verbena High School.

HOME OF J. T. ROCKETT SLIGHTLY DAMAGED BY FIRE MONDAY

The home of J. T. Rockett, on Second Avenue, was slightly damaged by fire last Monday about noon. The damage was confined to the living room, walls and the roof, and was estimated at approximately $25.00, it was stated. The Volunteer Fire Department answered the call.

Mrs. H. T. Pipes is spending several days in Birmingham with her daughter, Mrs. Hughes Kennedy and Mr. Kennedy.

CLANTON STORES SHOWING PRETTY EASTER APPAREL

The many dry goods and ready-to-wear stores in Clanton are now making a gala showing of new Easter clothing for men, women and children. The windows are bedecked with the latest in hats, dresses, piece goods, shoes, hose, and other items of apparel.

Among those making these showings are The Leader from whom you will find an ad in this issue with attractive prices; The Fair, The Chicago Sales Company, Clanton Cash Store, J. R. Broadhead & Son, Falkenberry's Cash Store from whom you will find an ad in this week's issue with attractive prices on apparel, Robinson Dept. Store, and others. Visit these stores, read their ads, and buy your Easter outfit in Clanton. It is not necessary to go elsewhere to get your clothing.

Ex-Service Men Attention

In next week's issue of the News the story written by General John J. Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the A. E. F., will start.

This story is being published after a silence of something like twelve years by General Pershing. He tells of many things unknown about the World War by thousands of those men who fought over there, many of whom were from Chilton County. The title of this story is "My Experiences in the World War."

The story alone is worth the price of a subscription to the News, and if you are not already getting this newspaper, then subscribe at once and get this story which will begin next week.

TEACHERS ARE COMMENDED BY COUNTY SUPT.

Lawrence Gives Informantion Regarding Truck Drivers In Letter This Week

Due to some questions that have apparently come up concerning the naming of truck drivers for school buses in Chilton County for next year, B. Lawrence, superintendent of education gives some information regarding this in a letter this week. Mr. Lawrence also pays the school teachers of this county a well-earned tribute. The News quotes Mr. Lawrence as follows:

Many people are asking about the matter of when the County Board will appoint truck drivers for next year. A notice was put in the papers some few weeks ago that this would be attended to at their meeting the second Tuesday in May. Anyone wishing to bid for any route will please get their bid to me before the date mentioned above.

I wish to say also in this connection

POPLAR SPRINGS TO HAVE REGULAR EASTER SINGING

The announcement was made this week that the regular Easter Singing would be held at the Poplar Springs church, near Clanton on next Sunday, Easter. Everyone is invited to attend this singing.—W. M. DeVaughn, G. B. Jones, and W. F. Gilliland, Committee.

SCHOOL TERMS COMING TO A CLOSE IN CO.

Several Schools Closed Last Week; Others To Finish Term This Week

Many of the elementary schools over Chilton County are coming to the closing of their term for this year, and thirteen will be through with their work for the year after this week, according to information from the office of the Superintendent of Education here.

Those schools that have already completed their work are: Stanton Elementary, Maplesville Elementary, Adams, County Line, Shoults, New Harmony, and Isabella Elementary.

Those that will close Friday of this week are: Vermont, Morganville, Mullins, Culp, Mineral Springs and Flint Hill.

These are only the elementary grade schools. The high schools and junior high schools will continue for sometime yet.

LITTLE KATHRYN WARE GETS ARM BROKEN IN FALL SAT.

Little Kathryn Ware, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Ware, received a broken right arm last Saturday when she fell from a second story window at the rear of Matt's Lunch Shoppe. The break was not serious and Kathryn seems to be getting along nicely despite the fall of approximately fifteen feet.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Gowan and family returned Sunday from a pleasant motor trip to Kisciouski, Miss., where they spent several days as the guests of the former's mother.

ELECTED 2ND VICE-PRESIDENT OF EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

BUFORD LAWRENCE

Mr. Lawrence, superintendent of education of Chilton County, was elected second vice-president of the Alabama Educational Association at its regular meeting held in Birmingham last Thursday and Friday. This is the first time an official of the A. E. A., has ever been elected from Chilton County, and the people of this county should feel proud of Mr. Lawrence.

Thorsby Will Get New Business Place

As evidence that Thorsby, Alabama is coming to the front more than ever, another new business establishment is to open there this week, according to information received by the News.

This new place will be a soda fountain, and confectionery opened by C. C. Horton. It is located on the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway, adjoining the Franklin Garage, in a modern brick structure, right in the business section of the town.

Mr. Horton comes to Thorsby from Courtland, Alabama, where he was at one time connected with a newspaper. He expects to move his family to Thorsby also, and become a resident of that place. Fixtures for the confectionery have been installed and several workmen have been busy this week installing the fixtures and putting the building in first-class condition for the opening which is to be this week. Mr. Horton would like to have the people call in to see him at his new place and get acquainted. A representative of the News found Mr. Horton to be a very interesting gentleman, and judging from the efforts being put forth, he is going to make his place of business worthwhile.

MOTHER OF FORMER CLANTONIAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mrs. Rachel Weaver, age 70, was killed when struck by an automobile in Birmingham Monday night. The accident is said to have been unavoidable. Mrs. Weaver is the mother of Welcome Weaver, who married Miss Minnie Latham, the latter is well known by residents of Clanton.

MRS. J. P. BEAN SERIOUSLY ILL HOME NEAR MINERAL SPRINGS

Mrs. John P. Bean, wife of former commissioner John Bean, is seriously ill at her home near Mineral Springs community. Luther Bean, assistant postmaster at Clanton, has been at the bedside of his mother for the past two days.

METHODIST PASTOR AND WIFE RECEIVE MANY GIFTS MONDAY

A real good old-fashioned pounding was given Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Haskew at their home last Monday by members of the Methodist church.

Their pantry was filled with a bountiful supply of groceries, and many other useful items, and the smile on the face of Dr. Haskew when he tells of that "pounding" is proof enough that a tender spot was touched.

HON. J. B. ATKINSON IS CONGRATULATED ON C.M.T.C. WORK

Hon. J. B. Atkinson, prominent attorney of Clanton and former publisher of the Chilton County News, has been highly complimented on his work and interest in the Citizens Military Training Camps of Alabama this year. In a letter from Major S. R. Tupper, of The Infantry, U. S. Army, District Chief, to Mr. Atkinson, he had the following to say:

"At the close of the 1931 Citizens' Military Training Camp enrollment period in Alabama, which drew the greatest response since the beginning of the CMTC movement in 1921, I wish to express the appreciation of the War Department, and my personal appreciation, for the assistance and cooperation you rendered this year. I am sure that you find reward for your work in the knowledge that you have been of service to the Government and to the individual."

AMERICAN LEGION TO MEET HERE NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

The Chilton County Post of the American Legion will meet next Monday night at the courthouse for their regular meeting. All members and ex-service men are urged and invited to be present.

Poultry Car Brings $1305.62 To County

The cooperative poultry car that came through this county the past week stopping at Verbena, Clanton, Jemison was loaded with eight thousand, five hundred and forty-two pounds of poultry when it left.

From Verbena, 1145 pounds were loaded; Clanton 4598 pounds, and Jemison, 2799 pounds. The total amount paid out in cash to the farmers of this county for the poultry was $1305.62.

SAMUEL MARTIN RETURNED FROM CINCINNATI, O., SAT.

Samuel Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mell Martin, returned to Clanton last Saturday after spending some time in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he has been attending school on modern efficiency in undertaking, embalming, etc. He completed his studies there and at present will be connected with his father, well known funeral director of Clanton.

JACK WADE TO INSTALL NEW DIESEL ENGINE IN ICE PLANT

J. P. (Jack) Wade was in Clanton recently visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Wade, and while here told of a modern machine which is to be installed in his ice plant at Russellville, where he is also Chief of the Fire Department and an alderman.

This new machine is a Fairbanks-Morse Diesel engine, which uses crude oil for fuel, and is like the one now in use at the Clanton Ice Plant, of 120 horsepower. It is expected the engine will be installed about May 1st. Mr. Wade is to be congratulated on installing this piece of machinery in his ice plant at Russellville.

ORGAN RECITAL AT M.E. CHURCH ENJOYED BY LARGE NUMBER

The organ recital at the local Methodist church last Sunday night was enjoyed by a large congregation. This program was arranged through the efforts of Mrs. Percy M. Pitts. Alonzo Meek, an organist of note from Selma, assisted by Mrs. Roderick Beddow, soprano of Birmingham, took leads in the recital, which marked the opening of the revival at the church in progress this week.

EVAN PARRISH OFFERS CASH PRIZES FOR LARGEST MELON

In this issue of the News will be found an ad from the Southern Seed & Plant Company, of Clanton of which Evan Parrish is proprietor. In this ad Mr. Parrish states that he will give five dollars in cash prizes for the largest watermelon raised from a certain kind of seed this year. Read the ad and find out the particulars on this offer.

CLANTON GETS HEAVY HAIL LAST TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Hail fell in torrents for a few minutes last Tuesday afternoon about two o'clock in Clanton, covering the streets, resembling a heavy fall of snow. The stones, although falling fast and heavy, were not large enough to do any damage. This is the first hail for Clanton in sometime.

Take Care of The Pheasants

The News has been informed that quite a few pheasants have been turned loose in the wooded sections in the Mulberry Community recently by Dr. V. J. Gragg, of Clanton. It is intended that these birds are to live there and raise.

Dr. Gragg has gone to considerable expense to bring these birds into Chilton County, and the people should take all pains to see that they are protected, and not killed. Other persons are raising pheasants here and expect to turn many out right away and try to get them inhabitated throughout the county. It will take some time for these birds to adjust themselves and start to hatching.

GEN. PERSHINGS STORY IN NEWS OF NEXT WEEK

Much Interest Being Shown In Coming Story On The World War

General John J. Pershing's story, titled, "My Experiences in The World War," is scheduled to start in the Chilton County News in next week's issue.

This story which is being released in Alabama April 6th, is one of the most appalling stories ever written on the great conflict between the nations, and written by a man who was placed in charge of the American Army, the man who directed the acts of our great and glorious army of fighting Americans. In this story, General Pershings tells of many of the things that occurred behind the lines that were of great importance in guiding the destiny of the millions of men fighting for their country.

Do not fail to start at the beginning of this fine article. It will grow more and more interesting each week. There is perhaps no doubt that this story will sell in book form at a cost much greater than the cost of a subscription to the News, and if you are not getting this newspaper, then have it sent to you now, so that you will be able to read General Pershing's experiences during the World War.

W. W. Williams, of the Concord-Billingsley community was among the visitors to the News office Monday.

CRIMINAL COURT CASES DISPOSED OF THIS WEEK

No Indictment Against Mrs. W. B. Harper For Shooting Husband

The Criminal Term of the Circuit Court of Chilton County has been in session here since Monday, with Judge George F. Smoot, of Wetumpka, presiding and Hon. Winston Huddleston, Circuit Solicitor, prosecuting for the State. The docket is scheduled through today.

The Grand Jury was empanneled last week, with W. L. Popwell, as foreman. They made their report last Thursday. No indictment was returned against Mrs. W. B. Harper for the shooting of her husband on March 15th at their home in Mountain Creek by the Grand Jury. The case of William Helton, of

RELATIVE OF PAXSON COUPLE DIED IN FRANCE

Screen Actress Plunges Car Over 200-Foot Cliff Last Saturday

A former Alabama screen beauty, Mrs. David E. Townsend, who is better known to theatre goers as "Peggy Davis" plunged to her death last Saturday when the car she was driving went over a 200-foot precipice in Nice, France.

Mrs. Townsend is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Paxson, of Thorsby, Alabama and is well known in this county, having visited her grandparents in Thursby before departing to spend several years in France with her husband, an English millionaire

A coroner's inquest brought out that the former actress, considered among the most beautiful women in the smart set along the Rivera, had brought about the act as suicide, however, her husband stated that he is not in the least inclined to believe that his wife purposely killed herself. Townsend is a wealthy stock broker from Sydney, Australia

The actress, famous as Peggy Davis, was born in Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 31. 1905. Her name was Mary Margaret Laird, daughter of Mrs. Inez Paxson Laird. Although Mrs. Townsend is a Protestant, the Bishop of Monte Carlo has granted permission to bury her in the Catholic Cemetery at Eze, France. Funeral services were held yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Paxson of Thorsby did not know of the tragic death of their granddaughter until a correspondent of the Birmingham Age-Herald called at their home Monday to secure a photograph of the dead actress.

LOCAL FIRE DEPARTMENT HAS THREE CALLS IN FEW DAYS

The local Volunteer Fire Department answered three calls during the past few days. The first call was to Mullins & Moore Store on Main street early Friday morning. The blaze at this place was discovered by Night Officer Sherrod, who was making his regular rounds. The blaze had not gained but very little headway when Officer Sherrod discovered it, and immediately turned in the alarm. The fire was at the back of the store, and did little damage before the firemen extinguished it.

The second call came Sunday afternoon about three o'clock at the home of Ben Roberts just west of town. This turned out to be a false alarm, as residents there became frightened at smoke in the home apparently from a leaking chimney. The third call came Monday about noon, to the home of J. T. Rockett. This fire did small damage.

CAN YOU IMAGINE THE WORLD IN FIFTY YEARS?

If you can't, then you must see the picture to be put on by the Kiwanis Club at the Wadesonian Theatre on April 13, 14 and 15. This picture will show you how to imagine this world of ours fifty years from now.

That is some jump, but nevertheless some person had a great imagination, and put it into pictures so that the other people could imagine what things look like a half century from 1931.

It's a great picture, so says those Clanton people who have seen it. Don't forget the dates, April 13, 14, and 15. Make your plans to see this movie showing the imaginary world fifty years from now.

Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

Listen, young folks, there is a special service for you at our church Thursday night at 7:30. Make your plans now to attend this service. Our meeting is still in progress. We want the presence of the young and the older.

Saturday morning at 10:30 we are going to have a children's service for all under twenty years of age. Parents, see to it that your child does not forget the hour. Come with all the children in your home.

We are looking for 200 at Sunday school next Sunday at 9:45 A. M. We have two great services planned, one at 11 A. M. and the other at 7:30 P.M. The meeting will close Sunday night. If you do not have a new Easter bonnet for next Sunday, come to church, that old one will do. God is not going to look at your clothes, but He is going to look at you.

J. M. ARMSTRONG DIED AT HIS HOME NEAR THORSBY, SUNDAY

J. M. Armstrong, age 54, died at his home near Thorsby last Sunday, following a severe attack of pneumonia. He was born in Chilton County on September 28, 1876, and has been a resident of this county practically all his life. He was married to Miss Frances Smith something like thirty-two years ago.

Funeral services were held last Monday at Macedonia with Rev. B. Lawrence officiating. Surviving is the widow, and two daughters, Mrs. E. M. Atchison of Clanton, and Mrs. Martha Watkins.

How To Have Good Gardens Is Told

By C. E. Stapp, County Agent, and Julian Brown, Auburn Specialist

The past year has revealed many important facts relative to our home garden work. There are several groups of farmers to be considered. Some do not avail themselves of the opportunity to have a home garden; others plant only at certain seasons when only the most common vegetables are planted. Even with some of our best gardeners, there is a decided shortage of stored vegetables, such as potatoes, turnips, etc. By investing only a very few dollars in good garden seed and spending a few minutes planting and working the garden each day, every farmer in Alabama can have plenty of vegetables to eat, either fresh, canned or dried, "regardless of how hard times may be."

During the next few weeks all or a good part of the following vegetables should be found growing in every home garden: Asparagus, beans, beets, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, chard, collards, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, mustard, onions, parsnips, English peas, Irish potatoes, radish, spinach, turnips, tendergreens, cucumbers, eggplant, squash, peppers and tomatoes.

Set at least 50 crowns of Mary Washington asparagus in one side of the garden at an early date. For a good supply of leafy vegetables plant turnips, tendergreen, mustard, spinach, and lettuce. Plant all of these at once and fertilize liberally with nitrogen to rush to edible sizes. Plant one of the spring types of spinach, such as Bloomsdale, King of Denmark or Aragon. Plant the New Zealand later in the spring. For head lettuce, plant a variety such as Iceberg or New York. Big Boston is a good variety for those not so anxious to produce crisp heads. Where cauliflower, broccoli, and Brussels sprouts are to be used they should be planted at once. Much better results will be secured now if you will get plants and set them. Plants should also be used in starting the onions and cabbage. Copenhagen or one of the Wakefields should prove to be the very best variety of cabbage for spring. Of the onions, a few plants should be set of both the Bermuda and American kinds. The Yellow Bermuda and Prizetaker are very good varieties.

For root crops, plant a good supply of carrots, radish, beets, and parsnips. If you do not grow a fall crop of Irish potatoes, plant enough this spring to supply you until next year. Nothing is so easily grown and yet so important as a good supply of Irish potatoes at all times.

The cucumbers, peppers, eggplant, squash, and tomatoes should not be planted or set in the fields until danger of frost is over. However, you may use "hotkaps" or some other such means of protection for these young plants and thus have them reach maturity much earlier.

In order that the garden work this year may not be overlooked, the following should be done at this time: Plan the garden for the year, include a wide variety of vegetables, use care in selecting varieties, and order now plenty of seed to carry out this plan. Still better, order more seed than you think you will need (the cost is very small) and then you will have plenty with probably some to use next year. Also, purchase a small hand dust gun, and some arsenate of lead and nicotine sulphate for fighting chewing and sucking insects. They are sure to appear.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

Less than a week ago a cold wave swept over the North West, and threatened to invade Central Alabama, killing all vegetation to the Gulf of Mexico. Young gardens, fruit and strawberries were in great danger. Those having money invested in these things were anxious and doubtless they uttered many a prayer for the protection of their property. A good Providence held back the cold wind and scattered the coming storm, and our food supplies were left unharmed. Have you been grateful? Was that a mere threat of nature, or was it the smiles of our Father in heaven? It may be "Old Fashioned" but I am one of those people who believe in a God who is able to control nature. God can scatter a storm with as much ease as He could still Galillee. How thankful we should be that the freeze did not come. "God is good and his mercy endureth forever."

I was stopping at a farmer's home. An old hen started her cackle in a fence corner not far away. The man of the house sad to his little boy, "Henry, run out there and look for that nest." Then he turned to me saying, "Old Red Top never cackles unless she has laid an egg." That was one redeeming virtue in that old hen. She never cackled until she had done something worth while. Not so with people. I have heard many a person "Cackle loud and long," and he had done nothing at all. In fact I know some old feathered roosters and hens who do nothing but cackle. It is not annoying to listen to the cackle of a hen when she has done something, but it tries our patience to listen to the cackle of a hen that never lays an egg. Do something worth while before you cackle.

The other day the pastor went into a place of business where one of his flock was engaged in honest toil. His clothes were smeared with oil and grease and his hands were black with cinders and grime. The preacher reached out his hand to take the hand of his brother in the church. The man drew back saying, "Excuse me pastor, my hands are too black to shake hands with you." The pastor replied, "It matters not how black your hand may be, my brother, give it to me, if you have a real man on the other end of it." It matters not how black the hand may be, if there is a real man swinging that hand around, it is good enough to go into the hand of another man. God bless those horny hands that are attached to the bodies of real men. If the heart is right the hands do not matter.

I walked around a patch of beautiful corn. The fodder was ready to pull and the big ears of corn were hanging all over the rows. I traveled on until I came to the last row and to my astonishment I found the stalks yellow and they carried nothing but "Nubbins." The squirrels had come in from the woods and they had literally torn every nubbin into strings, and no corn was to be found on the outside row. I go to many a church and see good people crowding toward the front and center of the church. The nearer the back of the church they crowd the more like "Nubbins" they become in a religious sense. The squirrel eaten bunch are to be found crowded on the back seat. I am ashamed to sit on the back seat in a church for fear that folks will think out loud what they really think me to be.

The old Peacock flew to the top of the fence, and in the early morning he spread his feathers out to catch the rays of the rising sun. He glanced back at the beautiful display made by his feathers, and he screamed, "O, what a Peacock am I." He thought himself to be somewhat as he looked at his silk dress, but his feathers were fastened to an old tough bird. Pride is to be found in the heart of many an old tough bird in this world. We have pride of lace, pride of face, pride of race, pride of place and pride of grace. We glance over ourselves and say, "What a man am I." I have seen many a "Tough Bird" clad in wool and silks.

I heard one of Clanton's most esteemed women say this week, "All of my prayers are answered." Then she modified her statement with this explanation, "I do not mean to say that God gives to me every time I pray, just the thing that I ask for. Many a time He answers directly according to my petition. Then again He gives me something else that I need more than the thing I am asking for. Then He sometimes gives me a positive No." That is what I call faith. God can answer your prayer by saying "No" to you just [illegible] same as if He were to say "Yes." The baby begs its father for his [illegible], and the father answers the pleadings of that child with "No." We ask for many things that we should not have, and God answers our prayers with a refusal. God answers our prayers in three ways—by giving us what we ask for, by giving us something better than we ask for and by saying "No" to us.

News In Brief

February production of automobiles reached a total production of 230,364 units, which was an increase of 29 per cent over January and the highest mark in six months, according to shipping reports of the manufacturers.

Early this year unemployment in the United States totaled 6,050,000 persons, according to Secretary Lamont of the Department of Commerce, who explained that "these are the persons out of a job, able to work, and looking for a job."

The 1931 convention of the National Editorial Association will be held in Atlanta, Ga., June 1, 2, 3, and 4, and Marcy B. Darnall, editor of the Florence Herald and president of the Alabama Press Association, is backing the movement. This State will be well represented, Mr. Darnall said.

In the war-torn sections of France all but 3,900 of the 640,000 buildings destroyed during the World War have been rebuilt during these twelve years, according to a press statement March 18. Of the 4,000,000 acres of farm land ruined during the war all but 100,000 acres have been restored to cultivation. About $3,000,000,000 has been paid in cash damages in the areas destroyed, with about $240,000,000 more to be paid.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, has been elected president of the American Farm Bureau Federation of which he has been vice president several years. He succeeds Sam H. Thompson who was appointed by President Hoover as a member of the Federal Farm Board. O'Neal is an Alabama farmer, owning and operating a farm near Florence before he became an official of the Farm Bureau.

REASON FOR MORE POTASH

Nitrogen is a most valuable plant food for cotton. It must be present in order that phosphate and potash will give their most profitable returns. On the other hand, if nitrogen is used without phosphate and potash or only with partially enough of these materials to make a balanced fertilizer, it will give little profit, and on some soils, at present prices, the nitrogen will be applied at a loss.

Often in top-dressing cotton with nitrogen the nitrogen is thrown badly out of balance with respect to both phosphate and potash. Take the case of applying 100 pounds of nitrate of soda or other nitrogen goods in addition to a 300 pound per acre application of 10-4-4. This makes a poorly balanced fertilizer for cotton, the composite analysis of which is approximately 8-8-3. There is about two and a half times as much nitrogen as potash in this combination. Such being the case there is little wonder that hundreds of farmers have been getting such remarkable returns from using 6 to 8 per cent potash in their pre-planting mixtures going to cotton, or using 50 to 100 lbs. of muriate of potash with each 100 pounds of nitrogen material used as a top dressing. Then too, to save the trouble of mixing, farmers in all parts of the cotton belt are using ready mixed nitrogen - potash top - dressers with such analysis as 0-9-12, 0-10-10 and 0-10-15.

Painful Condition

"When I was just a girl at home," writes Mrs. B. F. Riggan, of Baird, Texas, "I took Cardui for cramping and pains in my side and back, and it helped me at that time.

"After I was married, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition. I suffered a great deal with my back, which was so weak it hurt me to get up or when I would stand on my feet. I fell off in weight.

"A friend of mine, seeing how bad I felt, advised me to take Cardui, which I did. By the time I had taken two bottles, I felt stronger and better than I had in a long time."

FACTS ABOUT EASTER

Easter Sunday, which falls on April 5 this year, is observed by Christians in commemoration of Christ's resurrection, but not as an actual anniversary, as its date varies from year to year, in accordance with a method of computing it adopted by the Council of Nice in the year 325.

The custom of celebrating Easter is really an outgrowth of the Jewish Passover. There is no trace of its observance as a Christian festival in the New Testament or in the writings of the apostolic fathers. In fact, neither Christ nor the apostles enjoined the keeping of this or any other festival.

But as most of the early Christians were derived from the Jewish church, many of the old Jewish festivals continued to be observed by them and gradually passed into the Christian calendar.

The name of Easter is derived from Easter, the Anglo-Saxon goddess of spring and many customs which have marked the day's observance are drawn from pagan sources. In the ancient church the celebration of Easter lasted eight days, but after the eleventh century it was limited to three, later to two, and finally to one.

The proper time for the observance of Easter has been the subject of bitter controversy among various Christian groups. In the year 197 Pope Victor excommunicated Polycrates, bishop of Ephesus, and his entire Asiatic following for not conforming to the Roman custom. The Greek church did not adopt the Roman date until 1923, so that only during the last eight years has the entire Christian world observed Easter simultaneously.

According to present usage Easter can not occur earlier than March 22 or later than April 25. The last time it fell on March 22 was in 1818, after which some three centuries must elapse before it occurs so early again. It fell on April 25 the last time in any year of the present century.

Of all Easter customs the use of Easter eggs is the most universal. This is also of pagan origin, the egg having been considered a symbol of immortality by the ancients.

"INSIDE" INFORMATION

Serve different kinds of cereal for breakfast. The same kind every morning becomes monotonous. Salt the cereal sufficiently and train the children to eat it without sugar.

A simple scorch stain can often be removed by moistening the spot with water and placing in the sun. For more serious cases on white cotton or linen, hydrogen peroxide may be used in this way: moisten a white cotton cloth with it, place over the stain, cover with a dry cloth, and iron with a medium hot iron. Do not allow the iron to come in contact with the fabric after it is moistened with peroxide or with the moist cloth used over it. The iron may leave rust stains on the garment if care is not exercised.

General Pershing's Story Of The World War

The News is glad that it is able to offer to the people of Chilton County the opportunity to read the story written by General John J Pershing of our country's part in the great World War. No other man could write such an account of that was as has General Pershing. Named Commander-in-Chief and given a free hand by President Wilson, many of the important decisions had to be made by General Pershing himself. No doubt, more than any other man, he knows more of the jealousies that existed between the leaders of the allied armies and he tells of those things with the utmost frankness, in his story "My Experiences in the World War," which will start in the News next week.

Perhaps no other man knew what a struggle it was to have the American soldiers organized in Europe as an independent army, and not brigaded in with the British, French, and Italian armies where no doubt their identity would have been completely lost. Over and over this plan was urged upon our general. It was argued that our soldiers were not prepared for independent service and that there was not time to give them adequate training. But against all this, General Pershing stood out with determination. The American soldiers became an American Army and their record is one that will shine all the more brilliantly with the passing of the years.

Every good citizen will want to read this wonderful account of the great World War, about the things that perhaps have never before come to light and written by a man who is best qualified to write about them. Every pupil in the higher grades of the schools in the county should read the story. It will no doubt have a tendency to make better citizens and more patriotic citizens of all of us.

o-o-o-o

What Do You Owe Your Community?

Most of us are more conscious of what our community owes us than we are what we owe our community. Some people go so far as to advocate a theory that the world owes them a living, which is properly looked upon with disfavor. But the best citizens take it for granted that the community in which they live owes them certain things, as good roads and streets, protection in their person and property, schools, churches, etc. It is proper that we expect and demand these things for we pay taxes and make contributions for these purposes. But there are certain other things which our community gives to us for which we are as much obligated to consider as any of the above.

Primarily, this discussion will concern itself with the earning-power that our community gives its citizens and the obligations which this earning-power thrusts upon us. The idea is too prevalent that what we get in our pay check, or what we earn in our business or profession, is completely and wholly ours, with no further obligation to anybody. It is true that no individual has any right to influence the way we shall dispense our earnings. But the community in which our money was earned has a valid claim to our consideration. It has a first claim. It is old exhortation, but fundamental that it "pays to trade at home." This community gave the opportunity to earn. You might be as wise as Solomon and as good a business man as has ever been madé, but your earning power would be on a par with Robinson Crusoe if it was not for your community. Neither is this fact altered by any line of work you may be in. Your community makes it possible for you to earn. In the sense above mentioned we do not mean to consider a community entirely by precinct lines or other arbitrary ways, but in the sense that where your money is earned is a part of your community and it should receive first consideration when you go to spend that money. The point may well be illustrated by an incident that happened in a political campaign not so long ago. A certain candidate went into one of the stores in his county to make a purchase. When told the price he replied that he could get the same article in another place out of the county for a few cents less. The clerk replied that perhaps he would also get his votes there, too.

In our multitude of industries and lines of endeavor there are comparatively few that create new wealth. In Chilton County agriculture and the lumber industry are our chief producers of new wealth. If this new wealth which is being produced here is consistently sent away to new markets without serving our people here, the entire economic structure of our county, which is primarily baesd on these two things, must surely suffer.

Our business men and others are as surely obligated to do their share toward furnishing a satisfactory market for these basic products, as they have a right to ask for the business which this new wealth creates. Every individual has a part to play, and the success of the community, and himself as a part of the community, is determined by how well the individuals do their share.

The purpose of this editorial is to make a plea for home patronage, both buying and selling. It would drive home the point that when other things are equal, or practically so, it pays to give home people and home business the first consideration. And further, that whatever the faults of our home people and institutions, we are in some measure at least, responsible, and are obligated to do our part toward making them right. Don't send your money away when you can get just as much for it at home. Make a try at home first. Support your community and your county with your business patronage as you do with your taxes and charitable contributions. Not for charity's sake, no, but for the preservation of your own earning-power, yes.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

> "We run carelessly to the precipice, after we have put something before us to prevent us seeing it."—Pascal.

* * * *

"Unus quisque sibi Deum fingit. So far from making it a rule to believe a thing because you have heard it, you ought to believe nothing without putting yourself into the position as if you had never heard it. It is your own assent to yourself and the constant voice of your own reason, and not of others, that should make you believe. Belief is so important. A hundred contradictions might be true. If antiquity were the rule of belief, men of ancient time would then be without rule.

"Ordinary people have the power of not thinking about that which they do not wish to think." 'Do not meditate on the passages about the Messiah,' said a man to his son. Thus are false religions preserved, and even the true one, in regard to many persons. But there are some who have not the power of thus preventing thought, and who think so much the more as they are forbidden. These undo false religions, and even the true one, if they do not find solid arguments."

"To deny, to believe, and to doubt well, are to a man what the race is to a horse."—From Pascal's Thoughts.

* * * *

If by chance, you did not get the true ring of the above quotations from "Pascal's Thoughts," then read it again. You might be able to connect it with some of the opinions expressed by myself in the past. "Rem viderunt, causum non viderunt."

* * * *

Rather deep doings for a person of such a mind as mine is—because I really do not delve so much into such passages to put into this column, but that one from Pascal seemed to fit so well, I just couldn't resist the temptation to use it, and I hope you will be able to make a connection without my having to be too frank. It could possibly be taken as an apology from me, or an explanation of why I say some things.

* * * *

The musical program arranged through the efforts of Mrs. Percy Pitts, at the Methodist church Sunday night was most inspiring. I had heard and read a lot about Mister Alonzo Meek, the eminent organist, and rather expected to see an old man, with a bushy head of hair, and an air that would have gotten my goat. But instead, I saw a very clean-cut young man, with a hair cut that I admired, and well dressed. I also noticed his gentlemanly manners and admired them. Truly, he knows his organs,—pipe organs, so to speak.

And Mistress Roderick Beddow—a most charming lady, young lady, in my opinion. Beauty plus talent plus a voice that rather fascinated me for a moment. Too, I had often heard of Mrs. Beddow in Birmingham among the social circles, but the pleasure of meeting her has not yet been mine—unfortunately. Gracefulness—good taste in dress—personified, truly an attractive woman. Would like to see and hear her and Mr. Meek again—mostly the former.

Hey Ho! The Great Dooker To The Rescue

In an appeal to the Great Dooker Pooker, International Authority on the Subject of Wimmin, originator of the famous Dooker Pooker Pucker, and a shining star in The Coal Bin of the S. G. N. of Birmingham, he comes to my rescue this week:

DOUG:

"What right have the wimmin down there got to pick on you? Aint you CHILTON COUNTY'S CERTIFIED CRITTER-SIZER by appointment, decree and degree? I ask you.

"O wimmin of Chilton County, I'm ashamed of you!

"But fear not, Doug: I have rushed to you a generous suppy of POOKER'S PRETTY PILLS which must be took only according to directions.

"Now you may occupy an enviable position: due to your expertness in the use of the D.-P. PUCKER, you are charged with an irresistible force; and with the aid of the Pills, you become impregnably fortified with invulnerable immovability. That the twain may never meet, I'm giving you absent treatment.

"From now on, it will be dangerous for the wimmin to monkey around you and I don't think you will have any more trouble. If you do, I'll come down there myself and then they will be sorry or something."

DOOKER POOKER.

P. S. If you find Pooker's Pretty Pills are too powerful, you may dilute them with a little TNT.

That is proof that I am the Certified Critter Sizer in these parts, duly appointed. Haven't received the pills yet, but when I do, I'll certainly put them to good usage. Many thanks, O Great Dook. I'll be seeing you.

* * * *

Chilton County again to the front. B. Lawrence elected second vice-president of the Alabama Education Association. Another notch chipped into the pole of recognition by the world of Chilton County and its vast assets. Mr. Lawrence made a broad step that time, but not too broad for a man like him. I had predicted something like that to occur to him long before now, and I trust that he will be able to carry that distinction as it should be carried. Now, who is going to be next to put another notch into that pole?

* * * *

Before I forget, I want to compliment that young business man on that letter written to me last week, giving me Hail-Columbia. It was a well written letter—well worded, although rather frank. So frank that I was surprised that a man of such figure in financial circles of this section would write it. The efficiency of newspaper reporters, as it were.

* * * *

Have you noticed the good pictures that the Wadesonian Theatre is booking these days? Last week's program was fine throughout. You will notice that the week's program of the theatre is carried in this newspaper each week.

Student, 22, At County Line, Completes Two Grades In Three Months Time

o-o-o-o

By Mrs. W. L. Murdoch, in The Birmingham News

It has been a great temptation to say in every state that illiteracy was being removed so rapidly that it could almost be said that it was now negligible. This was done by some persons but after all figures tell the story and, as the facts are coming out, it is seen that still there is so much to be done in such states as Alabama that one can only say it is being removed as fast as possible with the funds available.

The experience of Virginia is interesting here. Virginia, one of the proudest states in the commonwealth of states, was disposed to dispute the figures as to her illiteracy and was resentful of criticism.

Today she has completely reversed this policy and is heralding to her people the facts, and with an awakened people she is fighting this problem in a most effective way. Indeed, so excellent is her program now that Secretary Wilbur has publicly congratulated the state.

There is an old saying, "Once the American people know of a wrong, they lose no time in trying to right it." This may be altogether too optimistic a view to take as to some our our wrongs, but certainly it has been true as to this quetsion of illiteracy.

Opportunity Classes

Alabama has been continuing her program for this work, having opportunity classes, as they are called, in many parts of the state, the economic situation having made the intensive program of the Spring impossible.

In many places it is possible only to hold a short session of such schools and they are eagerly attended. Miss Clutie Bloodworth, State Department of Education, sends a story of County Line School in Chilton County.

This school won the second prize offered by the Colonial Dames for perfect attendance at an opportunity school.

Such stories as this simply show what it means to these fine young men and women in our rural districts to be able to read and write and also to understand the value of money. This young man wrote his first check and the writer has a duplicate, and no one who has had all life's opportunities can quite undtrstand what this meant to him.

County Line Opportunity School opened March 10, 1930, and closed April 18. This was a small school, enrolling only 16 pupils, but seven of the 16 were perfect in attendance and not one pupil attended less than 24 of the 30 days taught.

One Pupil 62

The oldest pupil was a woman 62 and the teacher reported her as one of the star pupils of the beginners' class. The youngest pupil was a boy 16 in the second grade. Eight of the 16 enrolled were beginning in the a, b, c, of school training.

Miss Leila Smith, the teacher, interested these people because in July when she opened the doors of the little one-room schoolhouse for the "grown folks" many of her pupils came back for another try "at book learnin'." Among the number attending the second term was a tall, smiling, flaxen-haired young fellow just 22 named Grover Smith.

Grover went to school two weeks once when a very small youngster. The seats may have been too high for such short legs, the teacher may not have known what to do with such a little fellow, but the chances are that the walk to school was too long when his legs were so short and the times too hard when his legs got longer. Whatever the reason, Grover did not know how much was due him for filling up the cotton sacks on a long Summer's day and how much was due him for cutting crossties. Grover had never been able to cast his first vote.

In the Opportunity School, Grover mastered the three R's with rapidity. In the first term he read through Book One of the "Country Life" series. In the second term he completed the second and made a good start on the third. In fact, in three months he did a full nine months' work of public school work.

Likes School

Miss Bloodworth says:

"Grover likes school, and he says: 'Yes, I read the newspapers now every time Mr. Bailey lets me have his. No, I ain't never been to a Sunday School. I did not want to go 'cause I could not read. The first week at school was pretty tough, then I sorter got the hang of it.' "

Then she asked him about arithmetic. "Sure, I do know a lot about that now," he said. "I can figure what is due me for picking cotton and I can find out what a bale of cotton is selling for when I have just a half to deal with."

Then Miss Bloodworth told him that he could go on and prepare for high school and really get an education.

His fine teeth gleamed in an embarrassed grin as he said in his boyish way: "Gee, I'd sure like that."

Miss Bloodworth feels that this work is so vital to our young men and women and such stories show so clearly that all they want is the chance, she is eager for all Alabamians to know of it.

Work In City

In our own city we have continued the work through our fine night schools and the tremendous enrollment shows how eager are our people for educational opportunity.

The truth is we as a state are growing in population so rapidly and our educational needs increase with this growth far in excess of our funds, so that to take Alabama from her place as fourth from the bottom in illiteracy is going to mean some great gifts, some bequests, some interests from big fortunes, or some readjustment of the school funds which will make possible more and more opportunity schools.

Merely fitting the need of the growing population with increased school facilities is not going entirely to take care of this; it needs increased help, increased appreciation, and better understanding on the part of all the people of the state.

Report Of Recent Grand Jury

Following is the report of the Grand Jury empanelled last week:

State of Alabama, Chilton County.
To Hon. Geo. F. Smoot as Judge of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama:

We, the grand jury empanelled for the January term of the Circuit Court after receiving your Honor's most able charge entered upon our investigations of the matters that came before us as grand jurors and herewith submit the following report:

During our investigation we have considered 41 cases and have examined 129 witnesses and art returning herewith 26 true bills.

We have examined the fee book of the Probate Judge and find it neatly kept and correct in so far as we were able to ascertain. We have examined the bonds of the various county officials and find that they are ample for the protection of the public and on our examination of the sheriff's account with the state for feeding prisoners we find it being kept in accordance with the law. On our examination of the office of the County Superintendent of Education we find that his books, records and papers are being kept neatly and fully in accordance with the law in so far as we were able to ascertain.

We have made a personal inspection of the County Jail and find that the prisoners confined therein are being well fed and cared for with reasonable comfort, and on our inspection of the alms house we find that it is being well handled by those in charge and that the occupants get meals and attention in so far as the arrangements for taking care of the inmates will reasonably permit.

We wish to thank the Sheriff and his deputies for the prompt manner in which they secured witnesses that we needed to complete our labors and for the conveniences given us during our stay as Grand Jurors.

The Grand Jury wishes to especially to thank your Honor for the very able charge given us when we were first empanelled. It has been most helpful to us throughout all our investigations.

Now having complied to the best of our ability with your Honor's charge we respectfully ask that we be dismissed until such time as your Honor may see fit and think proper to have us again convene.

This March 26th, 1931.

W. L. POPWELL,
Foreman.

A sure-fire method of ridding a community of flies is suggested by an Italian scientist. The method is simple enough, being merely that of spraying all garbage with a mixture of molasses, arsenic and water, but the difficulty lies in getting everybody to do it. Mussolini has ordered its adoption in Italy, and, being who he is, may get the desired results.

Home of George Ward Is Beautiful in Summer

This is Vestavia" the beautiful Shades Mountain home of George B. Ward of Birmingham. The picture was taken from the aid by flying photographers of the 106th Observation Squadron, Alabama National Guard.

Birmingham, Ala., March 31.—All Alabama is invited to Birmingham during the months of May and June, particularly when the rose gardens of this city will be in full bloom, and the mountainsides will be covered with a profusion of wildflowers.

Of outstanding beauty during those two months will be the home of George B. Ward, former of Birmingham and a prominent broker. On the very top of Shades Mountain, overlooking the rolling Shades Valley, stands "Vestavia" the unique home of Mr. Ward.

It is famed thruout the nation for its architectural oddity, and is even more noted for its wonderful gardens where literally thousands of roses bloom during May and June.

"Vestavia" is an exact copy of the Temple of the Vestal Virgins which once stood a short distance from Rome. In that temple, during the ancient days, the Vestal Virgins were the priestesses of the goddess "Vesta" who was sacred to the Romans as the protector of the home hearth fires. It was the duty of the Vestal Virgins to keep the fire of the hearthstone burning eternally.

Mr. Ward's home is a riot of color when the roses are in bloom. Huge half-hoops of steel bear thousands of full-blown climbing roses, and the gardens are filled with numerous others. "Vestavia" is within easy driving distance and is located on a paved highway a few miles east of the Montgomery Highway, about six miles south of Birmingham.

On designated Sundays throut the rose-blooming period, Mr. Ward throws the gates to his grounds and the doors to his home open to the public, certain days being set aside exclusively for white visitors and others for colored people.

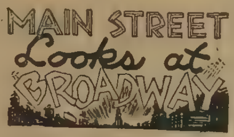
Essay Contest On Goodyear Tire Still Open Until April Fourth

Due to the delay in the arrival of the big Goodyear tire, said to be the largest tire in the world, at Dief's Service Station, the essay contest opened for students of the Local High School is still in progress, according to Mr. L. E. Diefenderfer, local Goodyear dealer.

This contest is for the best article written about the huge Goodyear tire, that will be in Clanton this morning until about ten o'clock, having arrived here yesterday afternoon.

Several valuable prizes are being offered by Dief's Service Station on these articles. The contest will close Saturday afternoon, April 4th, and all articles must be turned in to Dief's Service Station not later than midnight Saturday night. The prizes offered consist of a new Goodyear tire of a specific size, an inner tube, and cash prizes. Get into this contest, high school students. Judges have been appointed and the winning stories will be published in the News.



Damages and Costs—

Vandalism in Central Park—including such acts as making off with "Keep Off the Grass" signs, defacing signs, trampling around on newly sown grass, injuring trees by tearing off the branches or cutting into the bark—gets to be rather expensive after a while.

In the past three years such acts have cost more than $200,000. It is estimated that 80 men are needed to patrol the park to preserve its beauties for those who seek relief from the city's turmoil in its fairly wide open spaces.

Open Spaces—

It is, incidentally, about the only place in the city where one can gaze up at the sky without peering between the rising walls of buildings. The trees and grass, turning green with the approach of spring, afford a welcome change of scenery from the gray mountains of buildings at which one is forced to look in other parts of the city.

But even at that, Central Park does suggest a "walled-in" breathing space, for stately apartment houses rise to skyscraper heights on all sides. Some are strikingly beautiful at night, with their illuminated towers and myriads of lighted windows.

A new magazine is published by and for lunatics. It is unique only in admitting the fact.

FERRAC BRINGS HER FIRST RELIEF IN THREE YEARS

Every suffering man and woman should know the facts about nature's marvelous prescription, without alcohol, opiates, erbs or drugs of any kind that has helped hundreds to better health There is no safer, saner, surer guide than the experience of others. Read what Mrs. W. T. Hayes, 304 Cotton Ave., N. E., Birmingham, says:

"For three years indigestion and ulcerated stomach kept me in misery, and during the greater part of that time I was under the care of specialists. I had very little appetite; went down to 95 pounds in weight and was nervous and wretched. Six bottles of Ferarc have given me my first real relief in all that time. I've already gained back six pounds; my appetite is splendid; my whole condition is wonderfully improved, and my 9 months old baby that is fed from the breast, is gaining in weight and is in perfectly splendid health. Nobody will ever know how glad I am to get away from all that upsetting old medicine."

Man cannot compound Ferrac! It is given to suffering humanity exactly as nature herself compounded it. For stomach troubles, indigestion, gastritis, acid, constipation, piles, liver and kidney troubles, count no case hopeless no matter how complicated or of how long standing until you have first tried Ferrac.

Ferarc is on sale in All Drug Stores, or if your druggist can not supply you, send $1.00 to The Greenville Products Co., Greenville, Ala. adv

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

Whereas, default was made in the payment of the indebtedness secured by that certain mortgage, executed on the 10th day of March, 1927, by W. S. Peeples and wife, Lue Peeples, to A. Latham, which mortgage is recorded in the office of the Judge of Probate of Chilton County, Alabama, in Book 229 of Mortgages, at Page 213, and which mortgage was to secure an indebtedness of One Hundred and Forty Two and 78-100 Dollars, ($142.78), which was evidenced by one prommisory waive note bearing even date with said mortgage, for said sum and due and payable on October 20, 1927, and which mortgage conveyed, as security for said indebtedness, the following described real estate, situated in Chilton County, Alabama, to-wit:

"One block of land beginning at the Southeast corner of the Southwest Quarter of Section Twenty Three, Township Twenty Three, Range Thirteen, thence north to the corner of Y. O. Freeman's Lot, thence west to the Randolph and Jemison public road, tehnce in a Southwesterly direction along said road to the section line between section 22 and section 23, thence East to the point of beginning being in all three (3) acres, more or less, and known as the 'B. M. Gentry place'."

Now, therefore, the undersigned mortgagee, in said mortgage, will, on Monday, April 13, 1931, during the legal hours of sale, in front of the Courthouse door of Chilton County, Alabama, and in the town of Clanton, offer for sale to the highest and best bidder, for cash, the above described property conveyed in said mortgage for the purpose of paying the indebtedness secured by same, the expenses of the sale, including a reasonable attorney's fee, and the remainder of the proceeds of said sale, if any, to be turned over to the mortgagors as provided by law.

This the 14th day of March, 1931.

Our Easter program will be put on next Sunday night in the place of the regular Christian Endeavor program. The name of our program is Easter Light. This is something new, but we hope to make it as interesting as possible.

Everybody has a special invitation to come and be with us while we try to carry out the program beginning at 6:30 o'rlock

Several from this place attended the District Conference at Pleasant Grove last Sunday and I'm sure will be benefitted by having attended.

TRENCH SILOS ARE ADVISED BY BURNS

Trench silos have given entire satisfaction in Alabama and F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist at Auburn, is confident that there will be a large increase this year in their use. Fewer than a dozen were built last year, including one on the experiment station at Auburn. Each one gave entire satisfaction. Similar reports have been received from other states, he said.

A trench silo is a silo in the ground, Mr. Burns explained. One can be made very easily on any farm where there is drainage which means practically every farm in Alabama, he said. The cost of making such a silo is almost nil, for it is done with farm labor and the material on hand. Hand tools and an ordinary scrape with mules or a tractor to operate it will do most of the work.

Instructions for making a trench silo are being supplied by the county agents To fill it next fall Mr. Burns recommends planting sorghum this spring. The Texas seeded ribbon variety is preferred. It has produced an average of eight tons per acre at Auburn during the last three years.

Ordinarily, one cow will eat two or three tons of silage per season, which means that one acre of Texas seeded ribbon should produce enough for three or four cows. A silo should be made during the summer and be ready to be filled when the sorghum is ready in the fall. An ordinary feed grinder may be used to fill the silo if an ensilage machine is not available.

A farmer with a few cows should have a trench silo, Mr. Burns said. It will reduce feed costs and increase milk flow.

COWS MILK FOR BABIES

Dr. Christmas Seal

In feeding babies reject, without question, any milk that is peculiar as to taste, color or odor. It is a well known fact that the flavor of cows milk is readily affected by certain articles of food, such as turnips, garlic, wild onions, moldy hay or grain, damaged ensilage, etc. Just how much of the poisonous quality of weeds the milk will transmit is a question to be determined only by individual test, but since there is no doubt that not only flavor but other active qualities of plants may be carried through the milk, the only safe way in so important a matter as infant feeding is to discard all questionable milk.

Dr. Christmas Seal has seen and approved of changes in baby feeding that would have been unbelievable twenty years ago; such as giving tiny babies vegetable soups and corn syrup. But there has been no change in the principle that anything obnoxious in taste, color or odor must be rejected.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS

The thing that makes the greatest difference between big profit and little profit, or no profit at all, is the number of bales or pounds or bushels produced per acre.

RICHMOND, VA.

PROFIT is what you pay for, and Profit is what you get in every bag of V-C fertilizer. You can be sure of that. The Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corporation puts it there—has been putting it there for more than two generations—in the form of good V-C plant food that will make your crops grow if you do your part. Use V-C fertilizer right and you'll collect this profit. It's there, in V-C—by the bagful!

"Oh, I must have lost my pocketbook. I've looked in every pocket except my left hip pocket."

"Why don't you look in that pocket?"

"Scared it might not be there!"—Exchange.

If more money from crops means more money to spend for things that ought to be produced at home, like meat and lard and corn and hay, then we don't get anywhere at all. More money from crops ought to mean more money to spend on the family and the home.

The selection of desirable soils and the use of the right fertilizers are matters of economic importance.—U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

One hundred bales of cotton were gathered from 120 acres by Chancy Bros, Hardware and Furniture Co., Hartford, Ala. "We used 400 pounds of V-C Eastern Shore 10-4-7 per acre," says A. L. Chancy. "We found that it pays handsome dividends to use high-grade fertilizer for cotton." The firm not only uses but also sells V-C. "Our customers call for V-C—it's our biggest seller," says Mr. Chancy.

"Sure, I believe a rabbit's foot brings good luck. My wife felt one in my pocket and thought it was a mouse."—Exchange.

"The farmer must reduce his cost per bale or pound of production," say all the authorities. How? "By fertilizing well with V-C," say lots of farmers.

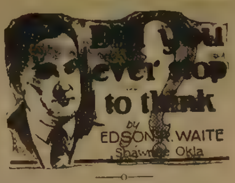
FIGHTING THE FOE OF YOUTH

By Dr. Christmas Seal

All the world knows that Tuberculosis is not killing anywhere near the number that it did half a century ago. The fly in the ointment is the fact that those it still takes in greatest number are the youth of our land, ages 15 to 25, those whom we can least spare. Dr. Christmas Seal announces that the month of April is the time for the big campaign of education everywhere to tell our young people how to conquer their foe. You will see striking posters in color, showing David attacking Goliath. Newspapers are helping with their usual generosity. Speakers will appear before many kinds of groups telling of the work of tuberculosis control. Health Departments and public health nurses are joining forces with tuberculosis workers everywhere in an effort to bring to the attention of the youth the dangers that beset the young people of the nation. If you will write the Alabama Tuberculosis Association, some interesting literature will be sent you on this subject.



Paul Block, one of America's best known newspaper publishers, says:

That in the late summer and early fall of 1929 the country was rapidly sliding into the depths of business depression. But its citizens were happy and confident, looking forward to indefinite continuance of boom prosperity. They did not know the depression had arrived. It required the dramatic crash in the stock market to make them realize it.

Today the depression has run its course, but the average individual is just as slow to note the encouraging signs in the fundamentals of our economic situation as he was to appreciate the previous decline. His caution is increased by the fact that the temporary interruption of the major downtrend last spring was mistaken in many quarters for real recovery.

There will be no dramatic event to make us realize that better times are here again as there was to show us that bad times had come. No skyrocket stock market boom is likely—or desirable.

But for some weeks past we have been moving toward higher levels of national prosperity. Since the latter part of November, car loadings have increased 60,000 a week. Automobile production has jumped by some 45 per cent. Steel operations show a gain of approximately 25 per cent. These things are reliable yardsticks to measure business activity.

Under the caption "We Are Climbing with Tears in Our Eyes," the Dry Goods Economist urges a more cheerful national psychology. An interesting chart accompanies the article which shows a steady rise ever since November. Some lines of business activity may not have benefitted by it as yet, but they were among the last to feel the depression. It takes time for the improvement to be reflected all thru our business structure. The important thing is that the conditions requisite for the improvement have been fulfilled and the trend is definitely upwards.

Advertising has done its share toward this business improvement because a close check-up has proven that in nearly every instance where a substantial amount of advertising has been continued by the manufacturer or merchant, the results have helped substantially to improve that particular concern's sales and profits.

Tenth Annual Safety Campaign For Pupils, Teachers Announced

Highway Education Board To Present Checks and Medals To 430 Children Submitting Best Papers

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Offering 430 cash prizes and the same number of medals to elementary school pupils and prizes totaling $1,000 to elementary school teachers, the Highway Education Board today announced its Tenth National Campaign for street and highway safety. This campaign, comprising essay contests for pupils and a safety lesson contest for teachers, has been conducted annually since the school year 1921-22 in cooperation with state, county and municipal school authorities throughout the United States and its possessions.

The project this year will stress the rewards for practicing safe conduct on streets and highways and in keeping with that, the subject for the essay contest is "My Rewards for Observing Street and Highway Safety Rules." The subject for the lesson is "Teaching the Rewards of Careful Conduct on Streets and Highways." The competition for pupils is open to children of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades, 14 years of age and under, and the lesson contest is open to all elementary school teachers of the eighth and lower grades.

Contestants from every state in the Union, from Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii, the Canal Zone and Porto Rico are expected to strive for the many prizes, aggregating $6,500, offered for the best essays and lessons. In the pupils' contest 430 medals and a like number of cash prizes are offered as state awards. The writer of the best paper in each state will receive a gold medal and a check for $15. Second prize winner will receive a silver medal and a check for $12, and third prize winners will receive bronze medals and checks for $5. The number of third prize winners in each state ranges from one to 23, depending upon the school population.

From among the essays ranking first in each state three national prize winners will be chosen, the first receiving a trip to Washington with all expenses paid, at which time he is presented with a gold watch. Second and third national prize winners will be presented with gold watches, but will not be taken on the trip to Washington.

Awards to teachers, although less numerous, are more substantial. The teacher writing the best safety lesson from among all submitted throughout the country will receive a trip to the National Capital with all expenses paid, and will be presented with a check for $500. Second and third national prizes in the lesson contest consist of checks only, these checks being for $300 and $200 respectively. To the teacher in each state who submits the best lesson a certificate of honor will be awarded. All prizes are being donated by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Essays are to be not more than 500 words in length, it was announced, while lessons must be at least 1,000 words but not more than 3,000 words long. The contest closes May 15. Between that date and May 29 the principal of each school is required to select the best essay and best lesson submitted by pupils and teachers under his supervision and these two papers must be forwarded to the state superintendent of schools or state headquarters not later than May 29. The state committee will then select the prize winning papers and forward them to the Highway Education Board in Washington.

States have been allotted third prizes according to elementary school enrollment. While some states have been allowed but one third prize, most of them have materially more than that number. Territories outside continental United States are listed for one third prize, in addition to a first and second prize, and this is the case also with Wyoming, Nevada, Vermont and Rhode Island. Alabama, the first on the list, is entitled to seven third prizes, while 23 New York pupils will be awarded third prizes. Pennsylvania, with the second largest allotment, receives 21 third prizes.

In announcing the Tenth national street and highway safety campaign, Thomas H. MacDonald, chairman of the Highway Education Board and Chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, asserted that safety education in the schools had definitely proved its value in reducing the number of accidents. It is receiving increasing attention each year, he said, and comparatively few schools now are without safety instruction.

Between 650,000 and 700,000 pupils participated in the safety essay contest last year and provision has been made for an increase in this number in the present campaign.

British picture shows are visited by something like 30,000,000 people every week.

Poplar Springs News

Please allow me just a few lines in your paper this week. First, I want to say that our church is getting along fine. Our pastor is Rev. W. P. Lowery of Thorsby. He always brings us good messages when he comes. We have a good Sunday school, and fairly good attendance. But it could be better. We would be glad if we could get all of our Poplar Springs people to take a part with us in our church, Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. work.

Please notice next Sunday is our Annual Easter singing. We invite all good singers to come and be with us. We hope to have a good singing. We always have a singing, but we hope to make this the best one of all. Everybody is invited. Come and bring your new song books and a full basket.

HOME-MIXED CHICK MASH FROM HOME-GROWN FEED

Auburn, Ala., April 1. — Feed for young chicks must be palatable, wholesome, digestible, clean, and must contain the correct amounts of proteins and fats, says Prof. G. A. Trollope, head of the Auburn poultry department.

After the first 30 to 36 hours chicks should be fed for the first time. If they are shipped they should be fed after arriving at destination, he said.

Milk, either sweet or sour, skimmed or buttermilk, makes an excellent first feed. If milk is not available warm water should be supplied. If possible get chicks to drink milk first then keep mash before them continually.

Mr. Trollope recommends a chick mash of home-grown feed stuffs as follows, in case a commercial mixture is not used: 80 lbs. corn meal, 20 lbs. shorts or middlings, 5 lbs. bone meal, 5 lbs. marble grit, oyster shell or ground limestone, and frome one-half to one pound of fine table salt.

Green feed should be given the chicks at two or three weeks of age, and they should have access to sunshine. Codliver oil is not necessary where this plan is followed.

Don't turn the dairy cows on pasture too early in the spring. Early spring grass is watery and immature. Wait until the grass is 3 or 4 inches high, and then turn them on it—but for only a few hours a day at first—and continue to feed grain, hay, and silage for a while, to lessen the danger of bloating.

Mineral deficiencies in the soil and consequently in pasture plants may cause poor development of livestock or even disease. Animals grazing on pasture deficient in phosphorus often develop a morbid appetite, stiffness of joints, and a staggering gait. They may eat such substances as dirt or bone. The disease may be checked or cured by giving bone meal, sodium phosphate, or by changing to a pasture known to contain sufficient phosphorous. In some parts of the country the vegetation is deficient in iodine, causing goiter and often hairlessness of new-born animals. These conditions are corrected by including some compound of iodine in the rations. Pastures low in calcium are thought to be the cause of the maldevelopment of the bones of horses.

An Easter Invitation

Won't you give your life to Jesus,
Just accept His love today.
He will give you peace and comfort,
Make your burdens roll away.
He will rescue you from danger—
Lift you above the prisons walls.
He is able, he is willing,
He will save both great and small.
On the cross He died, His heart was broken.
He shed his blood for you and me
That thru Him we might have redemption,
And from sin and death made free
He alone is our redeemer,
His blood alone can save our soul—
Only through His grace and power
Can we walk the streets of gold
Won't you accept His invitation?
Come to Jesus while you may.
We may not live to see tomorrow.
Oh! Come to Jesus, come today.
Jesus is the Resurrection
He alone has power to save.
It was on one bright Easter morn
He came forth from his lonely grave
He won the victory over Satan
He triumphed over death and the grave
That we, too, might be resurrected
And thru His blood we might be saved
Jesus is the Resurrection.
He raised Lazarus from the dead.
He raised the widow's son at Nain.
Five thousand at one time He fed—
He is the true bread of life
Sent from His heavenly throne.
Oh! won't there be a great reunion
On the resurrection morn?

Davis To Head Radio Audition

Birmingham, Ala., March 29.—For fifth consecutive year, P.O. Davis, head of the department of public information at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and general manager of Station WAPI, has been appointed State manager of the Fifth National Radio Audition. With an offer by the Atwater Kent Foundation of $25,000 in cash awards and 10 musical scholarships to be divided among the best young singers in the United States, the audition committee will direct the search thruout the State for the most capable competitors.

Samuel F. Clabaugh, of Birmingham, will serve as chairman of the Alabama State Committee which will include several leading musicians of Alabama.

Mr. Davis, who is popular with musicians and aspiring artists throughout Alabama, will bring to his work as manager the experience gained in serving in like capacity for the previous four national auditions.

The fifth national radio audition, like those that have preceded it, is a comprehensive campaign throughout the country to find the nation's best young singers and provide them with opportunity to fame and fortune. Any young man or woman between the ages of 18 and 25 years, inclusive, is eligible to compete. The search through the various states is conducted through a series of elimination tests. The first step is the local audition where all young singers are invited to compete and one young man and one young woman are selected to go to the state audition.

The University of Illinois research hosital is studying the chronic kind of headache known as migraine, and pays a young man who has it $50 a month and board for permitting experiments to be made on him. And if he gets cured he will naturally lose his job.

DR. BARTON TO ADDRESS PEOPLE OF CHILTON CO.

Baptist Secretary to Speak In Three Engagements On April Twelfth

An announcement went over the county this week to the effect that Dr. L. E. Barton will speak in three different places in Chilton County on Sunday, April 12th.

The announcement was made by the Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the Thorsby Baptist church. Dr. Barton will be at Liberty Hill church, west of Clanton at eleven o'clock on the morning of April 12th. At two-thirty o'clock that afternoon he will be at the Collins Chapel church and at seven-thirty on the night of April 12th he will address the congregation at the Jemison Baptist church.

Dr. Barton is a strong preacher and will bring a great message to those who are fortunate enough to be able to hear him, and his coming to this county for three engagements is a rare opportunity for the people in the communities named above, and surroundings.

Those surrounding communities of Liberty Hill, near there that will take advantage of Dr. Barton's sermons are Mulberry, Concord, Highland and Samaria. Communities near Collins Chapel that can hear him there are New Salem, Mineral Springs, Union Grove and Thorsby. Those near Jemison that could come in to the Jemison Baptist church at night, are Oak Grove, Pleasant Grove, Macedonia, Cinder Hill and Pates Chapel.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. AGNES THOMAS GLENN WORDS OF APPRECIATION

We wish to thank Dr. T. J. Marcus, Dr. Gragg, Miss Robinson and all the nurses of the Central Alabama Hospital for their untiring efforts they used during the last hours of our darling daughter and sister, Mrs. Agnes Thomas Gleen. Also we wish to thank her many friends that visited and helped at home.

She joined the Baptist church in Birmingham at the age of nine years. She lived a very humble life, consecrated to the Lord.

She married at the age of 19 to Willie Glenn. To this union God blessed their home with one daughter, 12 days old when her mother died.

She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, Willie Glenn, mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Thomas, a sister, Mrs. Daisy Thornton, and brother, Dawson Thomas.

Signed: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Thomas, Daisy Thornton, and Dawson Thomas.

W. J. Carroll, desertion, nol prossed.

Teachers Are Commended By County Superintendent

that the meeting in May is the time at which people are supposed to meet the Board and make any suggestions about the school program. Of course, we are glad to have these suggestions at any time and hope that the public will feel free at all times to make any suggestions or recommendations they see fit about the administration of the schools of the county. We realize that it is a problem belonging to every citizen of the county and we want your cooperation in every way possible. We realize that many times people can make helpful recommendations. We are anxious to do the best that we can for our schools and will appreciate all the help in that direction possible.

At this time I wish to call attention to the fine spirit demonstrated among the teachers recently. The state has quite a little bit of our money tied up and we will be unable to pay off any more teachers until after the state funds are had. In the face of this situation the teachers voted unanimously and enthusiastically to go on the full term and wait until they could get their money.

Teachers have as much right to expect their pay on time as any other group of people. I think it is a fine patriotic act on their part to be willing to go ahead under the circumstances. I do not feel that there is a group of people anywhere else that is more ready to make a sacrifice for the interest of the cause for which they are working than teachers. We have a fine group of them in the country and I hope that we will remember the sacrificial act and properly appreciate their services.

Personally I greatly appreciate the teachers of Chilton County and let me urge that everyone of us give them our full cooperation and let us put Chilton County on the map educationally and otherwise.

Yours for a bigger and better school system,

B. LAWRENCE,
County Supt. Education.

Who's Who in the Senior II Class

On last Monday afternoon the members held a who's who contest. The following nominees won: Most beautiful girl, Eunice Edwards; most handsome boy, Robert Sumner; most friendly girl, most friendly boy, Ottis Miller; most popular boy, Herman Harris; most dependable, Elizabeth Stanley; best all-round, Charlsie Pyron; biggest booster, Ethel Mae Jones; most dignified girl, Ruth Aylene Maddox, most dignified boy, J. C. Massey.

Chilton Defeats Verbena Friday

On Friday afternoon, March 20, the local baseball team met and defeated the Verbena High team by the score of 13 to 2. Cox hurled a fine game for Chilton giving up only three hits. Ted Littlejohn got a long home run over the right field fence. Chilton got ten hits off the delivery wagon of Wise and Dupree. We have a good fast team this year, so come out and see us in action.

The Chilton County High School will meet the Marbury High School here on the local grounds Friday afternoon. Admission will be ten and twenty-five cents. We promise you an interesting afternoon and your money's worth.

Ted Littlejohn Wins Prize

At the beginning of the baseball season in 1929, Prof. Warr made the announcement that a handsome baseball glove was awaiting the first player who knocked a ball over the south side of the fence. Since that time he has been anxiously waiting for a chance to award his gift. The entire season passed last year with all balls falling on the inside. Again this year the same proposition was made, and during the first game which was between Verbena and Clanton the whole team seemed to have renewed their interest and determination, but it took Ted Littlejohn to show Verbena and Prof. Warr how to knock a ball. Littlejohn, with the twirl of his bat sent the ball fast and high over the fence and under the porch of a residence on the other side of the street. He had won the coveted prize and on last Monday morning an announcement was made at chapel to that effect. The glove will be presented at an early date. The entire school is proud of Ted, and shared the thrill of his prize.

Who's Who in Senior III Class

Most beautiful girl, Mary Heard; most handsome boy, Benson Simms; most dependable, Homer Carroll; most popular, Paul Cox; most intellectual, Mary Heard; most dignified, Bernice Williams; best all-round, Edwin Wagoner; wittiest, Frank McMurray; friendliest, Alvin Davis; friendliest girl, Virgie Giles; biggest booster, Stanley Nivens.

Good English Week

This is Good English Week. The school has been divided into two sides, the blue and the gold. May the best side win! Each student is going to work hard to put over this campaign. Everyone must think twice before he says ain't, and then not say it, but say the correct form of the verb be. One-act plays illustrating good English will be written and the best one from each class will also be read in chapel. We may have a bad case of nerves at the end of the week from meeting good English posters at every turn, and hearing amateur poets, play wrights, etc., but thereafter better grammar will be in order.

Senior II Play A Success

By Dan Smith

Friday night, March 20, was a great night for the Senior II Class of C. C. H. S. The reason for this was the play, entitled "The Wild Oats Boy," which was given by this class. The play was a three-act comedy. The characters were thirteen members of the Senior II Class who were coached for the performance by Miss Margaret Kendrick and Miss Josephine Martin, who are due much credit for its success.

It is customary for the Senior II Class to entertain the Senior III Class at the close of school. The play was given to raise funds for this purpose. A neat sum was realized and the Senior II's are looking forward to giving the Senior III's a good time.

Before the play the audience was entertained by some members of the school orchestra. Between acts Misses Janice Danforth and Hilda Hart sang several popular songs with Miss Nell Wells as accompanist. The play was attended by a large audience, and is considered generally very successful. We wish to thank again those who so kindly gave us their attention and presence that night.

ROSPECTS GOOD FOR A FINE ROP BERRIES IN THIS SECTION

Prospects for a good crop of straw- rries in this section are good at this me, according to L. E. Diefenderfer f Clanton, who is well posted on the atter, and others in various parts of e county, it was learned this week.

At present, it was stated, the berries ave a fine chance of being of a good ze and no doubt the price will be in cordance. Unless something unfore- een occurs in weather conditions, this ear's crop of strawberries in Chilton ounty will be a good one.

AMERICAN LEGION HAS INTERESTING MEETING MON. NIGHT

A most interesting meeting was held here at the courthouse by the Chilton County Post of the American Legion, last Monday night, their regular meeting night.

Several out-of-town speakers were on the program. Music was furnished by two string bands from this county, and several visitors were present. It was stated that the membership in the local post of the Legion is now one hundred and three, and indications are that the membership will increase steadily in the future.

TWO CONCERNS SPONSOR BIG AD SCHEDULE

News Given Contract For A Large Amount of U. S. Tire Advertising

As more evidence that growing concerns believe in the business of advertising is shown by the large amount of space to be used in the Chilton County News for the advertising of United States tires. This order was recently received by the News and will run over the signatures of the Thorsby Garage, at Thorsby, Ala., and Clanton Motors, local Ford Dealers.

This schedule on U. S. Tire advertising began in the News two weeks ago, and will continue for several weeks to come. In this week's issue the ad is from the Thorsby Garage, of which E. N. Bentley is proprietor. The Thorsby Garage is located on the Birmingham highway and is never closed. Mr. Bentley has been a believer in the quality of U. S. Tires and tubes and is using space in the News to push this product.

In last week's News Clanton Motors, of which T. J. Littlejohn is manager, occupied space on U. S. Tires. These advertisements will appear alternately from these two popular business concerns week by week.

Fiddlers' Convention At Verbena School

Owing to the rain on last Friday evening, the Fiddlers' Convention scheduled to be held at Verbena on Friday evening, April 3, was postponed until the following Friday evening, April 10.

We are very glad to make this announcement, as many who had planned to go were kept away by the very bad weather. A number of fiddlers came, and a fair number of people, and a few numbers were played. From the excellence of these samples those who attend the Convention on Friday night, April 10, at Verbena, are assured a very high order of fiddling, and are certain to have a fine evening's entertainment.

Announce to your friends the above change of date for the convention, and go to Verbena tomorrow night. Admission prices will be 15c for children and 25 cents for adults. Fiddlers and one accompanist will be admitted free. Doors will be open at seven o'clock.

UNITED STATES ENTERED WAR FOURTEEN YEARS AGO MONDAY

Fourteen years ago, last Monday, marked another anniversary of the time that the United States entered the World War. There was no radio then to spread the news, anyway the nation knew it was coming. From office, farm, factory and college, began a trek of American boys to the nearest enlistment place. It is all a memory now but the veterans who went "over there" could tell you how it felt on April 6, 1917.

NEGRO DRIVES WRECKER INTO LARGE PLATE GLASSES HERE

It must have been a case of mistaken identity in gears on an automobile wrecker that caused a negro to break two of the large plate glass windows in the front of the show rooms of Clanton Motors, local Ford dealers late Tuesday night.

These plate glass windows are perhaps the largest in Clanton, and face toward the Birmingham highway. The negro driving the wrecker stated that he became confused in shifting the gears of the car, and it went in the opposite direction he intended it to go, it was stated. But, anyway he managed to stop it after breaking the expensive glasses.

SINGING CONVENTION AT PLEASANT GROVE CHURCH

The Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony singers of Chilton County will meet in semi-annual convention on the 1st Sunday in May and the Saturday before at Pleasant Grove M. P. Church, 7 miles southwest of Clanton.

All are invited to attend. The church is in an ideal location, good roads all around.

Mr. A. J. Tyus and children spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tyus.

CHESTER WINGARD AND D. S. WINGARD TOURING FLORIDA

Chester Wingard, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Wingard, with his grandfather, D. S. Wingard, left Tuesday for a tour of the State of Florida. They will make the trip in the trusty old Ford and stated that the extent of their sight-seeing tour would depend entirely on the Ford, as it would probably have all the say-so.

SPRING HERE, UNDOUBTEDLY; BEES PAY CLANTON A VISIT

Clanton became an attraction for a rather large swarm of fine bees last Tuesday morning. Where they came from, nor where they were going was not learned, but Lee Oden, negro, soon made up their minds for them and now they have become residents of Clanton, and are living near the jail. That is, that was where they were domiciled Tuesday after Lee went to a lot of pains—not the hurting kind—to get them to settle.

SARDIS COMMUNITY IS WELL REPRESENTED IN CLANTON

The coming little community of Sardis, just west of Clanton, was well represented in Clanton on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The News office received a pleasant visit from several of the citizens of that fine community of this county. Among those calling at the News office from the Sardis community were G. W. Sansom, J. T. Minor, G. E. Sansom, S. S. Sansom, V. A. Short, Garland Deason, Ira Scott, J. P. Smith, W. M. Smith.

While in Clanton these men also were fortunate enough to be here in time to view the largest tire in the world, the big Goodyear tire which was at Dief's Service Station. We are always glad to have a delegation of citizens as these call at the News office.

TO DELIVER SERMONS NEXT SUNDAY IN CHILTON CO.

DR. L. E. BARTON

L. E. BARTON TO DELIVER THREE SERMONS SUN.

Baptist Secretary Will Fill Engagements Over County On April The 12th

The people of various sections of Chilton County are looking forward to next Sunday when Dr. L. E. Barton, Baptist secretary, will be in Chilton County to deliver three sermons, one at Liberty Hill church, one at Collins Chapel church and at the Jemison Baptist church, according to an announcement from the Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the Thorsby Baptist church.

Dr. Barton will be at Liberty Hill church, west of Clanton, at eleven o'clock on the morning of April 12th. At two-thirty o'clock that afternoon he will be at the Collins Chapel church, and at seven-thirty on the night of April 12th, he will address the congregation at the Jemison Baptist church.

Dr. Barton is a strong preacher and will bring a great message to those who are fortunate enough to be able to hear him, and his coming to this county for three engagements is a rare opportunity for the people in the communities named above, and surroundings.

At Collins Chapel, the singing so-

W.O.W. Meeting For Monday Night Here

The Clanton Woodmen of the World will meet on next Monday night, April 13th, for a meeting of special interest according to E. C. Evans, district manager.

Mr. Evans stated that all members of the local order are urged to be present Monday night. Several new members are to be initiated and some matters of importance taken up. The meeting will begin at eight o'clock.

POLK BROS. OFFERING USED CARS IN BIG LOW-PRICE SALE

In this week's issue of the News, Polk Brothers Motor Company, Inc., local Chevrolet dealers, are running a large ad, telling the people of this section of some values they have to offer in the line of good used cars.

These cars, according to this motor concern, are all in good condition, and bear the tag of the "OK That Counts." See the ad in this issue of the News.

EIGHT ARRESTS BOOKED BY SHERIFF IN PAST FEW DAYS

Information from the office of the Sheriff of this county Tuesday stated that eight violators of the law had been booked here since last Thursday. The majority of these were for violating the prohibition law, it was stated.

A BUSINESS REVIVAL IN THE FALL FORECAST

Railroad President Predicts Better Conditions By End Of Present Year

Gradual improvement in general business conditions throughout the country is taking place and by Fall the revival will be in full swing, asserted Fred W. Sargent, president Chicago & Northwestern Railway, who came to Birmingham Monday to speak at the luncheon of the Birmingham Traffic and Transportation Club. While there has been some improvement since January 1, he said, he based his prediction of a full return of prosperity by Fall on the recent call money interest rates, lowest in the history of the country, which he said, to his mind, is a sign that the bottom of the business depression has been reached.

Transportation Discussed

Discussing the transportation problem, which he said is a serious one, Mr. Sargent declared the railroads do not object to fair competition, but insist that if the railroads are to be regulated so should their competitors

Congress, he said, passed an act fixing an eight-hour day for railroad train crews with a penalty for a violation of the act, while there is no such regulation of motor trucks. If a rail-

Local String Band Enters In Contest

Chilton County is again about to receive more honors. That is, if the string band from this county, known as "Our Band" wins the contest being sponsored by radio Station WAPI, in Birmingham, where this little band has been playing almost every Saturday afternoon. It is composed of Chilton County boys and they sure make some real good music.

In order to help "Our Band" win the contest write, wire or telephone Station WAPI, in Birmingham, Alabama and put in a good word, or several good words for the band. Address your cards or letters or telegrams to: "Our Band" in care of Station WAPI, Birmingham, Alabama, and help the boys win the contest.

CLANTON VISITED BY STUDENTS OF MONTG. MILITARY ACADEMY

Clanton received a visit last Tuesday afternoon from fourteen students of the Montgomery Military Academy. These fine looking young men were returning from Birmingham where they had been to visit the Phillips High School, and study its discipline. They were under the direction on the trip of Col. William T. Ward, president of the military academy.

Col. Ward stated that he was well impressed with the manner of the students at the Birmingham school, and paid that place some high compliments. Col. Ward is also lecturer on Economics at Womans College, in Montgomery as well as being an outstanding figure in various affairs over the state. He is a World War veteran, and has traveled extensively over the world, having served in various capacities under the government, before and during the World War. He complimented the News on having secured the publication rights of the story by General Pershing, which begins in this issue

L. P. Mills, merchant of Billingsley, was among the business visitors to Clanton Thursday.

PERSHING'S WORLD WAR STORY BEGINS IN THIS WEEK'S NEWS

Ex-Service Men Invited To Write Stories Of Their Experiences

Relieving the impatience of those who have been anxiously awaiting the opening chapter of General Pershing's story on the World War, titled, "My Experiences in the World War," the story begins in this issue of the News

Judging from indications coming from various sources, the ex-service men, relatives of ex-service men, have been looking forward to reading this great article about the World War.

The News has extended an invitation to all ex-service men to write stories of some of their own experiences during the war. These stories will be published by the News when sent in. They will not necessarily have to be tragic experiences, but all will be accepted. Perhaps some soldier has had a very amusing experience, or an experience that caused his hair to rise from his head. All these stories are asked for. All stories must be signed. The News will gladly edit the stories if requested, but it is preferred that the stories be written in the own words of the writer. Begin this first installment of Gen. Pershing's story, and read it each week. You will no doubt learn of things that you have never heard of before. It is truly an educational story.

KIWANIS CLUB BRINGS A MOST UNIQUE PICTURE TO CLANTON

"Just Imagine" Will Show A Writer's Idea of World In Fifty Years

The people of this section will soon have an opportunity to see a writer's idea of what this world will look like in the year 1980, almost fifty years from now. Trips to Mars in a rocket ship—people with numbers instead of names as we have now—bringing people back to life after they have been dead sometime—and a love story that goes along with it all.

This picture is "Just Imagine," and is booked to be shown at the Wadesonian Theatre in Clanton three nights, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week, April 13, 14, and 15. It is being put on by the Clanton Kiwanis Club, with the kind assistance and cooperation of C. W. Wade, proprietor of the Wadesonian Theatre. There will be a slight increase in price of admission, and reserve seats will also be sold beforehand, as it is expected that record crowds will be in Clanton to see this unique talking picture.

DO FARMERS MAKE THE BEST HUSBANDS?

Somebody has started a country-wide argument by asserting that farmers make the best husbands. Figures quoted by Wheeler McMillen, Associate Editor of the Country Home, a national farm publication, show that while 15 out of every 100 city marriages end in the divorce court, only seven out of every 100 farm marriages are dissolved by the judge.

Mr. McMillen admits that "perhaps it does not follow that because twice as many city people get divorces, therefore farmers and their wives are twice as happy together."

that the surest way to have a permanent marriage is to say "yes" to a farmer.

From that display of statistics, the average woman may readily deduce

He has been asking farm people, both men and women, about it, and they don't all give the same explanation. One farm woman said in the present of her spouse that so far as she was concerned the answer was that she didn't care about changing husbands, because the one she had was bad enough.

Another farm woman said that the reason farmers get fewer divorces was because they couldn't afford it. One cynical-minded farmer remarked bluntly that "wives are the hardest farm problem to solve."

The facts about the farm marriage Mr. McMillen declares as a result of his investigation, are these: that the wife is closer to her husband's business on the farm than in any other occupation. "The home is the farmer's office, and his factory is the landscape outside," Mr. McMillen explans. "From the first furrow in spring to the end of the year, the work goes on under the farmwoman's eyes. Naturally her interest in it is more intimate than if her husband's daily toil meant no more to her than the possibility of a new icebox, a new dress, or a new car out of his pay check. She is a partner in the business as well as in the home. There are fewer divorces among farmers, I think, because they are too busy, and also because they are happier in their home than most city folk."

Alabama Farmers Cut Down Expenses

With a view to increasing their net returns Alabama farmers are "cutting corners" and reducing their production costs this year. According to county agents they are doing it several ways:

1. They are making better gardens, thereby producing food for the family and reducing living expenses and "living at home."

2. They are balancing their farming between livestock and crops with a view to more efficient use of labor thruout the year, thereby increasing their earnings.

3. They are making more use of improved machinery which increases the efficiency of labor.

4. They are producing more feed for livestock, thereby reducing expenditures for feed and increasing the net balance.

Reports from over the State indicate a decided trend in these directions. They are essential to low-cost production, which is as essential to successful farming as to manufacturing, or to any other business, county agents declare.

Included with other things they are giving more attention to better seed and fertilizer, and to other factors intended to improve farming and decrease expenses. Because of the economic strengency the use of fertilizer is being curtailed, although the Experiment Station at Auburn has shown conclusively that fertilizer properly used will pay well under 1931 conditions.

NOTICE

State of Alabama, Complainant, vs. One Chevrolet, Coach, 1929 Model, Respondent.

In the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, in Equity.

The Bill of Complaint of the State of Alabama, on the relation of G. C. Walker, as Deputy Solicitor of Chilton County, against one Chevrolet Coach, 1929 Model, being exhibited to me, and it appearing therefrom that on the 28th day of March, 1931, One Emmett McKee did transport in one Chevrolet Coach 1929 Model, certain prohibited liquors and beverages, from one point in the State of Alabama to another, and that said automobile was on said day seized by the Sheriff of said County, and said Bill of Complaint praying that said automobile be declared forfeited to the State of Alabama, and for an order of condemnation and sale thereof.

It is therefore ordered and decreed that notice of the filing of said Bill of Complaint be given for three successive weeks in Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the Town of Clanton, Ala., and that all persons claiming or asserting any right, title or interest in said automobile be required to appear and assert such claim by the 7th, day of May, 1931, and that failing so to do, the said right, title or interest will be forever barred.

Given under my hand, this the 6th day of April, 1931.

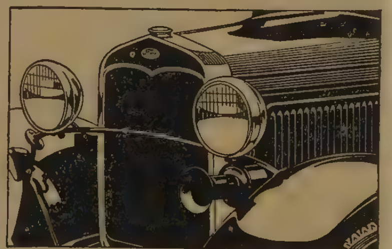
ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF FORD VALUE



Bright, enduring RUSTLESS STEEL is used for many exposed bright metal parts of the Ford

WHEN YOU BUY a Ford you buy enduring beauty. The body finish is made to last for the life of the car and practically all exposed bright metal parts except the bumpers are made of enduring Rustless Steel.

This Rustless Steel has great tensile strength. It is the same bright metal all the way through. A salt test equivalent to forty years' service under the severest weather conditions failed to have any effect on its brilliance. It never requires polishing. All you do is wipe it with a damp cloth, as you do your windshield.

This is just one of many features that show the substantial worth of the Ford. In speed, comfort, safety, economy and long life — in the richness of its finish and upholstery — it brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

NATION'S TYPICAL BOY AND DOG SOUGHT

$250 Prize And Fame Offered Chosen Pair By Kennel Foundation

Wanted—America's typical boy and dog.

The Chappel Kennel Foundation, Rockford, Illinois, in its search for the nation's typical youngster and canine pal, has appealed to the News for aid in finding them if they happen to be located in this section.

Two hundred and fifty dollars in cash and immortality by having their likenesses reproduced in oils on canvas by a famous artist await the chosen pair, which the Foundation is anxious to preserve for the inspiration of future generations as a symbol of the high type of companionship represented by the boy-dog combination of our own day. The winning team will also be presented to many notables, will probably be starred on the radio and in the movies, and in general enjoy the plaudits of an admiring multitude.

Selection of the winning pair is to be left in the hands of a jury of prominent men and women which is now being completed. The choice is to be made from nominations which the public is invited to submit to the Foundation prior to Sept. 15, 1931. Photographs of contestants may be submitted with the nominations, but a final decision will not be made by the judges until they have seen and investigated the leading candidates.

To be eligible for nomination to the boy-and-dog contest, a youngster must not be under four or over fourteen years of age. The dog must be his own or that of a member of his immediate family. The age, size, color or breed of the dog are of secondary importance.

In inaugurating the boy-dog search, L. J. Brosemer, director of the Foundation, stated:

"Character building in the young is one of the great problems of the times. The Foundation is convinced that a dog makes a boy a better man and is encouraging every home with a boy to keep a pure-bred dog. A recent study of a large penal institution revealed the fact that less than one per cent of its inmates had a pet to play with in their formative years. Through the bog-dog contest, the Foundation hopes to catch the spirit of this comradeship and perpetuate it in some tangible form for this and future generations."

RURAL CHURCH MEET AT AUBURN PLANNED

Auburn, Ala., April 8.—During the period of June 22-26, 1931, a rural church conference will be held at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. It will be the first of its kind at Auburn and the central theme, as announced by Prof. L. N. Duncan, chairman of the committee on arrangements, will be "the rural church, its opportunity, and its place in the rural program."

Plans for it are being worked out by a committee composed of the ministers of Auburn churches and Prof. Duncan The local ministers are Rev. Bruce McGehee of the Methodist Church; Rev. J. R. Edwards of the Baptist Church; Rev. W. B. Lee of the Episcopal Church; Rev. Sam Hay of the Presbyterian Church; and Rev. Milligan Earnest of the Christian Church.

The conference will be entirely non-denominational, Mr. Duncan said. The aim is to assist ministers and members of the rural churches in solving their problems and also increasing the services of the rural church to the community, he added.

The program has not been arranged but it is understood that leading laymen and church workers will participate. During the forenoons lectures will be given on agricultural subjects; in the afternoons field trips will be made and demonstations conducted; during the evening programs there will be inspirational lectures and services and religious exercises, Mr. Duncan explained.

An invitation to attend the conference is extended to all who are interested. It was pointed out that ministers in towns and smaller cities, as well as those in strictly rural sections, will find the conference interesting and valuable.

NEW 25c PIECE TO BE MADE IN U. S. SOON

Within the next few days, Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, will invite prominent artists throughout the country to submit designs for the new quarter dollar which will be issued next year as part of the nation-wide celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington.

This will be the first United States coin of regular issue to bear the image of Washington. It is authorized by legislation enacted just before the adjournment of Congress.

While the selection of the exact design for the George Washington quarter rests with the Secretary of the Treasury, Representative Sol Bloom, Associate Director of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, will be consulted before the decision is made Mr. Bloom has furnished the Treasury with a profile photograph of the bust of George Washington by Houdon, now at Mount Vernon, which has been selected by the Portrait Committee of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission as the best likeness of Washington in existence. This profile probably will be used on the new twenty-five cent piece.

The portrait of the First President was used on a few coins made in 1783, but they were not issued or approved by the government. Such approval might have been given but for Washington's modesty which no doubt made him feel that such honors were not for the living.

Although issued to commemorate the bicentenary of Washington's birth the quarter will not be a commemorative coin in the true sense of the word. It will replace the twenty-five cent piece which has been minted since 1916 as a coin of a regular issue, and as such will be circulated at face value.

The true commemorative coin is issued to signalize some particular event and is sold at a premium. Only comparatively small numbers of each issue are made. Commemorative coins have not been used widely in the United States as in some other countries. The first to appear in this country was the Columbian half dollar made in 1892 with the bust of Columbus in honor of the immortal discoverer of America. Incidentally, the only commemorative quarter ever coined in the United States was made the following year. It bore the image of Isabella of Spain, the beneficent sovereign whose assistance made it possible for Columbus to carry out his cherished project.

The only coin of regular issue in the history of the United States, up to the present time, bearing the image of a President, is the Lincoln penny. This piece appeared in 1909 during the celebration of the centennial of the birth of the great Civil War President and was a result of popular demand.

One of the reasons for the selection of the quarter dollar to carry Washington's image is the popularity of this coin. Also, officials of the Treasury have been in favor of changing the design of the twenty-five cent piece now in use for other reasons as indicated in the following statement by Secretary Mellon:

"The design of the current quarter dollar has been the subject of considerable criticism. It wears very badly and is a difficult coin to manufacture; the design is too elaborate for the small surface, and it is almost impossible to bring the details into proper relief."

The first quarters were coined in 1793, the year following the act of Congress establishing the mint. Since that time, $161,483,091 have been produced in twenty-five cent pieces. The annual issue of this coin in recent years indicates that its popularity is increasing.

"AARON SLICK"

"Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick," will be presented at Walnut Creek Church next Friday night, April 10. This play has been played successfully at Thomas Junior, Verbena and Thorsby. If you have not seen this play you should see it. If you have seen it you will want to see it again.

See "Aaron," propose to the widow "Berry." Mr. Merridew, the city slicker, meets his match in "Sis Riggs," the tomboy. "Gladys May," the city lady knows nothing about the country. "Clarence Green," the mysterious youth and the "Girl in Red" help add to the fun.

It is a clean rural comedy in three acts. The Devaughn Quartet will entertain between acts.

Admission 10 and 20 cents. The proceeds will be equally divided between Walnut Creek Church and Thomas Jr. School.

THE PRODIGAL SON

Luke 15:11-24

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Here is one of the best known stories in all the world of literature. It is diverse in setting and rich in meaning. The chapter should be studied throughout and you will see three stories: the Lost Sheep, Lost Coin and Lost Son. Horace Greely said concerning this Parable of the Prodigal Son: "If there could be only one page in the Bible, I should choose that the single page should contain this parable."

Flaming Youth is a familia theme today and merely reflects the continuation of the same characteristics which were evident hundreds of years ago Here is a young man who does not feel at home though he has been living in the midst of all that his father has so abundantly provided. His real self is where he projects himself by his thinking. He wants so-called freedom to do the wrongs which are in his desire.

Money to spend in a non-productive manner is sought and the father yields. It may be that the older man was sure that only personal experience gained in the midst of the severest suffering could teach the foolish boy anything. Extravagances and positive sinful acts soon wrought their damages. The boy was cast off by those who helped him spend and no one would help him win back his manhood. The summit of despair and the beginning of a better day came when he really faced himself. The portrayal is the pathway of the sinner from penitence to regained consciousness of God's full forgiveness. It is never too late to go home to the Heavenly Father. The way back is never as hard as may appear. The crisis is passed when the penitent says "I will go" and begins the journey.

It's Never Too Late To Do Good

Even if the new year is well on its way, everyone of us should buckle down to business and do something.

We have had a lot of hard luck—much more than we deserved—and things just have to break our way, inasmuch as they have been going the other way for so long.

Without question the thought of success revives hope. So far as possible the unpleasant things that have annoyed, and interefered during the recent months will be thrust in the background, and a fresh start be taken.

It is just as well though, in looking forward to better things that one does not adopt the notion that something nice is going to be handed to him on a silver platter, and that all he has to do is to sit down and wait for the largess to show up.

Roger Babson once said that our children love us not for what we do for them, but for what they do for us.

That is a principle of life which is often forgotten or ignored, yet it contains the germ of all worthwhile success. A person prospers not through what some one else does for him, but in the measure that he has done something for himself and the world.

Success has its price tag, and while some may think they have been given passes and may obtain success and happiness without recompense, the experience of mankind is against them. The things that count, cost, and the things that do not cost are lightly prized and are quickly dissipated or disintegrated.

The theory of life that causes one to look to others to do something for him, is a mendicant's theory, and leads to mental inferiority and pauperism, materially and spiritually. The trouble with the socialistic theories is that it lends encouragement to the belief that one should look to someone else to take care of him, relieving him of personal responsibility and in effect, treating him as a ward, whose well being must be supervised by a conservator.

In the struggle for success during 1931 the prizes are rather sure to go to those who did not stand and wait for someone to do something for them, but to those who went out and earned it.

Whenever we reach the point where we are resolved to do the thing for ourselves, and not wait on the pleasure or the whim of others, then we will be biulding something which is bound to count in our favor.

It is becoming evident that there is no one able to save the farmer, or cure his unsatisfactory conditions, but those who farm for a living. Legislation may help or hinder, but the great impetus for real success must originate in and emanate from those whose interests are primarily locked up in the enterprise.

There is nothing finer in the world than friends. They are a great joy and a real comfort. They are invaluable, and their kindness and affection are highly prized. Yet a friend can do but little for one, even with the highest motives and abundant resources. To be sure he can help over the rough places now and then, but in the main he is helpless to do for you what is necessary for you to do for yourself.

The first lesson we need to review is that of self-reliance. We need to break away from the notion that life is without responsibilities. We ought to recognize frankly that a large part of our failure lies within us, and that it is both unfair and unwise to try to fasten the blame on outside agencies.

The public is beginning to be fed up on tales of calamity and failure. The time is coming when we should be met with a different song, sung in a more pleasing key.

It is time we quit expecting success to be thrust upon us and make up our minds to go out after it, and get it.

Theer should be more self-reliance, and less trying to get something for nothing.

Are Mothers Too Busy?

With all the labor-saving devices of the modern home, and with all the emphasis given to education for living, it seems strange that so many mothers have so little time to look after their children.

An interesting study of the relationships between mothers and adolescent daughters has been made public by the Woman's Home Companion, the result of Doctor Eugenie Leonard's questioning several hundred girls between the ages of 11 and 19. Barely half the girls said that they would tell their mothers when they fell in love. A fourth of those who had "wondered about God" had never asked their mothers about Him. Many said they would not let their mothers know if they smoked. A considerable number do not even mention to their mothers their personal triumphs or the school activities which most interest them.

Mothers hinder confidence, Doctor Leonard learned from the girls, in various ways—by emotional outbreaks such as nagging, yelling and weeping, by the habit of making fun, by misunderstanding, by laying stress on shame or guilt, or by sheer lack of interest.

Most striking of all, however, is the assertion that "nearly every girl studied was impressed by how busy her mother was." The discerning editor who analyzes the statistics adds this comment: "What a pity it is that our civilization has become so complex that even in a daughter's moments of emergency or bewilderment or fear or pride, a modern mother is more likely than not to be 'too busy.'"

"ROUND TOWN"
---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"It is not good to have too much liberty. It is not good to have all one wants."—Pascal.

—o—

Although it may not be so good to have all one wants, that, however, does not hinder one from wanting lots of things. If I should have all I want, I'm afraid Clanton wouldn't hold it all.

I'd Like To Have:

A Rolls-Royce automobile that would be the talk of the town, and that I could drive under Dief's and say, "Fill 'er up, boys," and Herschel Gore, J. E. Easterling and Wilbur Scarbrough would really do that thing, too.

A bed that wouldn't creak when I turn over at night.

A burglar alarm like Mr. Lande has on his store.

A muzzle to fit certain young ladies I know.

A shirt with a collar and sleeves that really fitted me as it should.

A residence in Piper, Alabama, and a flying machine to make trips back and forth.

Patience and perseverance like that of L. E. Diefenderfer, and get notoriety about strawberries.

A bright little boy like Morris Wyatt.

An invitation to eat at Matt's Lunch Shoppe and at the Dixie Cafe.

A column on the front page of C. G. N. like John Temple Graves has on the Age-Herald.

A date some night with a certain blond school teacher.

A job that didn't require so much of my time.

Clothes so that I could dress as well as Claudie Pipes and Percy Pitts.

Some more friends like J. A. Hester, Mrs. Calloway, Otto Jones, Earl Parrish, John Page.

Enough money so that I would not have to write this column each week.

Still They Wonder And Ask Why

I was handed a letter again this week, giving me, in a much more gentlemanly manner, a piece of somebody's mind—not that they think I need some more, I'm sure.

At your service, sir. The letter is published as requested:

Clanton, Ala., April 7, 1931.

Editor "Round Town" Column,
Chilton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

From your pithy quotations of philosophy heretofore expressed, I thought that it might be in keeping therewith to address this letter to you in your representative capacity and ask for its publication. It is not my purpose to join or continue a correspondence controversy that might already exist. Neither is it my intention to start one between you and me.

You will recall having published derogatory remarks relative to our dances here. You will also recall that Mr. B. Fair took exceptions to same; and that you gave him an evasive answer. The matter then stopped. I had hoped that you two would continue until the question was cleared up and settled. But it seems that you wrote and forgot and he answered and signed off. Well, I am not content to let the discussion stop there. At least, I expect to remove, in part, the impression you have given your readers. You denied it, but read again and see if your remarks do not necessarily convey the idea that you did not think well of our dances. Why did you say that you were glad our teachers were not allowed to attend? And why did you follow that with a general condemnation of some dances, etc?

Now don't think that you've hit me below the belt, as you termed it; nor that I have a personal interest in the matter. However, I do attend these dances. And from the many dances in and out of this state in which I have participated, I feel that I am qualified to pass judgment. I'll give the Clanton dances good on conduct, and say that they are otherwise above par.

Perhaps I should have mentioned it in the outset, but will you allow me the same privilege that you are enjoying, that is to write under a nom de plume. Anyway, I am contemplating that you will eventually if not immediately recognize the phraseology.

I am not ready to concede that your standard of morality is above mine. You, as well as the other people of Chilton County know me, and know the things I stand for and the things that I am against. I am not writing this in defense of myself, nor anyone. It is impossible for any accusation to injure character. And it takes more than the condemnation you have issued to even impair a single reputation.

Will you not admit that you have criticized our dances without first making a thorough investigation? And have you not heretofore recommended that such jumping to conclusions is not good policy or even dangerous; and not to be preferred to other forms of calisthenics? And don't you think that dancing should be placed in the category of other legitimate forms of amusement, namely, swimming, playing golf, attending theatre, playing bridge and such other splendid means of entertainment? And do you not think that general objections to these as such are unfounded, spurious, and relics of fogyism?

The game may be good even though I do not enjoy it. But I shall always defend the rights of those who do.

Even though I may be feminine, which fact I do not care to disclose, I do not insist on having the last word, and do not contemplate that this will be the end of this petty discussion. But as for me I hope it will be all. However, I should like to ask here and now, that from now on if you will precede your criticism with an impartial investigation and follow through with sound discretion, parties affected cannot conscientiously complain.

A. Resenter.

In answer to questions in the above letter, I will say that the reason for the first, is that that is simply my opinion. The second—because that too, is merely my opinion of some dances, having attended several myself. I also am glad, "Resenter" that you take such a broad view of the matter, and you certainly have a right to express your opinion, and through this column if you wish, at any time, provided you write as you did, and I truly believe that you ARE qualified to write on such matters, and too, you may write under a nom de plume, if you wish.

* * * *

Sometime I think I'll arrange a little party, inviting B. Fair, A Resenter, The Perfessor, Dooker Pooker, and others who are on my list, and who have contributed to this column. Then and there, they will get an idea of what I think of a real party, and we'll have a big time together.

A Business Revival In The Fall Is Forecast

road requires one of its employes to work more than eight hours a day it is subject to indictment, he said, while the motor truck driver may continue on the job until physically exhausted. He termed this unfair competition.

Federal and state commissions regulate freight and passenger rates, he said, and require regular schedules, and the maintaining of regular schedules regardless of weather conditions, while the motor vehicle may suspend operations in bad weather.

Fair Competition Asked

"If the railroads cannot earn expenses and dividends for their stockholders under fair competition," he said, "then they are not entitled to continue. That is all we ask. Fair competition, and we think we are justly entitled to it."

He said the motor vehicles pay 7 per cent of their gross income in gasoline and other taxes but do not have to build or maintain their tracks. The railroads, he said, pay 7 per cent of their gross earnings and are compelled to build and maintain their tracks.

Senators Black and Bankhead, guests of the club, sat at the speakers table, and several times when discussing federal and state regulations Mr. Sargent turned to them, expressing the hope that Congress will do something to improve transportation conditions and enact legislation that will enable the railroads to operate on a profitable basis.

He said the railroads would spend hundreds of millions of dollars for track improvements, expansions and equipment and stockholders were assured of some return on their investment, but under existing conditions they are spending very little and will not spend any more than they can avoid until they see a chance to earn something on the investment.

"I deem it a great privilege indeed to be able to visit Birmingham under auspices of the Traffic and Transportation Club and to have the opportunity of observing and studying at first hand the great industrial advance made in this remarkable region," Mr. Sargent said.

"It was not many years ago that the South was not looked upon as a leader in the industrial development of the country. That situation has entirely changed and it may be entirely accurate to say that the forward-looking business men of Birmingham have played an outstanding part in this transition. No longer ago than 1910 the total manufactured products of the United States was approximately $20,000,000,000 in value. The great bulk of this came from the Northern industrial regions. It is interesting to note that the South produced in 1920 manufactured goods equal in value to 50 per cent of all the manufactured products in the entire country in 1910.

"The region is blessed with a remarkable all-year-round climate, with varied and natural resources, unexcelled transportation facilities, a virile and forward looking citizenship, all of which convinces me that it has only started upon this real program of industrial development. More and more each year the people of the North are turning their eyes toward this region, not only with admiration for what you have achieved, but in the hope and belief that closer and more profitable commercial, industrial and social intercourse may be developed between all sections of the great inland empire bounded on the north by the Dominion of Canada, on the east by the Great Lakes and Alleghenies, on the west by the Rocky Mountains, and on the south by the Gulf of Mexico.

"Unfortunately all sections of our country have been passing through an unprecedented period of economic depression. But today we may say with confidence that the worst is behind us, and if we have the courage and fortitude of the pioneers who preceded us we may look to the future with a sense of confidence in the belief that prosperity is going to return upon a more stable and permanent basis than we have heretofore experienced."

Harmony Urged

As an era of prosperity once more settles down over the country, he said, it behooves the people of the "inland empire" to ascertain if there is not some way whereby great regions in this territory can work in closer harmony and that the states to the north should offer expanding markets for Southern products.

"From my observation," he said, "I am led to believe we have never yet thoroughly and enthusiastically and energetically tried properly to develop the trade relations that might and no doubt ought to exist up and down and through the states that lie in the great Mississippi basin. I am sure the people of the North entertain a most kindly attitude toward the people of the South and they would welcome with enthusiasm any efforts you desire or may put forth to see and get a more cordial and intense intercourse in trade relations, and I believe the time is here when all sections of this great inland empire can be of mutual advantage to one another in hastening the return of prosperity which is sure to come in developing and maintaining trade relations that would be of outstanding advantage to all."

Young Girl Is Shot In Back Saturday

past week end to spend the holidays with her mother, Mrs. W. C. Davis, and her sisters, Pauline and Berniece Davis. Pauline lives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich, and is one of the popular waitresses at the Dixie Cafe here. Berniece lives with her mother in the Enterprise community and the three sisters were together in Clanton Saturday night. This visit by Ruby was her first here since going to school in Talladega, where two of her brothers reside.

Goodson is said to have stopped a car in which the Misses Davis were riding early Saturday night, and attempted to get Ruby to go with him, but was refused. He is then said to have gone to the Aldrich home where he asked to see his former sweetheart, and being told that she was not there, he is said to have forced his way into the house where he had a few words with the girl, trying to get her to go with him. She refused and Goodson, it was stated, drew his pistol and the girl grabbed it, the first shot going wild. As he wrenched free, she turned and he shot her three times in the back, each shot going through her body. Witnesses stated according to information, that Goodson then struck her over the head with the gun. She died in the arms of her sister, Pauline.

Reports state that one of the sisters of the victim notified a policeman in town that the young man was at the home and had a gun with him, and she believed he intended killing her sister. However, before officers reached the scene Goodson had already shot the girl.

Goodson is then said to have left the house, throwing his gun, a 38-calibre revolver in the yard, and went to the home of Sheriff W. H. Gillespie, where he stated he wished to be placed in jail, giving no reason for it. The sheriff told him he could not put him in jail unless he, Goodson, told what he had done. Goodson made no other statement, and turned and walked away, later meeting a deputy sheriff and told him he wished to be put in jail. The deputy questioned him, finding that he had shot a girl. Goodson was placed in jail shortly after the shooting, and since that time has made no statement.

He was removed to the county jail in Montgomery last Sunday due to the work being done here on repairing the jail. His eyes red from weeping and loss of sleep, with tears trickling down his cheeks, Goodson would make no answers to questions asked him by a news reporter in Montgomery. His only move would be a shaking of his head and an occasional sob. Lying face down on the cot in the county jail, he seldom raised his thin, meek face which he kept buried in the pillow. When asked Sunday if there was any statement he wished to make, he would only shake his head.

Miss Davis is a member of a well known family of this section. She was considered one of the most attractive young ladies of the Enterprise community, and a popular student at the school in Talladega. She is a member of the Mount Pisgah church, near Enterprise, where she also attended school for sometime.

Funeral services were held last Monday morning, with the Rev. F. A. Gibson officiating. Interment followed in the Mt. Pisgah cemetery, with Martin of Clanton in charge. Surviving is the mother, Mrs. W. C. Davis; two sisters, Pauline and Berniece. Four brothers, Stanley of Montgomery; Augusta and Baker of Talladega, and Luther of Clanton; and a host of friends.

The large number of people attending the funeral of this attractive and loved young lady, and the number of beautiful floral offerings from people of prominence, attested to her popularity.

Representative Massey Edgar, of Washington County has braved the wrath of the unconditional prohibitionists by introducing a bill which would legalize the sale of "nigh" beer in the state of Alabama and impose a tax of three cents per bottle on its sale, for the further support of the public schools. Those who sometimes imbibe and who have tried the stuff in other states say that it is "vanity and vexation of spirit" and that a man could not hold enough of it to make him feel good. But even at that, Massey is a brave man, for he has invited the lightnings of the unconditional prohibitionists and the makers of the illicit strong stuff that we are told "paints landscapes on the brains of men."

Mr. Esco now has a real neat little lunch stand and appearances, if they count, will certainly be a fine card at his new place.

CONSIDERABLE INTEREST BEING SHOWN IN TON-LITTER CON.

Considerable interest is being shown in the Ton-Litter Contest among the 4-H Club Boys in this county, according to County Agent Stapp, this week. Mr. Stapp stated that there were nine boys from the Thomas Junior Club who have entered the contest and five from Mt. Pleasant Club. Counting several from the Isabella community, the total will be about 20 boys in the contest to raise these fine pigs.

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton is sponsoring this work among the 4-H Club boys of the county with the county agent and vocational teachers assisting the boys in following the recommendations on caring for and feeding their pigs, in preparation for the sale in Clanton in the Fall, at which time all the pigs in the contest will be brought to Clanton and sold to the highest bidder.

CARD OF THANKS

It is our utmost desire to express our thanks and appreciation from the depths of our hearts to the people of Chilton County as a whole, and to the people of the Enterprise Community and Clanton, for the numerous deeds and words of kindness shown and expressed at the sudden death of our beloved sister and daughter, Ruby Davis. The beautiful floral offerings made a most lasting impression of gratitude on each of us, and this kindness will never be forgotten.

Others were Mrs. Percy, Latin teacher at Piedmont and Mr. Pastgill, a Junior, and Roy Hayes, a Senior at Piedmont.

The Pushmataha Philomathic Club meeting will be held on Tuesday, April 14th, instead of on Friday, April 10th, as was originally planned. These meetings are not open to the public as is the Helen Keller Literary Society meetings.

The next meeting of the Literary Society will be held on April 25th, when the Russian Operetta "Sonia" will will be given. This is the most elaborate operetta given here in recent years. Everyone is urged to come. Admission will be 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

Program Of Variety At Isabella School Friday

A variety program of one-act plays, tricks, song-hits, and pantomine will be presented at Isabella, Friday night, April 17, at eight o'clock. It promises a succession of laughs and runs a full evening. The program is as follows:

1. Our Aunt from California, a rollicking play of three young girls and their rich aunt.
2. Tricks, Mr. Goff, who performs these tricks has been with a show. It's worth the entire admission fee to see his tricks.
3. Jazz Wedding, the wedding of Mr. Izzy Bright and Miss Ura Nutt is of widespread interest. You'll laugh till you're jazzy all over.
4. Fair and Warmer. A foolish pantomine is no name for the unexpected laughs you'll get.
5. Song Hits. If you've heard Ralph Grant sing, you know you won't miss this program. If you haven't heard him you'll live to regret not coming.
6. One-Act Play. This is a snappy, uproarious comedy, a fitting conclusion to a program of fun.

Admission 10 and 20 cents.

TRIP TO MISSISSIPPI IS ENJOYED BY LOCAL PARTY

Mr. J. L. Holley, Leonard Holley and Elmer Rollan made a speedy trip over to Wilkinson, Miss., leaving here on Monday morning, around four o'clock, March 23, and reaching there about 11 a.m. Tuesday March 24.

They were visitors of Tom Holley, who is in the logging business there.

The trip was made via Selma, Jackson, McComb, Liberty and several other smaller cities. While there they went over to Natchez, and crossed the Mississippi River there and went over into Louisiana just for a visit. Leaving Wilkinson at noon Wednesday, March 25, they reached home Friday, March 27, at 3 p.m. bringing with them a mule and a horse.

The trip was made in a Model A Ford truck. On the return trip they came back via Tuscaloosa, Centerville, Calera and Montevallo. Roads as an average were in fairly good shape. They had no bad luck.

Intelligence tests are the bunk, so far as giving any clue to the real intelligence of those to whom they are applied is concerned. At least, that is the opinion of Dr. Walter Pitkin, instructor in journalism and adult education at Columbia University. We are glad to have our own long-held view on the subject confirmed by such an eminent authority.

GOVERNOR GRANTS LIFE TO WIFE POISONER; REVIEWS SENSATIONAL DEATH CASE

Tillman E. Davis, Covington County wife slayer, will not pay with his life for his crime. Gov. Miller Monday afternoon commuting his death sentence to a life term in prison. A weak mentality possessed by Davis is given as the reason for commutation by Gov. Miller

In commuting the death sentence of Davis, Gov. Miller goes extensively into the history of the crime, the opinion of Dr. Partlow and the record of written and oral testimony. He also cites an opinion of the late Associate Justice H. M. Somtrvillt, written nearly half a century ago, which he says is the best known rule to fix the mental responsibility for crime

Davis killed his wife in February, 1930, on the road between Florala and Opp in Covington County. He first poisoned her and later wrecked a car in which he was riding with her in an effort to make it appear that she was accidentally killed. The pardon board unanimously denied Davis's application for commutation but Gov. Miller in his comfutation order calls the crime a crude one showing the weak mentality of the 22-year-old boy who committed it.

FOREWORD

My primary purpose in writing this story of the American expeditionary forces in France is to render what I conceive to be an important service to my country. In that adventure there are many lessons useful to the American people, should they ever again be called to arms, and I felt it a duty to record them as I saw them.

The World war found us absorbed in the pursuits of peace and quite unconscious of possible threat to our security. We would listen to no warnings of danger. We had made small preparation for defense and none for aggression. So when war actually came upon us we had to change the very habits of our lives and minds to meet its realities. The slow processes by which we achieved these changes and applied our latent power to the problems of combat in Europe, despite our will, our numbers and our wealth, I have endeavored to describe. Therein lie the lessons of which I write.

I wish to dedicate this modest work to the men of all ranks who served with me in France, and especially to those who gave their lives to the cause for which we fought.

To my comrades of the allied armies I wish to say that I am not attempting to write a history of the World war or of the epic part they took in it. I write of our own army and for our own people, and I have not consciously magnified or minimized the effort of any army or any people. There is credit for all of us in the final triumph of our united arms. The struggle of the allies was much longer, their sacrifices very much greater, than ours.

I am grateful to President Wilson and Secretary Baker for selecting me to command our armies and for the whole-hearted and unfailing support they accorded me in France. No commander was ever privileged to lead a finer force; no commander ever derived greater inspiration from the performance of his troops.

JOHN J. PERSHING.

CHAPTER I

On May 3, 1917, four weeks after the United States had declared war on Germany, I received the following telegram from my father-in-law, the late Senator F. E. Warren, in Washington:

"Wire me today whether and how much you speak, read and write French."

At this time I was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, which adjoins San Antonio, Texas, and was in command of the southern department with the rank of major general. Naturally, Senator Warren's telegram suggested that I was to be assigned to some duty in France, but as no intimation had been given out regarding the extent of our active participation in the war, the message was somewhat puzzling.

However, I telegraphed the following reply:

"Spent several months in France nineteen-eight studying language. Spoke quite fluently; could read and write well at that time. Can easily reacquire satisfactory working knowledge."

Quotes Warren's Letter.

My reply, to be sure, was rather optimistic, yet it was comparatively accurate and perhaps was justified by the possibilities to be inferred from Senator Warren's telegram. A few days later I received from him the following letter:

"Dear Jack:

"This is what happened: Last night, about ten o'clock, the secretary of war rang me up and wanted to know if I would call in and see him this morning, and I responded that I would if I could reach him at nine o'clock. This is the first time he has ever asked me to call for a consultation.

"When I reached him he said in the most distant and careless way: 'Oh, by the way, before I discuss the matter about which I asked you to call—do you happen to know whether Pershing speaks French? (This is the first time your name was ever mentioned between the secretary of war and me, direct.)

"I said I was not certain about that; that I knew he was a linguist along the lines of Spanish and, to some extent, Japanese, and all of the Philippine dialects (a pardonable exaggeration by one's father-in-law)—that perhaps my wife might know, as she speaks French a little and reads it readily.

"He said: 'Well, it is of no special consequence, only I happened to think of it at this moment.' I replied: 'Well, I'll ask my wife about it today and see whether she knows, and will let you know.' He then said: 'If you don't mind, do so.'

"And then he proceeded to discuss quite fully some appropriation matters on which I intended to go to work upon my arrival at the Capitol.

"I hope you will wire me promptly upon receipt of my telegram so that I may tell the secretary 'what my wife said about it (?).'

"Affectionately,

"F. E. WARREN."

Message Promises Command.

Shortly after the receipt of the private wire and before the above letter reached me, a telegram dated May 2 came from Maj. Gen Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff, containing the opening words, "For your eye alone," followed by a message in code:

"Under plans under consideration is one which will require among other troops our infantry regiments and one artillery regiment from your department for service in France. If plans are carried out you will be in command. You will be in command of the entire force. Wire me at once designation of the regiments selected by you and their present stations."

I construed this message to mean that these troops were to form a division, which, together with such other troops as might be sent over at once, would be under my command.

Within a day or so after the receipt of Scott's telegram it was intimated to Col. M. H. Barnum, my chief of staff, that we might be called upon for a recommendation, and after consultation with him I selected the Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth regiments of infantry and the Sixth field artillery. These, together with two other artillery regiments and the necessary auxiliary units, were later organized as our first division.

Surprised by Developments.

I had scarcely given a thought to the possibility of my being selected to be in supreme command of our forces, as afterward developed, although my old friend, Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, had written me that he thought my selection almost certain. After I left the Philippines, in 1913, where he was in command, he and I had kept up an intermittent correspondence in which we freely exchanged confidences on army matters.

In one of his letters early in April, 1917, General Bell spoke of the possibility of our sending an army to France and gave a list of the general officers who might be considered for the supreme command. Discussing the chances for and against each one, he predicted, much to my surprise, that all the others, including himself, would be passed over and that I would be selected.

I was the junior on the list of major generals, hence I could not fully accept General Bell's view, but he was so strongly convinced that he was right that he requested an assignment under my command.

The major generals senior to me at the time were, in order of rank: Leonard Wood, General Bell, Thomas H. Barry, Hugh L. Scott and Tasker H. Bliss.

CHAPTER II

I arrived in Washington May 9 and the next morning called at the office of the chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott. He spoke of my assignment, which, as had been my impression from his message of May 2, was to command a division, and told me that it had been made upon his recommendation.

General Scott outlined the general plans in so far as anything definite had been determined. Beginning with February 3, the war college division of the general staff presented a number of recommendations for action in the event of war with the central powers. One was for the enactment of a draft law and others referred to the size of the army to be organized and the necessity for the procurement of equipment and supplies.

Chagrined by Unpreparedness.

March 15, acting under instructions of the chief of staff, the war college division submitted a more detailed scheme for raising an army of 500,000 men. But these were all eleventh-hour suggestions and no definite action was taken on any of them until May 18, when congress passed the law authorizing the increase of military establishment through the application of the draft.

I was really more chagrined than astonished to realize that so little had been done when there were so many things that might have been done long before. It had been apparent to everybody for months that we were likely to be forced into the war and a state of war had actually existed for several weeks, yet scarcely a start had been made to prepare for it. The War department seemed to be suffering from a kind of inertia, for which it was probably not altogether responsible.

But the truth is that the general staff at Washington had never been organized along modern lines, its membership had been recently reduced by congress, and but few of its officers had the experience necessary fully to understand its functions. In this fact we no doubt find the basis of many of the difficulties that arose later in connection with the preparation of our army at home and its shipment and supply abroad.

Praise for Secretary Baker.

My next call was upon the secretary of war, Mr. Newton D. Baker. It was a much younger and considerably smaller man who greeted me than I had expected. He actually looked diminutive as he set behind his desk, doubled up in a rather large office chair, but when he spoke my impression changed immediately. We talked of my recent experience in Mexico and of conditions on the border, which, fortunately, were quieter than they had been for several years.

Secretary of War Newton D. Baker at His Desk.

Mr. Baker referred to my appointment and said that he had given the subject very careful thought and had made the choice solely upon my record. I expressed my deep appreciation of the honor, mentioned the responsibility of the position and said that I hoped he would have no reason to regret his action.

I left Mr. Baker's office with a distinctly favorable impression of the man upon whom, as head of the War department, would rest the burden of preparing for a great war to which the wholly unready nation was now committed.

Still proceeding under the assumption that I was to command only a division in France, my feelings may well be imagined when a few days later, the secretary of war called me in to say that it had been decided by the President to send me abroad as commander in chief, and that I should select my staff accordingly and prepare to sail as soon as possible.

The thought of the responsibilities that this high position carried depressed me for the moment. Here in the face of a great war I had been placed in command of a theoretical army which had yet to be constituted, equipped, trained and sent abroad. Still, there was no doubt in my mind then or at any time of my ability to [illegible] provided the government would furnish men, equipment and supplies.

Harbord Chief of Staff.

Obviously it was advisable to choose my staff as soon as practicable. After studying the records of several officers of my acquaintance and of others who were recommended for the position, I chose Maj. James G. Harbord. His efficiency in every grade from the day of his enlistment as a private in the army in January, 1889, was not only of record but was well known to those with whom he had served.

Throughout the war Harbord never hesitated a moment to express his opinion with the utmost frankness, no matter how radically it might differ from my own, nor did he ever fail to carry out instructions faithfully even when they were not in accord with his views. Entirely unselfish, he labored incessantly for what he believed to be the best interests of our armies. His ability, his resourcefulness, his faculty for organization, and, above all, his loyalty, were outstanding qualities, and these, together with a compelling personality, made him invaluable to the nation in this important position

REV. JOSEPH E. EACH IS IN NASHVILLE SCHOOL

Nashville, Tenn.—Rev. Joseph E. Each of Thorsby, Ala., arrived here today to enroll in the Rural Church School, which opened its fourth annual two weeks session at the Vanderbilt University School of Religion here.

Almost four hundred other students, the great majority of them beneficiaries of scholarships which pay in full their expenses for travelling both ways and living in Nashville, were registered here today. They represent thirty religious denominations, and are from more than twenty states.

Three classes, of fifty minutes duration each, follow an hour's devotional to compose the morning's program. The afternoon is spent in recreation and instruction in play leadership. Special musical programs will be held each evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, and an address by some authority on rural life will be given each noon and evening.

The courses of study are divided into five groups, on Country Life, the Rural Church, Rural Church Activities, Community Life, and Ministerial Efficiency. A series of public addresses is also considered a part of the regular program.

ANNUAL EASTER SINGING AT POPLAR SPRINGS SUCCESS

Sunday was our regular annual singing at Poplar Springs and there was not as many attended as usual, but the singing was a great success. Of course it is always said that each one is the best, but I don't know whether this one was the best or not, but I don't think it could be beat. The weather was not so hot that you could not sing, yet it was very comfortable in the house

The singing was opened by Prof. W. M. Devaughn, who sang one song, and prayer by Rev. W. H. Wilson. The following officers were elected for the day: Prof. W. M. Devaughn, chairman, Dr. Williams, W. F. Gilliland and J. B. Hammond, committee and Miss Gladys Wilson, secretary. After the officers were elected, Prof. Devaughn sang another song. Then the following directors sang two songs each: W. G. Culp, Jesse Jones, Arthur Beard, Edward Jones, Everett Devaughn, R. O. Williams and O. L. Devaughn. Then a quartet was sung by Jesse Jones, W. M. Devaughn, Akins Collins and Ural Wilson, from Birmingham. William Jones and Dr. Williams sang two songs each. We were dismissed until 1:30 During this time everybody enjoyed a nice dinner.

The singing was called to order again by Chairman, who sang one song after which the following directors sang two songs each: Rev. M. Lockhart, R. T. Grant, Akins Collins, Lee Grant, Amie Boswell, Mr. Salser from Birmingham, L. T. Grant, Ralph Grant, I. D. Huett, J. B. Hammond, J. B. Varner, G. C. Weldon, G. C. Glasscock, T. E. Wyatt, and C. H. Robinson

During the afternoon the program was varied by six quartets arranged by different singers, also two special songs consisting of eight singers. The pianists for the day were: W. G. Culp, Lee and Ralph Grant, C. H. Robinson, Misses Grant, Guy, Eula Collins and Merrell Walker. The closing song, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee" was sung by the chairman, and the closing prayer by Rev. M. Lockhart.

Everybody seemed to enjoy the day. We wish to thank all the visiting singers for their help and invite you back on next Easter.

WARNING IS ISSUED TO LIVESTOCK OWNERS

Dr. C. A. Cary, State veterinarian and dean of the college of veterinary medicine at Auburn, issued a statement to farmers and owners of livestock to be careful about the quality of feed which they feed to their livestock. He said that work animals and other livestock are dying because of decayed and otherwise objectionable feed which they are receiving.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

by your Fertilizer Dealer
No. 5
in a Series appearing in this newspaper

SIDE dressing with Chilean Nitrate gives crops the push that sends them along with big-paying yields—and this year you can buy the best nitrogen—Chilean Nitrate—at lowest price in years.

I am selling more Chilean Nitrate than ever, because more of my farmers want it and want more of it. Better get your order in. Delivery when you want it.

Your Fertilizer Dealer

EXPERIENCE of thousands of farmers with Chilean Nitrate proves that this natural nitrogen fertilizer comes out on top with bigger yields. Improves quality, too.

Get Chilean in the new 100-lb. bag—the bag without a backache. Be sure to say "Chilean" when you order your nitrate. "Chilean" is the real thing—the natural nitrate. Remember the two kinds—Original Chilean (Crystalline) and Champion Brand (Granulated) both natural nitrate.

Scouts To Assist Veterans Reunion

Of the 900 Boy Scouts who will gather in Montgomery to assist with the staging of the Confederate Veterans Reunion on June 1-6, 100 of them will go from the Central Alabama Area Council. These scouts, who will be encamped in regular army style at Maxwell field, will handle traffic, conduct information booths, and serve as companions to the Confederate veterans in attendance.

This announcement is made by Executive John J. Sigwald, who outlines the requirements for scouts who attend the reunion as follows: He must hold at least the rank of second class scout, he must have an adequately equipped uniform, and must obtain the approval of his local scoutmaster.

Forty of the scouts already appointed for this duty are from Opelika and 12 from Auburn.

BOY SCOUTS TO GATHER IN CAMP JUNE 6-JULY 4

Staff members to assist Executive John J. Sigwald of the Central Alabama Area Council at Camp Spring Villa, June 6-July 4, are announced by the executive. E. J. Harris, scoutmaster at West Palm Beach, Fla., will serve as assistant camp director to Mr. Sigwald.

Mr. Harris served in this capacity last summer and was extremely popular with all scouts in camp.

The junior staff consists of Parker Preston Powell, Auburn; Walter Westerbeke, Opelika; Clifford Wear, Opelika; Douglas Harris, Tallassee; John Coley, Alexander City; and Marion Lee Melson, Selma.

Plans have been completed for a new mess hall with a seating capacity of 80 scouts and its erection has been started. It will be of the army type. Also, work will begin within a few days on a new bath house for use in connection with the $5,000 concrete swimming pool.

Last summer the camp was given recognition by L. L. McDonald, chairman of the national camping headquarters. This is a distinct honor, as the standards of scout camps are very rigid.

Menus for every meal throughout camp have been carefully worked out and approved by Miss Dana Gatchell, of Auburn, an expert in dietetics.

On April 6, Executive Sigwald will attend a scout training camp at Charleston, Mississippi.

NEW DRIVERS ARE SAFER

If asked to express an opinion offhand, most persons would say that new drivers of automobiles would likely cause more accidents than experienced ones. But this idea is all wrong, according to W. T. Palmer, manager of the replacement division of the Russell Manufacturing Company, who has been making a nationwide study of the reasons for the growing number of traffic accidents.

He claims that the new driver, recognizing his own inexperience, is more careful than the veteran motorist, who is over-confident of his driving ability and too accustomed to taking chances. Mr. Palmer further says:

"Another way in which the veteran driver is more careless than the neophyte is in the upkeep of his car. To the new owner every squeak, rattle and sputter is something to worry over and have fixed immediately. The old timer lets the body finish become dulled through lack of washing, he neglects lubrication, and he allows his brakes to become dangerously worn and out of adjustment, feeling that his driving skill will offset the need for adjusting and relining. Hence, more accidents. In fact, a vast majority of the country's motoring mishaps are caused by drivers of long experience."

There appears to be some sound reasoning in the above statements. At least they should give the supposedly expert driver something to think about.

The total national wealth of the United States in 1929 amounted to $361,800,000 and the national income was $84,000,000,000, according to estimates made public March 22 by the National Industrial Conference Board. The per capita wealth in 1929 was $2,977 and the per capita income was $692 for that year.

of cigarettes has gained 17 tons a day, according to a well-known tobacco expert. His estimation is based upon an increase from 146,000,000 pounds of tobacco used in the manufacture of cigarettes in 1913 to 346,000,000 pounds in 1929. If the rate of increase continues consumption will amount to 400,00,000 pounds in 1940.

At the recent world grain conference Russia threw down her gauntlet and declared that Russia will increase instead of decrease her wheat production. FREAK PINE TREE IN WILCOX COUNTY

A Shortleaf Pine tree apparently but nine years old at stump height and twenty-one years of age a few feet up the stem has been found in Wilcox County by State Forest Inspector J. M. Stauffer. This paradoxical condition is based upon the facts that the lower part of the tree is but seven inches in diameter and contains but nine rings of annual growth, while a short distance higher the diameter is something over ten inches with twenty-one growth rings.

With the exception of these abnormalities the tree is in fairly good growing condition. The peculiarities noted are due to the fact that the pine survived an injury which would ordinarily kill a tree, but which in this instance merely cut off the growth of the lower part while permitting the upper section to continue its development. Some twelve years ago the tree was ringed or girdled. That is, a notch was cut entirely around the tree through the bark and into the sapwood.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

CHILDISH TROUBLES

Ho-hum . . . It's 10 P. M. Just returned from seeing a little fellow four years of age. The only child of his parents, hence a very anxious mother, who co-operated with me at every step. I encountered a moderate fever, a loaded digestive tract belonging to a "very hearty eater," a vigorous and rapid pulse and breathing, a slight sore throat; lungs not involved. Any old mother might have given a dose of castor oil, and wrapped the little patient up warm in bed, and he might have been all right tomorrow.

But, this is a highly technical age. Wise young parents do not fool with old wives' fables; they call a physician.

The little fellow was very anxious that Santa Claus should visit him; being a personal friend of that Christmas idol of childhood, I readily promised to intercede for the visit of the fat little saint—which brought me a very willing subject for examination.

I actually taught the 4-year-old to gargle! And he did it to perfection. A simple evacuant for the loaded bowel, with a nice, good-tasted germicide for the throat, and the trick was turned. I learned incidentally that, there was a basement to the cottage that was not exactly sanitary, and damp at times; that the little boy played there on chilly days when it was pleasanter indoors; a few words of practical advice to the young mother were absorbed as a dry sponge takes up water. The same of the admonition in regard to indiscriminate eating. This boy had eaten "nearly a pint of ice-cream—and ha promptly thrown it up"—a few hours before I was called to go see him!

The proud daddy—a bridge mechanic—had "just loved to see that kid eat."

Never was a fee paid more willingly or promptly; never have I left a more grateful family. And, Santa came on time, leaving a generous supply of things that little boys like; I know, for I talked with the old man.

WHEN FOOD SOURS

ABOUT two hours after eating, many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians prescribe to correct excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

APRIL ANNIVERSARIES

Four Presidents of the United States were born in April, Jefferson, Monroe, Buchanan and Grant. Among other distinguished Americans born in this month were John Burroughs and John Muir, famed naturalists; Henry Clay, statesman and orator; Washington Irving and Edward Everett Hale, authors; Commodore M. C. Perry, who negotiated the first treaty between the United States. King Prajadhipok of Siam inventor of the telegraph; Wilbur Wright, airplane designer, and the elder John Pierpont Morgan, noted financier.

April marks the anniversaries of many important events in American history, including the beginning of all the wars in which the country has engaged, except the War of 1812. The Revolution, the War with Mexico, the Civil War, the War with Spain and America's participation in the World War all began in April.

Washington was inaugurated first President of the United States on April 30, 1789; Louisiana was purchased from France on April 30, 1803. The battle of San Jacinto, which established the independence of Texas, was fought on April 21, 1836.

The first "pony express" between St. Joseph, Mo., and California was inaugurated in April, 1860; Peary reached the North Pole in April, 1909.

These are only a few of the many anniversaries which make April perhaps the richest historic associations of any month in the year.

CAN BABIES BE "MARKED"

By Dr. Christmas Seal

Dr. Christmas Seal has often told friends and patients that the young mother's fear of "marking" her baby is absolutely without foundation, being based on nothing more than superstition. He has admitted just one instance within his personal knowledge, in which the theory might seem to be borne out. A young mother, hearing music, turned to her window. There she saw an Italian organ grinder tusseling with a big brown animal, erect on its hind feet, which turned out to be a performing bear. It gave her quite a turn and she knew at once that her unborn child would suffer. Sure enough! When the baby was born it had bare feet.

CHILD WELFARE METHODS

It is being recognized that social science can contribute more to mankind by concentrating its attention on the children of the poor, who are too often sacrificed in the economic mill.

Some of our states and municipalities provide allowances for unfortunate families to care for their children in the home instead of sending them to institutions. The amounts allotted vary from two dollars up weekly for each child. As the number of children in the family increases, the allowance per child is slightly reduced.

Europe, also, has its systems of family allowances. A single French industry, the textile syndicate of Roubaix-Tourcoing, during 1930 paid the sum of $1,200,000 to a total of 58,000 families having all together 99,162 children under 13 years of age.

The plan differs from ours, however, in that the allotment per child increases with the number of children. The syndicate pays about 10 cents a day for one child, approximately 25 cents a day for two, 37.5 cents for three, 60 cents for four, and so on. It is felt that the benefits accruing to the families account for the surprising number of mothers who devote themselves exclusively to the home instead of following some other profession.

For ten years, the Department of the Seine which includes Paris, has paid an annual allowance to mothers of French nationality, following the birth of a third child, provided the other two children are still living.

May Use Money Only As Stated

George E. Stone, treasurer of Mobile county, has been advised by Attorney General Knight that funds derived from a gasoline tax are to be used only in payment of current maintenance expenses and held that county treasurers have no authority to set up a special fund from gasoline tax moneys.

"There is no question in my mind," Mr. Knight ruled "that funds payable to counties which are derived from the gasoline tax as distributed by the state among the 67 counties, can be used only for the current maintenance of county roads and not in payment of debts created prior to their receipt. This has been repeatedly decided by this office."

More than 93,000 candidates for airplane pilot licenses have been examined physically by the United States government.

Birmingham, Eng., has opened five rest rooms providing newspapers, games and radio for the unemployed.

Railways of the United States expended a billion dollars for improvements during the year 1930.

Almost one-half of the world's 1,400 broadcasting stations are located in the United States.

Illiteracy in Alabama decreased from 16.1 per cent in 1920 to 12.6 per cent in 1930.

THE VALUE OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Newspaper advertising seems to be the one constant factor in the business world, judging from the survey of businesses which failed to be affected by the depression of last year. The latest to come to our attention is the Hotel Gibson in Cincinnati. Last year was the largest in its history, and the hotel is eighty-two years old. In that time three new hotels have been erected. C. C. Schiffeler, managing director, attributes the increase in business to a never ending newspaper advertising campaign.

"Of course we are continually redecorating, remodeling, and enlarging the hotel," Mr. Schiffeler said, "but I think the large percentage of our business comes from the use of newspaper space. We use only the most modern drawings and layouts in our display advertising, but at the Gibson our one aim is to dispense old fashioned hospitality, and we have found this combination a very attractive one for the public."

Last year just at the time that business men in general were beginning to retrench on their advertising appropriations, Mr. Schiffeler announced that the Hotel Gibson would increase its lineage by almost fifty per cent. The financial statement of the hotel at the end of the year was conclusive proof that his faith in the efficacy of the newspaper advertising was well founded.

Flames Gut Building, Some Stock and Fixtures Saved

Ramer, April 6.—A fire that destroyed the Ramer Pharmacy, the store of A. J. Rushton, merchant, and the building of the former Bank of Ramer was discovered in the pharmacy today at 5:30 a.m. All contents of the Rushton store and the bank building were saved, but everything in the drug store was a total loss.

Estimated loss of Mrs. N. Trotter and son, operators of the pharmacy, was $4,000, covered partially by insurance. The Rushton building was estimated at $750, with insurance $400. The bank building and fixtures, the original cost of which was $11,000, carried insurance of $4,300. Fixtures of the Ramer barber shop, on the second floor of the bank buildings, were saved.

R. S. Lewis, section foreman of the back door was broken into, but there was such a rush of smoke that entrance was impossible.

the fire and sounded the alarm. The Coast Line, on way to work, discovered

By 7:30 only the shells of the drug store and the bank building, which were of brick, were left. Rushton's store, a fram building, was quickly consumed.

Mr. Rushton, who in point of service, is the oldest merchant in Ramer, was busy this morning moving his merchandise into a vacant store adjoining R. C. Whatley, merchant, where he will operate temporarily.

Mrs. Claude Raynes of Chicago testified in court that she had very little use for a husband except to provide her with money.

The first national Bank of Mobile is one of the five strong southern banks designated by William Wrigley, Jr., Chicago chewing gum manufacturer, to handle the $12,000,000 fund which the Wrigley company proposes to invest in southern cotton. With this money, cotton up to 2,000,00 bales will be bought or accepted in payment of shipments of chewing gum, at a price not higher than 12 cents per pound.

The state legislature re-convened on Tuesday, March 31. Problems that will bulk large during the rest of this session are the state's debt of about $17,000,000, and a system of taxation which shall put the state government on a sound financial footing. Other important matters to be considered: Continuation of highway construction program; a bond issue to amortize the state's debt; naming a joint committee from senate and house to find out if educational funds are being spent properly; report of the house committee appointed to investigate the State Training School for Girls at Birmingham: Gov Miller's recommendation for a state commission to work with a similar comimisison from Tennessee, to make plans for operation of Muscle Shoals by Alabama and Tennessee jointly.

It was made known Tuesday, March 31, that Gov. Miller had replaced six members of the board of trustees of the State Training School for Girls with new appointees. The old board, appointed by former Gov. Bibb Graves, had exonorated Mrs. Ira F. Champion, superintendent of the school of charges of inhuman treatment by a vote of 7 to 4.

Representative Rish of Houston county has two bills before the legislature to amend the state constitution so as to permit income tax and inheritance tax legislation. The proposed income tax: one per cent on incomes of $3,600 to $5,000; graduates up to 10 per cent on incomes of $100,000 or more. The proposed inheritance tax: one per cent on estates of $35,000 to $50,000; graduates up to 15 per cent on estates of $5,000,000 or more.

Warren Ambrose, 76, veteran Southern Railway engineer, died Tuesday, March 31, in Selma, of pneumonia. An engineer for the Southern since 1887, he had made his home in Selma since then. His early life was spent in Scottsboro, his birthplace, and in Tuscaloosa.

Are you 100 years old? If so, get in touch with Prof. Dabney S. Lancaster, University of Alabama. The reason: the state university wants to invite you to be present when it celebrates its own hundredth birthday May 10-12, 1931. Townships, churches, schools, lodges or other institutions organized in 1831 or earlier are also invited to send representatives to this celebration.

An oil portrait of Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, native Alabamian and famed World War hero, is to be presented some time next winter to the state of Alabama by Chester D. Pugsley, wealthy Peekskill, N. Y., capitalist and admirer of Gen. Bullard. Gov. Miller, for the people of Alabama, will make the formal speech of acceptance, and the painting is to be hung in the Department of Archives and History at Montgomery. Gen. Bullard has signified his intention of being in Montgomery for the occasion.

Alabama may have legal near beer Fact. Representative Edgar of Washington county has drawn up a bill legalizing near beer containing 1-2 of one per cent of alcohol, and levying a license on dealers of three cents a pint, the resulting revenue to go into the state's educational trust fund. Present legislation prohibits possession or sale of any liquor that "looks, smells, or tastes" like beer.

If a bill proposed by Senator McDaniel of Marengo county becomes law, Alabama's agricultural high schools and four teachers' colleges will become ancient history. The McDaniel measure proposes to abolish these institutions and to divert the money now being spent on them to the upkeep of elementary and academic secondary schools the training of teachers presumably being turned over to the University, Auburn and Montevallo.

State Representative W. C. Givhan of Dallas County is reported to have advised friends in Selma that he intends to run for Congress next year against Hon. Lamar Jeffers, present incumbent from the Fourth district. Under the reapportionment of congressional representation from Alabama, the Fourth district now consists of the following counties: St. Clair, Augusta, Coosa, Elmore, Clay, Calhoun, Talladega, and Dallas.

According to Representative Carmichael of Colbert county, 1500 tons of nitrate, manufactured at Muscle Shoals 10 years ago, were recently discovered to be in storage at the plant and were sold by officials in charge to the International Fertilizer Co., through farmers in Colbert and neighboring counties offered to pay $12 a ton for it. The fertilizer concern is alleged to have paid from $7.50 to $4.50 per ton less than the farmers offered.

ELECTRIFIED FARMS

In spite of the depression, the extension of electric service to farms of the United States went forward in 1930 with practically normal rapidity, 90,806 additional farms being provided with electricity during the year, an increase of 16.3 per cent.

According to a survey recently completed, California and New York lead in the number of farms now served, as well as in the number of newly electrified farms added last year. Among the states adding 3,000 or more farms in 1930, Alabama showed the highest percentage of increase, 40 per cent.

The number of electrified farms in the United States has risen from 166,140 in 1923 to 647,677 in 1930, a gain of 290 per cent in seven years.

That there is still a wide field for the future expansion of rural electrification is seen in the fact that in spite of the rapid progress made, only 10 per cent of American fams now have this service.

With continued cooperation in this movement by farm organizations, agricultural colleges, electric companies and the farmers themselves, progress will doubtless be even more swift in the next decade than it has been in the past, and the drudgery of farm life will be correspondingly reduced.

Full Rows

V-C FERTILIZERS FILL EVERY ROW WITH PROFITS

Any business, to succeed, has got to get a reasonable profit on top of costs. Farming is a business. Farming is a successful business when it cuts costs low by growing heavy yields per acre, yields of high quality. V-C fertilizer helps in this.

"V-C Fertilizers have given excellent results on all my farms. On one where V-C Prolific 8-4-6 and 8-3-5 were used, the tobacco crop averaged 1,200 pounds per acre and the price averaged 33 cents. The returns per acre were around $396."—D. B. Andrews, Calybeate Springs, N. C.

For 19 years J. T. Jeter has sold V-C fertilizers exclusively at Gladewater, Texas. He knows whereof he speaks when he says, "My customers are perfectly satisfied with V-C." Mr. Jeter adds that his sales have increased every year.

"Grandma must be gettin' deaf. When you set off that dynamite in the new pasture this morning, she patted her hair and smoothed her apron and said 'Come in'."—Exchange.

The Roman Empire finally tumbled into dust because its soil became exhausted.*—U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

You get back more than you pay out

WHEN it comes to swapping dollars on fertilizer, you get back more dollars than you pay out. The average is over 3½ for 1—but when your paid-out dollars are for V-C fertilizer and your taken-in dollars are for crops grown right with the V-C, you ought to beat that. Many successful farmers are getting maximum profit every year, with V-C. They're ready to get it again, this season; they've bought their V-C. If you are not ready, you can fix that right now—a V-C dealer or a V-C sales office is near you, waiting to hear from you.

"From the first year we took on V-C fertilizers they have been easier and easier to sell. This is due to the fact that customers are so universally satisfied that they boost V-C goods. From the standpoint of the dealer as well as that of the farmer, V-C fertilizers are exceptionally profitable and satisfactory."—Stuckey & Howell, Midland City, Ala.

Farming is slow to change because the old learn slowly—and farming is thousands of years old.

There is as little economy in taking food away from your field plants, expecting them to yield well on what they can get from the soil alone, as there would be in curtailing the food of your animals.—U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

Money spent for fertilizer should be considered a business investment. Like other investments, it should be wisely made.—Florida Extension Service.

"Young man, you can't sell books in this town without a license!"
"Yes, sir, Cap—been trying two days, and couldn't, but I didn't know that was the reason."—Exchange.

On 4½ acres, W. R. Green of Hurricane, W. Va., raised 4,665 pounds of tobacco that he sold for $35 per hundred, average. "My net for the crop was $1,632," says Mr. Green. "I used V-C, 400 pounds per acre. Have been growing tobacco 40 years, and have used other brands, but nothing comes up to V-C."

Felt Bad After Eating

"BEFORE I started taking Black-Draught, three years ago, my health was very bad," writes Mrs. C. C. Carson, 845 Concord St., Beaumont, Texas. "I suffered constantly from constipation. I had headache when I got up in the morning, and I felt dull and sluggish. I hardly ate a meal that my food agreed with me. Frequently I would have gas on my stomach, and felt awful.

"I read about Black-Draught, and I thought it might help me. After I had taken it a little while, I felt much better. It relieves constipation. I keep it on hand so when I need a laxative I will have it. In the three years I have been taking it, I have never found anything as good for constipation."

same time told his wife that the hogs will be with you tomorrow,' giving no reason why they would be there. As soon as he had finished the letter, Mrs Apperson had asked him to go to the barn and get some dry corn cobs for starting a fire, it was stated, and when he failed to return, Mrs. Apperson thought perhaps he had gone into the field, so went for the cobs herself, finding her husband hanging from a rafter in the barn, it was said.

Mrs. Apperson is then said to have gone for aid after she had cut the rope holding her husband after much effort. Apperson was rushed to the hospital at Selma, Alabama where he died last Saturday.

No reason for the act was known by relatives nor close friends of Mr. Apperson, it was stated, as he was apparently in good health and had no reason for hanging himself.

Short talks in regard to the work and organization of an auxiliary of this kind were made before the gathering, after which all ladies present assembled in another room to discuss the organizing of the auxiliary.

Twenty-five members were placed in good standing and the local organization will be known as Chilton County Post No. 6 American Legion Auxilliary. The State President stated that this was the largest single enrollment of any place she had ever visited during her two years of office, and paid this county a very high compliment.

Officers elected Monday night for this new organization are: Mrs. Percy M. Pitts, president; Mrs. Grady Broadhead, 1st vice president; Mrs. W. G. Vinson, 2nd vice president; Mrs. R. D. Woodson of Lay Dam, secretary,treasurer; Mrs. G. T. Tippett, chaplain; Mrs. Loren Smith, Sgt.-at-Arms; and Mrs. J. G. Newton as Historian. The auxilliary will meet the first Monday night in each month. The various committees within the organization will be elected later.

F. A. Gulledge Recalls Letter by Pat O. Waites

To The Rockford Chronicle and Chilton County News:

The forty-year-old letter in The Chronicle of this week written by Pat O. Waites defending his Democracy and loyalty thereto in the campaign between Thos. G. Jones and Ruben F. Kolb of 1890 was to me especially interesting, the same being if I remember directed to the Coosa Advocate of Rockford and I distinctly remember reading same when published.

Another feature of his letter was expressed in a special petition in a wish to and for the farmers of Coosa County, is that "we have Tom Jones for Governor, that we raise corn with ears as big as wagon hubs, grains as large as iron wedges, and we raise hogs with middlings as big as barn doors and as thick as the soil of South Carolina, and that rain will raise Proctor, Swamp and Hatchett Creeks so that we may occasionally catch a blue cat," which was a very memorable campaign in Alabama. This fervent wish of Prof. Waites reminds me of an incident which occurred in the early 70's in which Wiley Wyatt, Dick Allison, Cull Riddle, Newt Davis and some of the Hulls all went to market together. In returning home they camped a short distance above Wetumpka, and at the camp in the late hours of the night, all feeling "how come you so" they turned the camping party into a mock prayer meeting in which Cull Riddle, who had leased the Varner old grist mill from Wiley Wyatt was called on to lead in prayer. This was during an extreme drouth in which everybody was wishing and some praying for rain. Cull Riddle, drunk as he was, called on Cap'n Dick Allison to lead, which he proceeded to send up a very strong appeal for rain in which he used the following language, to wit: "Oh, Lord, would thou be pleased to send down upon us copious showers to wet the ground eight feet deep that we may make ears of corn as big as wagon hubs grain as big as iron wedges and that Cull Riddle can't get nair one to grind." This was generally referred to throughout the country (neighborhood) whenever we were suffering from dry weather.

I especially regretted seeing a member of a certain family sentenced to the penitentiary from Coosa County this week. In fact all violators of the law, enjoy a sympathetic feeling from those outside of the pale of the law.

NEWS OFFICE GETS PRESENT OF SOME GOOD MOLASSES

The News office received a pleasant call Tuesday afternoon from W. C. Hubbard, who resides near Clanton. Mr. Hubbard was a most welcome visitor, due to the fact that he set a big bucket of some delicious syrup on the editor's desk, with his compliments. Mr. Hubbard is one of these fellows that you can't keep from liking.

AND WE ALL BIT

On Thursday of last week, a young lady leading a man, with one arm off, and supposedly blind, were making a mechanical round on the business houses of Clanton selling little cards on which were printed some poetry about a blind and One Arm Man. They would take any amount of cash one would give. The lady was very well dressed and so was the old man. They called at the News office and there also received a donation.

A representative of the News became curious about the couple, due to one or two slips they made, and started a little personal investigation. The result was that he found the lady and the man were traveling via a new model of a well known make of large automobile, sedan type, had a young man for a chauffeur, and another young lady in the party. Modern ladies hat boxes and over night cases were packed in an alley, out of the way so it would not be noticed too readily. Yes, no doubt we all bit at that one.

POLK BROS. MOTOR COMPANY IS CELEBRATING ANNIVERSARY

Local Chevrolet Dealers Put On Huge Spring Sale Of Used Cars

The Polk Brothers Motor Company, Inc., is this week, celebrating their seventh anniversary as Chevrolet dealers in Chilton County.

This automobile concern is one that a city like Clanton can be justly proud to have in its midst. Their repair department is in charge of an experienced Chevrolet schooled mechanic in the person of Arthur Watson. He has as his assistants, other experienced and well trained mechanics.

The owners of this concern, W. M. Polk, Sr., and George C. Polk, have won the confidence of countless customers in this section, which accounts for the splendid business now enjoyed by them. Barney Burnett also holds a responsible position with Polk Bros. Motor Co., in the capacity of bookkeeper and salesman. Mr. Burnett too has made for himself countless friends over the county since his affiliation with this firm sometime ago.

The Polk Brothers Motor Company has served this section faithfully for the past seven years. Each year saw some outstanding improvement in the plant, which is now among the most modern equipped. In this issue of the News will be found a large ad from this firm.

J. L. Eason, prominent merchant of White City, was in Clanton on business last Tuesday. Mr. Eason called at the News office, and while there, placed an order for job printing.

FIRST DEGREE MURDER PLACED ON GOODSON

Slayer of Ruby Davis Is Arraigned For Trial April 22; Plans Insanity Plea

The Grand Jury of Chilton County in session last Friday in Clanton, on investigating the case of J. Collier Goodson age 22, alleged to have shot and killed his sweetheart, Miss Ruby Davis, returned an indictment charging Goodson with first degree murder, information states.

Goodson shot Miss Davis, according to reports, in the back, Saturday night, April 4th, while she was in Clanton visiting her sister, Miss Pauline Davis, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Aldrich. Goodson is said [illegible] have been desperately in love with Miss Davis for sometime, and the latter's brothers sent her to Talladega to attend school not so long ago, in order that she would be away from Goodson, as they objected to his attentions toward her. Goodson has been employed on a farm in the Enterprise community in this county, although his

BIR-MONT CAFE OPENED IN THORSBY ON THE HIGHWAY

Thorsby has an addition to its business circles that it can rightfully be proud of at this time. This new addition is the Bir-Mont Cafe.

The Bir-Mont Cafe was recently opened by C. C. Horton, who has moved to Thorsby to make his home. It is located on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway, with a fine parking place in front. The Bir-Mont Cafe is operated by people who are desirous of giving service in the best way. It dispenses fountain drinks, ice cream, sandwiches, light lunches or regular dinners. Carries a full line of candies, cigars and cigarettes. Its interior is most attractive, being neat and spotless, and well arranged with tables for ladies. Mr. Horton is a very likable fellow, believing in Thorsby and Chilton County and has already started boosting that town. He invites the people of Clanton, and other places to stop by when passing through Thorsby.

Andrew Howard Of Verbena Is Dead

Andrew Howard, age 30, prominent garage man of Verbena died at his home suddenly last Thursday, April 9, about noon.

Howard is said to have gone home for lunch and had just been into the room where one of his children was seriously ill, when he was heard struggling by other members of the family. He died before aid could be given. He has been a resident of Verbena practically all his life, and was a member of Howard Bros. Garage, a concern widely known throughout this section. He was a member of the Baptist church.

He was reared in Verbena, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Howard, long-time residents of this section. He married Miss Vallie Norris, daughter of Rev. E. A. Norris of this county.

Funeral services were held last Friday afternoon, with the Rev. J.M. Metcalf officiating. Martin & Sons of Clanton were in charge.

Surviving is the widow, three children, Lawrence, Aubrey and Ruth; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Howard, of Verbena; four sisters, Mrs. J. M. Mims, Mrs. T. J. Sims, Miss Annie Bell Howard and Miss Edna Howard, all of Verbena; four brothers, O. L. Howard, John W. Howard and Adolphus Howard, all of Verbena, and T. L. Howard of Jordan Dam.

County P.-T. A. To Meet At Isabella

Miss Cora Belle Maddox, of Isabella, chairman of the County Council of the Parent-Teachers Association, stated this week that the County P.-T. A. will meet at the Isabella School, west of Clanton on April 25th, for an all-day meeting.

All local organizations are urged to send representatives to this meeting, which is scheduled to open at nine-thirty o'clock a.m. A report from the District P. T. A. will be made. Lunch will be served at the noon hour.

PARTY RETURNS FROM MOTOR TRIP INTO STATE OF TEXAS

The party composed of C. B. Cox, C. Fenn Jones, Frank Callen and Dr. T. H. Neighbors, returned the middle of this week from a motor trip into the State of Texas.

In relating events in the trip, it was very successful, according to each one in the party. Many points of interest were visited and the state given a thorough looking-over by Clanton's visiting party.

COUNTYBOARD NAMES HEADS FOR SCHOOLS

Three High School Principals Named; Verbena High Gets New Principal

At the recent meeting of the County Board of Education, the matter of electing principals for the various high schools over the county for next year was taken up. Only three of the high schools in the county received principals at this meeting. Verbena High School will have a new head in the person of W. C. DuBose, from Courtland, and former principal of the Marbury school in 1924-25.

Prof. L. C. Warr was re-elected as principal of the Chilton County High School.

Prof. J. A. Peterson was re-elected as principal of the Jemison High school.

J. P. Montgomery will serve again next term as vocational instructor at the Jemison High school.

Erle Thomas was re-elected to serve again as vocational instructor at the Isabella school.

Prof. W. E. G. Sutton, present principal of the Verbena High school, did not make application for the position for the next term of school, it was stated. Prof. Sutton has served as principal of the Verbena school for several years.

FINE SUNDAY SCHOOL IS ORGANIZED AT MT. PLEASANT

Approximately sixty people met at the Mt. Pleasant Junior High School last Sunday for the purpose of organizing a Sunday School. Assistance in the organization was given by Prof. H. A. Harris and W. J. Billingsley of Clanton, for which those interested have expressed their appreciation, as these two men rendered valuable assistance in getting the Sunday School off to a fine start.

At this first meeting, the following officers were elected: Superintendent, Johnnie Minor; Assistant Superintendent, Lee Popwell; Secretary, Miss Bess Marie Eiland.

Many new members are expected to be enrolled right away, and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend this Sunday School each Sunday morning at nine-thirty o'clock.

W. M. U. Quarterly Meeting Scheduled

The W. M. U Quarterly Meeting of the Chilton County Association will meet on April 23rd at the Sardis Baptist church.

A large crowd is expected to be in attendance, due to the fact that a most interesting program has been arranged, according to Mrs. W. H. Raybon, secretary and treasurer.

MITCHELL DAM GIRL SCOUTS MAKING MUCH PROGRESS NOW

The Girl Scouts held their regular meeting Monday evening at six o'clock. A number of the girls passed an interesting part of their Second Class test, which was fire making.

The Scouts are planning to organize a first aid team, with the help of the first aid team at Mitchell Dam. Because of this help we are sure they will make a great success.

The Scouts wish to extend an invitation to the Scouts of Clanton to meet with them any time they wish, they will be delighted to have them.

REPAIRING OF JAIL IS WELL STARTED HERE

Cost of Repairing Jail Is Said To Be About $30,000.00; In Two Contracts

Work of repairing and remodeling the inside and outside of the county jail here is well underway this week. The top has been torn away, and much done on the inside.

Moore & Wooley, contractors of Birmingham, have contracted to do the work on the jail, while the Southern Prison Company of San Antonio, Texas are to furnish the steel equipment for the inside of the structure.

Included in the work to be done to modernize the rather antique building, is the replacing of the small windows in the lower story with larger ones, new plumbing fixtures to be installed, new boiler room to be built on the outside of the jail, new lighting fixtures, a high wire fence to be built around the grounds.

It was stated that when this work is completed, that this county will have a jail that will be modern in practically every respect. It will be fire-proof throughout, as only steel and concrete will be used in this work now going on. The first story will be made into prison quarters, something that has needed to be done sometime. The jail will not be enlarged, only to the extent that the boiler room will be an addition, giving more room downstairs. It is expected that it will be completed within four months.

MT. PLEASANT 4-H CLUB MEETS THURSDAY NIGHT

Clanton Grammar School Planning For Real May Day Program: May Queen To Be Selected

Plans for a May Day Program are being made now for the Clanton Grammar School. Floats will be made up and possibly a large downtown parade staged by the girls and boys of the school.

One of the most interesting features of the program will be the crowning of a May Day Queen, which place some little girl attending the grammar school will take following a contest which is to open soon. This contest to determine the Queen for that day will open Friday, April 17th, which is tomorrow. Votes will be sold over Clanton by these charming little girls who have been selected from each class at the school. Each class has a candidate and a very closely contested race is expected to ensue during the course of the voting.

The contest will close Friday morning, May 1st, when the winner will be crowned May Queen, so everyone get busy and pick your choice from the following list of charming and attractive little ladies of the grammar school:

First Grade, Sarah Nell Sesisons; First Grade, Clara Marie Cooper; Second Grade, Frances Popwell and Lillian Smith; Third Grade, Kathleen Petty and Annie Cordelia Smith; Fourth Grade, Theda Wyatt and Nell Rockett; Fifth Grade, Thelma White; Sixth Grade, Jane Pitts.

CHILTON HIGH DEFEATED SELMA TEAM LAST FRIDAY

The boys from the Chilton County High School are now coming into that position that they should be in, in all athletics. They went over to Selma last Friday afternoon with their baseball paraphenalia and scored a victory with a score of 4 to 3, against Selma.

Paul Cox, in the pitchers hole, showed some good work, stretching some good throws to the Selma lads—good ones for the local boys. Nivens, our "short-stopper" got all wound up, and carried out his duties correctly, while Littlejohn swung a rather wicked bat right before the Selma lads eyes. The lineup for Chilton was F. Busby, Simms, Littlejohn, Nivens, Cox, Wagoner, Harris, Maddox as substitute, P Busby and Tiffin.

This out-tobe-banner team goes down to Marbury tomorrw afternoon for another game of toss and hit or miss, mostly the former for the Clanton lads, it is hoped, although Marbury does have a rather swift bunch of players Clanton needs the support of the presence of citizens at these games. See them.

"TWO DAYS TO MARRY" IS SENIOR PLAY, MAPLESVILLE

Members of the Senior Class of the Maplesville High School are staging a very amusing play at the Maplesville school on next Saturday night. The title of the play is "Two Days to Marry," and each person taking part has been well trained.

The curtain is scheduled to be raised at eight o'clock. An invitation is extended to everyone to see this play, put on by the Seniors of the Maplesville High School.

ILLITERACY IS BEING REMOVED IN CHILTON CO.

Federal Figures Show Huge Strides Being Made by This County In Fine Work

Chilton County is ranking high in its efforts to wipe out illiteracy, and its record during the past ten years has been most commendable, according to the Federal census.

According to the Federal census this county had a school population in 1920 of 7,600 white and negro children while in 1930 it was 8,078. In 1920 1,365 of these children between the ages of 7-20 inclusive were illiterate while 813 were shown to be illiterate in 1930 This gave a total illiteracy in 1920 of 17.96%

BURNING TRASH EXPLOSION INJURES REV. T. J. DEASON

The Rev. T. J. Deason was painfully, but not seriously injured last Monday morning when some matter in a pile of trash which he was burning, exploded. His legs and arms were burned from the explosion, which sent fiery particles of trash in ever direction.

He was rushed to a doctor who stated that he could find no shots in his body, it being at first believed that a gun shell was in the trash. Later opinions was that it was dynamite. Rev. Deason is at home recovering from the wounds. He resides in the Reynolds Addition, just east of town.

Maplesville Girl Is Killed In Accident

Miss Addie Christian, age 22, of Maplesville, Alabama, was thrown from a small roadster and instantly killed, while two companions escaped with minor injuries about nine o'clock last Thursday night, according to information to the News, when the car in which they were riding overturned while rounding a curve near Rider, on the Plantersville road.

Her two companions, Earl Shultz and young Jefferson of Lawley escaped with cuts and bruises. Shultz is said to have been driving the car, and both were also thrown out. Miss Christian's skull was fractured at the base of the brain, and her jaw and collarbone were also broken.

She is survived by her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Christian of Maplesville; three sisters, Mrs. C O. Culp and Mrs. R. B. Bates, both of Selma and Miss Tommie Christian of Maplesville; and four brothers, Sam Christian of Maplesville and Clyde, Jess and Virgil Christian of Mobile.

KIWANIS CLUB TO STAGE NEGRO MINSTREL SOON

Local Club Is Rehearsing Amusing Program For April 24th

Following in the successful footsteps of the showing of the all-talking picture, "Just Imagine" comes a blackfaced minstrel to be presented by members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club The entire town is talking of the uniqueness of the picture sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and shown at the Wadesonian Theatre last Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and it is believed that record crowds saw the picture each night

Now comes another treat for the amusement seeking people of this section, when the Kiwanis Club will stage its blackfaced minstrel at the high school auditorium on Friday night, April 24th.

All members of the club, numbering twenty-two will take part in this laugh-bringing show. Quite a bit of time has been spent in arranging for its pre-

Chief White Elk Is Heartily Received Here

Through the efforts of S. R. Powers, a member of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, Clanton was given the opportunity of being host to Chief White Elk last Monday, and the town heartily responded to this rare opportunity Chief White Elk, of the famous Catawba Tribe of Indians, appeared in Clanton in full regalia Monday afternoon, and spoke to the local Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts and others at the Methodist church, where he also rendered several selections on the pipe organ. He also appeared on the stage at the Wadesonian Theatre, as a courtesy to the Kiwanis Club. Chief White Elk is a most remarkable person, being a graduate of two colleges, speaks seven different languages, and has traveled around the world many times, being personally acquainted with such personages as the Kaiser, Mussolini and others.

He is also bearing a reputation few have. He has appeared in many recent motion pictures, such as "The Big Trail," "Cimarron" and sang in "The Show Boat." His appearance in Clanton and his talks to the boys and girls at the high school and church, will no doubt go far in helping build the standards of future citizens. Chief White Elk will always find a welcome in Clanton.

TOP-DRESS YOUR COTTON WITH POTASH

Set More Fruit
Reduce Shedding
Produce Larger Bolls Increase Turn-Out
Improve the Lint Control Rust
Reduce Wilt
Increase Yields

Thousands of farmers, from Arkansas to Virginia on both clay and sandy lands, are giving their cotton extra potash—in addition to their regular fertilizer.

They are top dressing their cotton with 50 pounds of muriate per acre on clay lands and 100 pounds on sandy lands. Some use high-grade kainit. Muriate is concentrated kainit and potash in muriate is cheaper.

They are also using extra potash with profit on tobacco, corn, small grains, peanuts, fruit, sweet potatoes, potatoes, and general truck.

V. J. Elmore Store Is Bringing A Large Number Chicks Here

Local Concern Aiding In Increasing Interest In Poultry Raising In Chilton County

Doing what is believed a great good to Chilton County, the local store of the V. J. Elmore 5s, 10c & $1.00 Stores, has arranged to supply the people of this section with baby chicks in large numbers.

The manager of the local store stated that they are finding that by placing on sale these chicks, they are aiding the small poultry raiser a great deal to increase the size of his hatches at no great cost. For instance, a person has a hen who has just hatched only a few eggs, and should have a larger number of chicks to care for. Then the extra chicks can be purchased and placed with the hen and her original brood, thereby increasing the number of chickens raised to something like double.

This store now is receiving large numbers of these small chiqkens weekly, and they hope to place several thousand in this immediate territory within the next several weeks.

SAFETY IN FREIGHT HANDLING

Since the railroads were released from Federal control in 1920, one of their outstanding achievements has been the remarkable reduction in loss and damage to freight shipments.

From 1921, the first full year of operation after Federal control, to 1929, the number of revenue tons carried increased about 45 per cent; during the same periods, loss and damage to freight were reduced 61 per cent!

The record of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad for this period compares favorably with the national average. With an increase of 59 per cent in tonnage hauled, loss and damage were cut 64 per cent.

This improvement has been made possible both through the wholehearted cooperation of freight shippers and receivers, and through the intensive campaign conducted by the railroads among their employees. These influences have been further aided by the better handling methods and improved equipment developed in recent years.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad maintains for the benefit of shippers a staff of specialists on shipping and packing problems. These men are qualified to offer valuable suggestions concerning ways of reducing shipping losses. In order that a still greater improvement may be made in this problem of mutual interest, patrons are urged to take advantage of their services.

What Doctors Say About FERRAC

With a thorough knowledge of the value of the constituents of Ferrac, so perfectly combined by nature—constituents that the brightest minds in chemistry cannot combine—doctors in foreign countries, the Dominion of Canada and the United States, acclaim the health and strength-building powers of this remarkable natural prescription.

"The Most Wonderful Natural Remedy In The World"

Read what Dr. J. T. Broughton, who during the War Between the States was the surgeon in charge of the Confederate Hospital in Greenville, Ala., and who was at the time of his death one of the most highly esteemed physicians in Alabama, said about Ferrac.

"I have been regularly engaged in the practice of medicine since 1853, eminating from the University Medical College of Pennsylvania. During that time I have come in contact with almost every disease that flesh is heir to, and I can say in all candor that I have never yet found anything that will equal Ferrac in the relief of all those diseases where an alterative and tonic medicine is required.

"Having made female diseases a specialty for many years, and having put Ferrac to severe tests, it is my firm opinion that it is the most wonderful natural remedy in the world."

Ferrac is on sale at all drug stores, or if your druggist cannot supply you send $1.00 to Greenville Products Company, Greenville Ala.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

When I was a boy I had a yard pig. He was a great pet and was always on hand. He stood around the kitchen door and cracked bones. It mattered not how much we gave him to eat, the little rascal would squeal for more. My father grew tired of my pet, and one day he caught his majesty and threw his hogship into a wagon. He was carried to the pasture and was turned aloose with the other hogs. When my father threw him from the wagon he said, "Now, root hog or die." His days of eating from hands that fed were over, and he had to root for his own living. The next time I saw my pet he did not carry so much fat, but he was a real hog. It helped him to be dependent upon his own effort. Without comment you know what I am saying. Many a child has been made a failure because the parents would not push him out, and let him know that it is "Root hog or die."

The other day I was sitting on the creek bank, pretending that I was fishing. (I was only holding a pole for sport) and along came the wrapper from a loaf of bread. Someone had appropriated the bread and had thrown the wrapper on the water. The wind was blowing that floating piece of paper in all directions, and when the wind was not blowing, the paper would drift with the currents. For three hours I watched it as it was a moving thing, subject to the winds that blew and the currents that drifted. In that length of time it had traveled in all directions, but it had gone nowhere. I see people every day who drift with every current that touches them. They run with the gang. They lock arms and keep step with every influence that grips them. They never go anywhere and they never amount to anything, because they are subject to every wind that blows.

Last Sunday afternoon I was driving over the paved highway between Thorsby and Clanton and I met 94 cars in that short distance. It took me just fifteen minutes to make the seven miles, and yet there were 94 automobiles went whizzing by. They were all in a great hurry to keep out of the way of the car that was just behind. If you should stand on the corner at the Upchurch Drug Store in Clanton on the Sabbath day and count all the cars that passed by in twenty-four hours, you would not see less than four thousand. Talk about hard times, talk about the financial depression, talk about poverty, if you will open your eyes, you can see why things are as we have them. Cars are not given away and they do not run without gas and oil. When will we ever come to ourselves and learn not to spin our money away on wheels?

On Tuesday night it was announced in the service at Lay Dam that a lady visiting in that community that afternoon had lost a purse and some valuables, and that she had offered a ten dollar reward to anyone who would find her lost treasure. No sooner had the announcement been made than a company of boys rushed from the building, and made a bee line for the place where the purse was lost. Even the preacher wanted to be in the race, hoping that he might find the purse and receive the reward. How different we find it when we announce that a man, a woman, has lost a soul. We look on that loss with indifference. We do not rush out to seek and save the lost, and yet the most valuable treasure in every human life is the soul. There is a great reward for anyone who turns a soul to God.

I heard a lady say last week in a Missionary meeting at Speigener that she was "Too busy raising vegetables, chickens and children to know any too much about peace pacts and war policies." That is the kind of a mother who is going to save the world. The reason why we have so many unruly children and so many awful tragedies along the way of life is because we have too many mothers who are too busy powdering and painting, too busy going to parties, too busy at everything else, rather than at the task of making homes that are worth while. A lady told me not long since that she had no time for anything, after she had done her duty by her church and her children. May the good Lord give us more mothers who have no time for anything much but her children and her church

I was in the home where an aged lady resided. She had gone above the four score and ten, and her eyes were very dim. This mother in Israel had a passion to be of service to someone, and having a son whose wife was totally blind, she spent her time making quilts for that family in need. A granddaughter would take twenty needles in the morning and run the thread from a spool through the eyes of those needles, and the grandmother would sit all day in her chair and work away with her scraps. She was happy in the fact that she had completed a quilt for the blind daughter and would soon have another ready. That is what I call being willing to help your fellowman. Even the aged can help somebody every day.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which quickly neutralizes acids. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali neutralizes instantly many times as much harmful acid, and then the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians have prescribed for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

Faith, Hope and Charity

"Faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity," wrote Saint Paul in his First Epistle to the Corinthians, that great book which has been described as the Magna Charta of the Christian.

There never has been a time in the history of America when these three essential qualities of the good life were so manifest as they are today in our everyday affairs. We as a people are just beginning to emerge from the most serious and long-drawn-out period of calamity and depression which we have ever experieneed. Millions of men and women have been for months literally unable to earn their daily bread. Millions more have been deprived by the force of Nature of all that they had in the world, leaving them without the bare means of subsistence.

A less sturdy people than ours would have yielded ere this to despair. A less law-abiding people would have relapsed into banditry, as so many of China's millions have done. But there have been no popular uprisings, no bread riots, no desperate mobs pillaging the stores of supplies. In the face of all that we have been going through there has been no note of despondency.

We have kept the faith; we have not lost our belief in the ultimate return of the old prosperity; we still look upon this country of ours as the greatest and most favored of nations and we have clung to the hope that, sooner or later, somehow, in ways which we cannot quite clearly forsee but which our faith tells us will surely operate for good, all will be well again. We have not lost hope.

And while we have held to the faith and clung to hope, we have been giving, and still are giving, the finest example of charity in all history. Without excitement, without pressure beyond the mere spreading of the word that help was needed, we have given not merely the ten million dollars that the Red Cross asked for but millions beyond that, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked and succor the homeless; and we are still giving. All of the machinery of our governments, state and national, has been geared to relieve the distress of the less fortunate among us.

The picture of the people of the United States which this situation reveals is one of which we may well be proud. We have proved again, to ourselves, what some had begun to doubt, that we have not cut loose from the ancient, imperishable virtues; that they still rule our hearts and guide our conduct.

April --- The Flower Month

April brings the primrose sweet,
Scattering daisies at our feet.
Showers, too, o'er hill and dale,
Echo back on Summer's trail.

arm surrendered April 26, 1865; George Washington was 19, 1775; war with Spain April 22, 1898; the first American newspaper was issued April 24, 1704; last Confederate

April, the month chosen to represent the daisy, is also a good month in which to plant flower seeds, the first few days and the last two days are favorites. The birthstone for the month is the diamond.

Past events of interest to happen in the months of April include the following: Battle of Five Forks, April 1, 1865; United tSates mint established April 2, 1792; Chili and Peru were at war April 4, 1870; United States declared war on Germany, April 6, 1917; there were 2,009,031 slaves in the United States April 7, 1859; on April 9, 1865 Gen. Lee surrendered; President Abraham Lincoln assassinated April 14, 1865; the steamer Titanic was wrecked on April 15, 1912; the Battle of Lexington April inaugurated president of the U. S. April 30, 1789.

Prominent persons to have birthdays in April, living and deceased, include: Mary Miles Minter, Harry Houdini, Mary Pickford, Judge Charles E. Hughes, Henry Clay, Thomas Jefferson, Rear Admiral Irwin, Chas. Chaplin, J. P. Morgan, Sr., Constance Talmadge, Harold Lloyd, James Buchanan, Rear Admiral Selfridge, General U. S. Grant, James C. Monroe, F. H. Yost.

A full moon will shine during April on the 4th, last quarter falls on the 11th, new moon on the 19th, and first quarter on the 27th.

Our Rich Country

The United States, they say, possesses national wealth valued at $360,000,000,000. Germany's national wealth is estimated at $80,000,000,000. So with half our population, they have less than one-fourth of our wealth. All other nations also are poorer than we.

How did we get this great wealth? Can we keep it? In part it is due to our rich natural resources. But our people have wasted these resources. Now they depend on their own energy and brains.

The people who went before us worked hard over long hours. They were ingenious, and gave their whole thought to their work. Our modern folks are bright and ambitious, but they do not work as they did formerly. They give far more time to play.

Can the pleasure loving Americans compete with Europe's workers, who are spurred on by poverty to toil so laboriously?

It does not follow that the people of Alabama and elsewhere need to work longer hours. Protracted labor dulls the mind and weakens the body. But unless we keep awake, the plodding toilers of Europe may distance us, as the slow old tortoise outran the speedy hare, when the latter lay down and fell asleep.

Yet with concentration, and full use of brains and of science, America's workers will beat the world.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Easter passed with no great number of casualties—few straws seen, and fewer caught in the breezes, to be whisked away, to the chagrin of the wearer. Stuck around to see what the Easter parade would be composed of, but saw very few new outfits. That is due, possibly to the coolness of the weather and the members of the fair sex were forced to wear wraps, hiding from view those dresses they bought or made just for Easter wear. That was tough on them. It was to be cold and show the new dress, or remain comfortable and not show it.

Have noticed several straws being worn by the more daring men about town, but seems as if the felts are still in the lead, and possibly will be for sometime, although I imagine the dry goods stores here will soon display the latest in straws for the well-dressed man. But I don't believe the straws will take hold for sometime yet in Clanton.

The new style in ladies hats are very appealing to the masculine eye. They have that feminine appearance about them that the majority of men desire in a companion. S'funny that when something new comes out, there are so many persons who go just a little bit too far in trying to keep in style, wearing the wrong thing at the right time, trying to impress on others that they know what is stylish, and at the same time, making a mess of it all. Be a little more conservative.

* * * *

Thanks, "Sweeper," for your kind and sympathetic words. Yes, I read you almost every week. I'm glad that you have felt for me in my plight during recent attacks from the wimmin, and otherwise. I might tip you off to something worthwhile when it comes to having a way with the critters. It has something to do with the famous Pucker, originated by Dooker Pooker, the International Authority. It will take a lot of practice, but there's something to it, and the members of the fairer sex who have not yet been fortunate enough to experience that Pucker, really do not know what they are missing. Of course, it has to be administered by one well versed in its use. You can ask any that have tried it, and they'll let out a heart-breaking sigh, and say, "It's Wonderful,"—with emphasis on both words.

Seems as tho some folks have me down wrong about things my more or less critical pen deals with. For again and all—I like dances, and furthermore I like the folks who attend dances in the majority of cases. In my heretofore expressed opinion about that, I was speaking ONLY about the public dances, and at the same time, endorsing private dances. So, that's that. I said that before.

But there is one consolation, I've found that if I should prepare an attack from long-range, I'd have some reinforcements, judging from a letter I received the other day from one who has come to the rescue, provided I need it. I'm printing parts of that letter this week. Would like to hear from B. Fair and A. Resenter or the Perfessor, again, and too, A. Loather is invited to write, but don't get to delving too much into what you did in your first letter.

This question that has caused something of a ripple or maybe a wave, is one that has to be handled carefully, tenderly, as if one was handling a new born babe. Yes, I am blossoming forth, due to the warm weather I suppose, with a new slant on dances, public dances. Altho the subject dates back when Adam danced with joy over having a mate presented to him in his lonely state. But what did that presentation result in? Ah, there is another item under consideration, and possibly will bring on more talk. That mate of Adam's was a Woman, one of those necessary evils who dominate us men so much. Yet Adam must have danced with joy when he found Eve beside him. We all might have done that, under the circumstances.

* * * *

Thanks, dear little blond teacher, for the invitation, in response to my expressed desire last week. Don't be offended. Unfortunately for you, you are not the one I had in mind at the time, however, I'm glad that you brought yourself to my attention. I'll give you some consideration in the future, and can possibly find room for you in the demonstration of the famous D. P. P.

* * * *

Here's A. Loather's letter which I received Saturday. Thanks, ole fellow, I appreciate your assistance, and sorry I can't use all of your letter this week:

Editor "Round Town" Column,

"Dear Sir:

"May I come to your rescue? Not that I think you need a rescuer, because it seems that you were getting along fine when you told about Clanton's dances attended by the so called high class and most respected people of Clanton.

"Now listen, B. Fair and Resenter, I'm quite sure "Doug" did not have any particular person or persons in mind when he spoke at first about the dances, but it seems that some one got sure enough sit on. Maybe he was only imagining that such and such could happen in such places as these dances are being held, and if he was I don't see anything wrong about that; as he never mentioned any particular incident that occurred, nor did he mention any particular person, and I couldn't see why any Lady or Gentleman should be insulted by what he said. And again if he was only imagining or guessing he surely must have guessed right and hit someone, or at least they sure did holler.

"Resenter" speaks as if he (or she) wants this dancing question closed up.* Well if he does I am sure if he would read his Bible some it would help him to clear it up.

"I suppose dancing is all right in its place, but I've never yet found its place. Some will say, "It is good exercise." Well it must be because I've noticed some of the dancers perspiring very freely after a few minutes of dancing, and if you ask me; that looks like work. And don't any level-headed person know that none of the people who attend these dances are interested enough about exercise to pay two or three dollars to get it. With that point in mind I wonder why they go to the dances. Who'll answer that for me?

It can't be that attending these dances will build your reputation or make you any more respected because "B. Fair" said those who attend are the most respected people of Clanton. And as I said before I don't doubt but what they are. . . . . .

"Well, Doug, I hope I haven't taken up too much of your space, and I hope you'll pardon me for interefering with your affairs at all, but I just had to tell someone how I felt about these high class dances."

A Loather.

Letters To The Editor

A SPLENDID LETTER IN BEHALF OF OUR PREACHERS

Editor Chilton County News:

As a lay member of an organized church I desire to express my appreciation for the church and its ordained ministers; for the entire Bible and the comfort that it gives to those who believe and strive to practice its teachings, and for the privilege of living in a country which recognizes the church as a force for good. I'm sorry that I have been slow in expressing my gratitude for these blessings. I am sorry that there are those who do not stop to think how much they owe to these blessings. I am sorry that there are some who are so thoughtless as to ignore them, and that there are some who scoff at and scorn them, but claim the safety and privilege which are found only in Christendom.

It is time for everyone to show his gratitude for the Christian preachers by supporting, helping and defending them in their Christian work. We do not hesitate to call upon them for various needs at a moments notice, are we going to allow them to be falsely accused by a boasted unorganized religion, which is loading them with the blame for the conditions of the country? Will we allow them to be called a selfish, hypocritical group of people preaching for money? How many preachers do we know who receive a living equal to the living of the people they preach to? In Luke 10:3, 4, Christ when sending out the seventy disciples said, "Behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse nor script," and continuing his instruction to them, 7th verse, he said, "The laborer is worthy of his hire." In Romans 10:13-15 we find why people are called to preach and the 15th verse ends with these words: "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings og good things!" We do allow the preachers to be attacked if we buy, read, believe and keep in the way of children the highly colored, boldly embossed books which a band of colporteurs have lately forced upon the people in the surrounding country, or if we calmly listen in to the program put on by the writer of these books—a lawyer who fits in very nicely with the company of lawyers that tried to tangle or confuse Jesus when He was on earth among men as a man.

A small advertising copy of the class of books written by Judge Rutherford came into my possession uninvited some time ago. I thought I burned it, but I came across it the day the colporteurs wasted a lot of my time and patience. This book a a very unreasonable book, in which a supposed conversation between a lawyer and preacher takes place. The preacher is represented as a narrow-minded, selfish man while the lawyer is liberal. The argument results in the preacher having to give up, and leave. In addition it advertises the larger books. Two pages in the center of the book advertise the entire set. From these two pages the following paragraph is taken which is the key to the entire set:

"Blind Guides, Serpents, Fools, Vipers, Hypocrites, Whited Sepulchers, full of dead mens bones. That's what Jesus called the preachers and priests of his day. A sanctimonious class they were, who made long prayers in public, but who allied themselves with the politicians and rulers of the nation to rob the poor, oppress the people and enrich themselves. Jesus said their father was the Devil. And so it is today! The clergy who pose as representatives of God, are themselves responsible for the terrible condition of so-called Christian Civilization."

The above paragraph from Judge Rutherford's book is enough to cause every sincere Christian to rebel against such false impressions as the books are expected to cause. Can we really think of one preacher that has enriched himself in a financial way by preaching? Instead, think of preachers who have to teach school or farm or do some other work to live!

It would be a great deal more to Christ's Glory to pay—notice I say pay, not give—to the preacher the price of one, three or seven books than to buy one book or more to either offend or poison the minds of all that read them. If you who have bought books of this sort read the books and only the scripture referred to by them you will fail to read important portions of the scripture. If you are deluded into thinking that the writer of these books has knowledge of the Bible which no other person has, you are setting him up far above any human possibility. We can understand enough of the Bible to have a happy Christian life here and prepare our souls for a better home in Heaven. We need not try to see into the future for the angels in Heaven do not know God's plans.

The one fact that these colporteurs and the books they sell aim their attacks on organized Christianity and Christian clergymen, should make every Christian rise in their defense, for organized Christianity is the only hope for any nation.

You who have bought these books would do well to burn them. If there is a community where they have not yet been, may you refuse as a community to buy one book. Think too much of your chickens to "swap" one for a book of this sort.

A READER.

New Building for C. C. H. S.

We are glad to state that our new combination bus-barn and gymnasium building has been completed. It is eighty by sixty, and will amply accommodate forty or fifty bus bodies which will be stored in it during the summer months. These bus bodies are the property of the county—and quite a bit of expense has been made in order that they may be protected during the time they are not in use. During school, this building may be used for any purpose the school sees fit. In the first place, it will make an ideal basketball court which no doubt will be ready by next playing season. We are proud of our building, and it will mean a great deal for the school.

A similar building has been constructed at Jemison for the same purpose

Originality Week (By Ruth Maddox)

The week of March 30-April 3, was set aside in our school for self expression of the students in good English essays, plays, posters, and poems.

Honorable mention for excellent good English posters goes to Joe Hall Johnson, Junior One, and Nell Neighbors, Junior III. These posters were selected with three points in view: Originality, neatness, and instruction. The best play was that of Jane Roberts, Senior II. Honorable mention went to Sallie Mahan and Willie Maude Kelley, Senior II's. The best essays went to Homer Carroll, Mary C. Jones, and Helen Roberts.

Good English (By Dorothy Sessions)

Do not abuse your English tools
While you are on your way thru school.
For when you go to get a job
Your speech they'll notice first of all!
And if your English is not correct,
It will likely bring you deep regret'
For you will never be judged well in life
If you say "I ain't" and think it's right.

Fairview 4-H Club News

The Fairview 4-H Club met April 2. The following officers were elected: Reporter, Woodrow Durbin; cheer leaders, Morris Keen and J. P. Poole; club leader, John Calfee. The following plans were adopted for the year:

1. Strive to win the silver cup.
2. Have 100 per cent attendance at meetings.
3. Have 100 per cent project reports.
4. Have regular programs.
5. Sponsor social activities.
6. Have regular monthly meetings.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned, and the club was entertained by the band until a late hour.

MR. AND MRS. G.E. SANSOM AND FAMILY IN CLANTON TUESDAY

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Sansom and family of the Sardis Community were among the shopping visitors to Clanton last Tuesday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Sansom are of the type of persons one likes to know, due to their friendliness, and their efforts to help boost their community in a most constructive manner, at the same time having a keen sense of straightforwardness.

While in Clanton Mr. Sansom brought his family to call on the News, where they were shown the various machines and one of the employees explained the use and workings of each machine, while some were in motion, printing the daily run of job printing, etc. The News deems it a pleasure to have this group visit them. Those being shown through at that time were Misses May, Meldie, Lucinda, Gladys Louise, and Frances Sansom; Charlie, Harvey and Vernon Sansom. Little Louise has a remarkable school record, although she has just been promoted to the second grade. She has never missed a day at school. She attends the Vermont school. Gladys also has a splendid record.

Mr. and Mrs. Sansom are regular readers of the News, and their children were anxious to see how the paper was printed, and the various means used in gathering news from over the county.

Illiteracy Is Being Removed From Chilton County

while in 1930 it was 10.06% or a total reduction in percentage of illiteracy of 40.44%.

In 1920 there were 918 white illiterate children within the years of 17-20 inclusive. In 1930 it had been reduced to 592. In 1920 14.78% of these children were illiterate but in 1930 it had been reduced to 8.65%, or a net percentage of reduction of 35.51%.

There were 447 negro illiterate children within the years mentioned in the paragraph above and in 1930 this number had been reduced to 221. This gave 32.14% illiteracy in 1920 and by 1930 it had fallen to 17.85%. There was a net reduction in negro illiteracy of 50.56%.

In a statement from B. Lawrence, superintendent of education of this county, he had the following to say in regard to this matter which should be of extreme interest to the people of this county:

"If the ages 10-20 are taken instead of the years 7-20 as given above we have 136 illiterate white children in the county and 78 negro children, or a total of 214. It is clear then that most of our illiterate children are with the ages of 7-9 inclusive.

"We have had a slight gain in school population in the county among white children. This gain is 10.16% while we have 1% decrease in the negro school population.

"These figures are encouraging, but at the same time they should stimulate us to greater effort toward completely wiping out illiteracy in the county. Through the Opportunity schools a great number of our adults have been able to learn to read and to write. We do not know whether or not we are going to be able to operate the Opportunity schools this year. The County Board has no money with which to do this work, but all of us realize that it is a very important work and we certainly hope that some way can be worked out by which we can operate the Opportunity schools as heretofore. If anyone has any suggestions as to how we might work out a plan to have these adult schools we would certainly appreciate it if you would write us or see us. The entire Board is highly in favor of operating the schools but certainly by this time every citizen in the county knows that a large portion of our state funds are not available and will not be until after the summer is gone."

Yours for the schools of Chilton County,

B. LAWRENCE,
County Supt. Education.

JOHN THOMAS DUTTON

John Thomas Dutton, age 77, died Friday, April 10th, at his home near Clanton. Funeral services were held on the following Saturday at Mountain Springs in this county.

Sardis News

Saturday and Sunday were our regular preaching days and a large crowd attended both days and Rev. G. H. Carrell delivered to us a splendid message both Saturday and Sunday.

Our W. M. U. met Saturday afternoon and we were glad to have with us at our meeting Rev. G. H. Carroll and wife.

The W. M. U. ladies gave to our pastors Rev. G. G. Williams and Rev. G. H. Carroll, a quilt. Our circles have pieced and quilted five quilts which were valued at five dollars each, and we are proud of our circles. There is some good work being done in each one.

Next Sunday afternoon is our regular singing evening. We invite everybody to come and be with us.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent Minor spent last week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Ratliff.

Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Deason spent the day Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Lula Ratliff.

Misses Ola and Annie Ratliff and Gather Millard Ratliff were dinner guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Ratliff.

There was a large crowd attended the singing Sunday afternoon, which was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sansom.

Mr. and Mrs. Till Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Smith spent last week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sansom.

Our W. M. U. Quarterly meeting will be held at Sardis Baptist church on April 23, and we cordially invite everybody to come and be with us.

Mrs. Mary Grooms spent last week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Deason.

Eastview News

The health in our burg is not very good this week.

Rev. George Watson preached at Eastview Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Strength were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Coggins Sunday.

Miss Jessie Bell Speer was the Sunday dinner guest of Miss Lois Nelson.

Miss Catherine Strength was the dinner guest of Misses Gulma and Maudie Ree Traywick Sunday.

On next Thursday evening the Ladies Aid will meet at Mrs. Vida Glenn's for the purpose of making flowers for the church. We want all members present if possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Nelson spent the week end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lett of Verbena and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gray visited Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Nelson Sunday.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abna Cox Sunday morning and took away their son, Lewis. He was a good worker in the C. E. Society and Sunday School. He will be missed by everyone that knew him. We wish to express our heart felt sympathy for the bereaved family. He was only twenty-two years of age. He was laid to rest in the Chestnut Cemetery Monday morning.

Mrs. John Ingram is reported to be some better this week.

Don't forget Sunday School Sunday morning and C. E. Sunday night at 7 o'clock.

Concord-Billingsley

We were very glad to have the Pleasant Grove Christian Endeavor Society with us last Sunday night. The program which they brought to us was very interesting. The service was well attended and I'm sure everyone present enjoyed the program.

The second quarterly conference will meet with this church next Saturday. We hope that every church on this charge will be represented here, and also we invite visitors from others places to come and be with us.

Next Sunday is our regular preaching day. We are always glad to have visitors with us and would be glad for everyone who can to come and help us in our Sunday school.

Misses Sarah Misseltine and Doris Waites, Messrs. Charlie Williams and Charles Foshee of this place visited Montgomery last Saturday.

Miss Allie Williams spent the past week end with her brother, Mr. A. P. Williams and family of Shiloh community.

We are glad to know that Mrs. W. W. Williams who has been very ill for the past few days is now improving. We hope that she will soon be well again.

Mr. and Mrs. Fonza Williams and children spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams and family.

Mrs. J. F. Sheppard of Clanton is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. W. W. Williams.

There will be a singing here next Sunday evening. All singers and lovers of music are invited to come. We are going to use the Stamps Baxter books.

We will also set a time to have our regular Sunday afternoon singing.

Isabella School News

On last Thursday, Miss Maddox, Home Economics teacher at Isabella, carried six of her students to Montevallo to the Inter-High School Home Economics meet. The girls have worked hard all the year in order to make a good showing at this contest between the high schools of the state. As a result they brought back second school prize, which was a lovely pewter fruit bowl. Five of the girls won certificates on their entries. Dorothy Manning won first place on her afternoon dress. Lucile Edwards won second place on her cooking uniform. Lena Mae Jones won third place on her school dress. No first prize was given on this entry.

Ruth Oden and Lorene Lecroy won second place on cooking. No first prize was given on this entry. Elizabeth Mims won recognition on her street costume in the fashion show which was given on Saturday morning.

The girls and their chaperones, Miss Maddox and Miss Mize, were guests of the college during the contests.

Miss Maddox carried two girls to Montevallo last year who won certificates, but no school prize. This year they worked for more points in order to win a school prize. The bowl will have the names of the girls who won it engraved on it and will be the property of the Home Economics Department.

There are many advantages from meets of this kind, but most of all it gives the girls a greater desire to enter college on finishing high school.

These girls, together with the other members of their classes, and Miss Maddox, are to be congratulated on the splendid work they have done, not only in foods and clothing, but in Home Improvement and health work as well.

Marine Recruiters Active Locally

An announcement just received from their southeastern headquarters, states that a recruiting party from the United States Marine Corps will visit Montgomery, Ala., on April 16th, 17th, 18th for the purpose of accepting applicants for enlistment in that famous military organization.

Sergeant N. S. Page U. S. M. C., will be in charge of the party and will make his headquarters at the local Post Office. He expects to arive at about 9 A. M. on April 16th and will interview any local men interested at that time.

The Marines have a very high standard of physical requirements, and at the present time are only accepting men 19 and over, who are at least 66 inches tall, and in excellent physical condition.

Men joining the Marine Crops are given many educational and travel opportunities and Sergeant Page states that any young man who is contemplating an enlistment in any branch of the Service will find it worth his while to talk to the Marine recruiters before making a final decision.

Applicants who are accepted will be given transportation to the receiving barracks at Atlanta, Ga., and will be later transferred to the large Marine training camp at Parris Island, S. C.

IN MEMORY OF RUBY DAVIS

Dearest Ruby, you have left us
For that heavenly world so fair,
Safely in the arms of Jesus,
You are free from toil and care.

We saw not the white-robed angel
As it entered with folded wings,
To summon home our loved one
To the arms of our heavenly King.

Heaven now retaineth our treasure,
Earth the lovely casket keeps,
And the Sunbeams love to linger
Where our loved one sleeps.

When I leave this world of changes,
When I leave this world of care,
I will find my missing loved one
In my Father's mansion fair.

She is gone, but not forgotten;
Never will her memory fade;
Loving thoughts forever linger
'Round the grave where she now is laid.

Safe in the arms of Jesus;
Safe on his gentle breast
There by his love o'ershadowed,
Sweetly her soul shall rest.

A precious one from us is gon,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in the home
Which never can be filled.

Dearest Ruby, how we miss you;
How we miss your smiling face;
But we hope we will soon meet you
In that land of love and peace.

Asleep in Jesus, far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be,
But thine is still a blessed sleep
From which none ever wake to weep.

A FRIEND,
Ressie Devaughn.

PLANT LICE

By C. E. Stapp

Many are making inquiry about what to do for plant lice attacking cabbage and other leafy plants.

All plant lice can be controlled by spraying with nicotine spray, made according to directions in container of nicotine, or by spraying with kerosene oil emulsion. The kerosene oil emulsion is the cheapest and can be made at home as follows:

Dssolve one-fourth pound of soap in one quart of warm water. Add one-half gallon of kerosene oil and stir well. When ready to spray use one part of this mixture in twenty parts of water. This mixture will keep all summer.

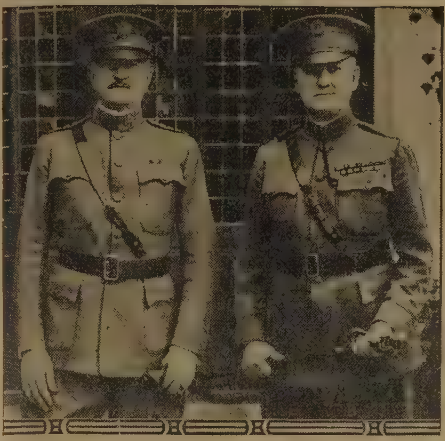
My Experiences in the World War

By General John J. Pershing

Copyright, 1931, in all countries by the North American Newspaper Alliance. World rights reserved, including the Scandinavian. Reproduction in whole or part prohibited.

W. N. U. Service



General Pershing With Gen. James G. Harbord, His Chief of Staff.

After consultation with the permanent heads of staff and supply departments, and with no little insistence on my part in more than one instance, the corresponding representatives to accompany me were designated, and they in turn chose their assistants. Although the list did not include all I would have selected, as some were not available, yet all rose to important places in the final organization, except one or two who failed in health.

The total number in my party that sailed on the Baltic was as follows:

Regular army officers	40
Marine corps officers	2
ORC officers in active service	17
Enlisted men	67
Field clerks	36
Civilian clerks	20
Civilian interpreters	5
Civilians (correspondents)	3
Total on Baltic	190

Draft Act Passed May 18.

The method of raising our armies by conscription was based on studies made by the war college under instructions from General Scott. President Wilson recommended the plan to congress April 7, 1917, but the draft act was not passed until May 18, forty-two days after the declaration of war.

Roosevelt Offer Rejected.

The appeal of Col. Theodore Roosevelt at this time for permission to raise a volunteer division aroused popular sentiment throughout the country in his favor, but approval would have opened the door for many other applications and the policy would have interfered materially with the orderly and businesslike application of the draft law.

Moreover, the regular establishment would have suffered from the loss of an undue proportion of the best officers, who inevitably would have been selected for important positions in these special units at a time when their services were urgently needed in building more largely.

Another important reason for disapproving Colonel Roosevelt's application was that in such a war it was necessary that officers, especially those in high command, should be thoroughly trained and disciplined. Furthermore, Colonel Roosevelt was not in the best of health and could not have withstood the hard work and exposure of training camps and trenches.

The secretary of war, much to the disappointment of Colonel Roosevelt, wisely made an adverse decision in his case, which was confirmed by the President. It was evident that both Mr. Wilson and Secretary Baker were looking for trained leaders and were determined to avoid the embarrassment President Lincoln experienced in the Civil war, when he was more or less driven to fill many high positions with political appointees who, in the end, had to be replaced by men trained in the military profession.

Roosevelt's Plea for Sons.

The following letter from Colonel Roosevelt, dated May 17, 1917, will show his own fine attitude:

"My Dear General Pershing:

"I very heartily congratulate you, and especially the people of the United States, upon your selection to lead the expeditionary force to the front. When I was endeavoring to persuade the secretary of war to permit me to raise a division or two of volunteers, I stated that if you, or some men like you, were to command the expeditionary force I could raise the divisions without trouble.

"I write you now to request that my two sons, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., aged twenty-seven, and Archibald B. Roosevelt, aged twenty-three, both of Harvard, be allowed to enlist as privates with you, to go over with the first troops. The former is a major and the latter a captain in the officers' reserve corps. They are at Plattsburg for their third summer.

"My own belief is that competent men of their standing and rank can gain very little from a third summer at Plattsburg and that they should be utilized as officers, even if only as second lieuten[illegible] [illegible]t they are keenly desirous to [illegible] service; and if they serve under you at the front, and are not killed, they will be far better able to instruct the draft army next fall or next winter, or whenever they are sent home, than they will be after spending the summer at Plattsburg.

"The President has announced that only regular officers are to go with you, and if this is to be the invariable rule then I apply on behalf of my two sons that they may serve under you as enlisted men, to go to the front with the first troops sent over.

"Trusting to hear that this request has been granted, I am, with great respect,

"Very sincerely yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

"P. S.—If I were physically fit, instead of old and heavy and stiff, I should myself ask to go under you in any capacity down to and including a sergeant; but at my age, and condition, I suppose that I could not do work you would consider worth while in the fighting line (my only line) in a lower grade than brigade commander."

CHAPTER III

Our deplorable situation as to munitions was fully discussed at a conference called by Secretary of War Baker May 10. It was brought out that we had for issue, not in the hands of troops, fewer than 285,000 Springfield rifles, caliber .30; only a few more than 400 light field guns, three-inch, and 150 heavy field guns.

As it was impossible because of manufacturing difficulties for our factories to turn out enough Springfield rifles within a reasonable time, the secretary decided to adopt the Enfield rifle for our infantry. It was then being manufactured for the British in large quantities at private factories in our country, and a slight modification of the chamber only was necessary to make it fit our ammunition. The total production of this rifle exceeded 2,000,000 during the war.

As to machine guns, it was reported to the conference that we had a few less than 1,500, and these were of four types. Congress in 1916 had appropriated $12,000,000 for machine guns, but the War department had not decided definitely to adopt any particular one for our army, although an order had been placed late in 1916 for a quantity of the heavy Vickers-Maxims.

Short on Ammunition.

Of artillery ammunition, except for the three-inch, we did not have enough to provide more than nine hours' supply, even for the limited number of guns on hand, firing at the rate ordinarily used in laying down barrage for an infantry attack.

The situation at that time as to aviation was such that every American ought to feel deeply chagrined to hear it mentioned. Of 65 officers and about 1,000 men in the air service section of the signal corps there were 35 officers who could fly.

With the exception of five or six officers, none of them could have met the requirements of modern battle conditions and none had any technical experience with aircraft guns, bombs, or bombing devices.

We had some fifty-five training planes in various conditions of usefulness, all entirely without war equipment. Of these planes it is amusing now to recall that the national advisory committee for aeronautics, which had been conducting an alleged scientific study of the problem of flight, advised that fifty-one were obsolete and four others obsolescent.

We could not have put a single squadron in the field, although it was estimated that we should eventually need at least 300 squadrons, each to be composed on the average of some 24 officers, 180 men and 18 planes, besides a large reserve of planes for replacements.

Among other subjects considered with the secretary was the assembly for training of the National Guard and the men to [illegible] under the draft.

In lieu of any previous plans, the secretary contemplated the construction of cantonments in different parts of the country, and May 7 the commanding generals of the several departments were directed to select sites.

The actual construction of cantonments was not begun until nearly three months after we were in the war, and so great was the task of erecting buildings and putting in water works [illegible] that some ninety days mo[illegible] by the time these centers of instruction were ready to receive troops. Thus it was, with some exceptions, practically six months before the training of our army was under way. Even then several of these camps were not favorably located, and training was seriously handicapped during the fall and winter months.

Rivalry for Our Troops.

About this time the allies brought up the question of utilizing our men to build up their armies. As we shall see, the subject arose from time to time in [illegible] or another, and we had to fight against it until the end of the war.

Both the French and British missions, under M. Rene Viviani and Arthur G. Balfour, respectively, then in our country, were very keen to have us consent to fill up the ranks of their armies with Americans.

I was decidedly against our becoming a recruiting agency for either the French or British, and at that time this was the attitude of the War department also. While fully realizing the difficulties, it was definitely understood between the secretary of war and me that we should proceed to organize our own units from top to bottom and build a distinctive army of our own as rapidly as possible.

The evident rivalry between the British and French for control and use of our forces, even before we had an army in the field, confirmed my impression that those two governments were not working entirely in harmony. As to their armies, it had been apparent for some time that there was a lack of co-operation between them. Their efforts were often separate and distinct—that is, first one and then the other would attack.

Friends Sought to Go Along.

Although it was not generally known that I was to go abroad, there was a flood of applications to accompany me. One of them was a personal appeal for service in any capacity by my old friend, Robert Bacon, who had been ambassador to France. He had already given valuable aid to the allied cause, and because of his intimate knowledge of the French people and his tact and discretion I was glad to have him.

A few days before my departure, while at lunch at the Metropolitan club with Charles E. Magoon, ex-governor of Cuba, Charles G. Dawes joined us. The three of us had been friends in the days when we were together at Lincoln, Neb. Magoon and Dawes as young lawyers, the latter with a decided talent for business, and I as military instructor at the state university.

Dawes was an applicant for a commission in one of the engineer regiments then being organized under the direction of Samuel Felton, from volunteers with experience in railroading, and wanted me to help him get the appointment. I asked him whether he knew anything about engineering, and he said that when a youth he had carried a chain a month or so for a surveyor in Ohio.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

In was not much impressed with his pretentions as an engineer or as a prospective military possibility, but I did have knowledge of his business ability and experience, and knew that he would be valuable in some position requiring his qualifications, so I spoke to the secretary of war in his behalf.

Requests from National Guard officers and from governors for the early acceptance of their state units literally poured into the War department. The clamor became so general and so insistent that the secretary of war happily conceived the idea of forming a composite division to include troops from every state in the Union. I thought the suggestion a good one and gave it my hearty indorsement. This was the origin of the Forty-second (Rainbow) division, which was later to distinguish itself in several engagements.

CHAPTER IV.

My first and my only meeting with President Wilson until after the armistice occurred May 24, 1917, when I called on him with Secretary of War Baker. After some conversation with Mr. Ba[illegible] shipping, Mr. Wilson turned to me.

"General, we are giving you some difficult tasks these days," said the President.

"Perhaps so," I replied, "but that is what we are trained to expect, Mr. President."

The President then mentioned my experience in Mexico and inquired about my acquaintance with France. I had expected him to say something about the part our army should play in the war, but he said nothing.

P[illegible] Full Supp[illegible]

Upon leaving, I said: "[illegible] President, I appreciate the honor you have conferred upon me by the assignment you have given me, and I realize the responsibilities it entails, but you can count upon the best that is in me."

To this the President replied:

"General, you were chosen entirely upon your record, and I have every confidence that you will succeed; you shall have my full support."

The President then asked me to convey to the king of Great Britain and to the President of France his greetings and best wishes. His manner was cordial with his poise and his air of determination.

His assurance of confidence in me was gratifying, but in the difficult situations that arose later regarding the manner of aiding the allies, he was inclined to yield to the persistent importunities of the allied representatives in Washington.

In the actual conduct of operations I was given entire freedom, and in this respect was to enjoy an experience unique in the history of American wars.

Letter Making Him Chief.

May 27, 1917, the day before I was to sail from New York, Secretary Baker sent me a letter of instructions concerning my command, authorities and duties in Europe, which is quoted in full:

"The President directs me to communicate to you the following:

"1. The President designates you to command all the land forces of the United States operating in continental Europe and in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, including any part of the marine corps which may be detached for service there with the army. From your command are excepted the military attaches and others of the army who may be on duty directly with our several embassies.

Head and Back Quit Hurting

"A few years ago, I found that I was very weak and nothing I ate seemed to give me any strength," writes Mrs. R. B. Douglas, 704 South Congress St., Jackson, Miss.

"I suffered intense pain in my head and back. At times I would have to hold to something to steady myself, so as to do my little work. I was worried about my condition.

"My mother told me that I should take Cardui. After taking two bottles, I felt stronger, but I kept on taking it until my head and back quit hurting. I took about six bottles in all, and have never quit praising Cardui."

● "Just think how little I need worry about markets and prices. My chief job is to produce the best butterfat, eggs and poultry that I can—take them to the nearest Swift & Company produce plant and get the going market price in cash for all I can deliver.

"Swift & Company gives me, and 200,000 others like me, an ever ready, ever unlimited market. We're not concerned with local gluts and shortages.

"It takes organization to keep this vast system in smooth running order. But that system has half a century of experience back of it. It could not be brought into life in a year.

"Think of it—this family consists of 200,000 producers; 55,000 employes, 48,000 shareholders, with 114 produce plants, over 400 branch houses and 600 car routes. And the whole organization operates, progresses and expands on an average profit from all sources of less than 2 cents on every dollar of sales. That's what I call a wonderful system."

First Degree Murder Placed Against Goodson

home is in Autaugaville, Alabama.

He surrendered to the sheriff here immediately after the shooting, and was later transferred to the Montgomery County jail. Attempts by officials and newspaper reporters to get him to talk of the tragedy, met with no success, only a slight shaking of the head and a fresh flow of tears. Goodson is a young man, of ordinary size, neat appearance. He has talked very little since the shooting, even to his closest friends. For several days while confined in jail, he was unable to eat food that was brought to him, keeping his face buried in his pillow on the jail cot. He would give no reason as to why he shot his former sweetheart, whose age is given at 17. Miss Davis was a most attractive girl, being considered one of the most attractive and popular young ladies of the Enterprise Community where she lived with her mother, Mrs. W. C. Davis, before going to Talladega.

Goodson, being arraigned by the Grand Jury, has his trial set for Wednesday, April 22. It was stated that he will enter a plea of not guilty on the grounds of insanity. At present he is being held in the county jail in Montgomery.

sentation, and those witnessing it will see for themselves that even the Kiwanis Club is composed of business and professional men of Clanton, it can still bring a huge amount of fun into the life of its organization.

Some of the features of the show will be a negro sermon delivered by one who is capable of taking that part in a most perfect manner, W. H. Sartor. The four end-men will bring laugh after laugh to the audience, while various combinations have been arranged for different characters. The music that has been arranged will, in itself, be most entertaining, as those furnishing it are popular musicians of the county, although they are not members of the club, as it was necessary to secure talented young ladies for that part of the program, in order that the music should be of the best.

Those wishing to see this performance, which is now being steadily rehearsed, should make their plans now to hold Friday night, April 24th, open for that purpose.

THOMAS JUNIOR 4-H CLUB MET LAST SATURDAY, 11TH

The monthly meeting of 4-H boys was held at Thomas Junior Saturday, April 11. A very good attendance was present.

A reporter, Argus Pressley; yell leader, Hollis Thornton; song leader, Floyd Devaughn, were elected.

Newborn Jones, President; Lee Allen Miner, vice president; Osmond Glenn, Secy-Treas.; were elected at a previous meeting. We have thirty-three members enrolled. The sentiments of all are to win the loving cup.

Our community leader, Mr. J. L. Smith, gave us a very good talk on club work.

At our next meeting we are going to discuss plans for a picnic. We urge a 100 per cent attendance at this meeting on Saturday afternoon at one o'clock, May 9th.

Mt. Pleasant Junior High School News

The faculty of Mt. Pleasant Junior High School entertains the Junior High department in honor of the Junior III Class at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Chambers on next Friday night.

School work is progressing nicely, even though many have withdrawn to assist in the spring farm work.

Everyone is busily reviewing the work of the past six months in final preparation for examinations next week.

The Junior III Class organized several weeks ago, electing: Renfro Price, as President; Eunice Holley, Salutatorian; Luettie Cooper, Historian; Julia Edwards, Prophet; Lawson Bell, Statistician; Vera Jones, Poet; Woodrow Price, Grumbler; and Grady Miner, Class Will.

Class colors are green and white. The class motto is "We're on our way." Class flower, Dogwood.

o

We are proud to announce that the Mt. Pleasant boys have organized a 4-H Club. The prospects for a strong club in this community seem very bright. Over 30 members enrolled at their first meeting.

o

Another great move has been effected in the Mt. Pleasant community,—that of organizing a Sunday school. The people of Mt. Pleasant have a splendid literary school and building, but have been without a church and Sunday school, which is very essential to the better welfare of any community. The people are to be heartily commended for this great step. Last Sunday morning was the first meeting in which over fifty-two members joined.

o

Mr. B. H. Duke, Chairman of the Trustees, made a trip to Montgomery last Tuesday to have an eye examination made of his youngest son, Melvin.

o

We all regret the loss sustained by Mrs. Oly (Bean) Smith, our beloved Intermediate teacher, over her mother's death recently. The school and faculty extend to her, their deepest sympathy.

o

Miss Ethel Mize was in charge of the Intermediate work during Mrs. Smith's absence.

The Annual Picnic for the Mt. Pleasant school will be given on Saturday, April 25th. The picnic will be given this year at Log Cabin Beach. All the student body is looking forward to a gay and happy time.

The principal of the Mt. Pleasant school, Mr. R. B. Johnson, is planning to leave June 1st for Florence, Ala., to resume his school work at the State Normal.

Maplesville News

Our town has been shocked and saddened over the death of Mrs. J. B. Hicks. She was sick only a few days with flu and developed pneumonia. She died on Tuesday morning, April 7. She was a devoted wife, and mother. A beautiful Christian character loyal to her church, W. M. S., was Sunday school teacher and secretary of O. E. S. She numbered her friends by the score. She leaves a husband, Mr. J. B. Hicks, and son, Willard, one brother, Mr. Sam Branch, of Troy to mourn her death. The beautiful floral offerings attested to her popularity. Rev. Paul Oden officiated, members of W. M. S., church and O. E. S. presided. Masons were pallbearers. Martin of Clanton had charge. Interment was at Rehoboth, at Lawley.

"Two Days To Get Married" will be staged Saturday night, April 18, 1931 at the school auditorium by the Senior High School boys and girls. Don't fail to see it. Benefit of school.

Miss Imogene Dawson is visiting relatives in Bessemer and Birmingham.

Mrs. Alvis Aldridge of Birmingham is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Nix.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan and interesting daughters of South Carolina were the guests of her parents, Mr. and M[illegible] J. W. Foshee, last week end.

The many friends of Mrs. Hill Foshee are delighted that she returned Saturday from the hospital in S[illegible], where she underwent a serious operation.

"I want my Telephone Put Back in please"

Almost daily people who discontinued their telephones during the stress of the past twelve months are ordering their service restored. They found that the small cost of the service had been repaid many times each month in convenience, in time and actually in money saved.

Others found that the loss of their telephones would soon mean the loss of friends, because of the lack of close and personal contact made possible only by telephone service. Still others mention that the sacrifice of their telephone meant the loss of many pleasant, impromptu social gatherings when their friends were unable to reach them by telephone.

It is all true, what these subscriber friends of ours say. Telephone service costs so little and the advantages of the service are so many that it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.

GOODSON GUILTY - LIFE TERM IMPOSED

COURTROOM OVERFLOWING AT EARLY HOUR

JURY DELIBERATES ABOUT TWO HOURS

Mother Of Goodson Near Collapse Under Questioning As Witness

J. Collier Goodson, age 22, went on trial here yesterday morning charged with first degree murder for the shooting of Miss Ruby Davis, age 17, his former sweetheart and daughter of Mrs. W. C. Davis of the Enterprise community, on the night of Saturday, April 4.

After deliberating for something like two hours the jury returned their verdict at about 8:55 o'clock last night as the defendant being guilty as charged and recommended a sentence of life imprisonment, which was imposed. H. Brewer Glenn was selected as foreman of the jury.

There was a very small crowd in the courtroom at the time of the sentence, and no emotions of any kind were seen from any present. Goodson rose silently and with bowed head received the sentence.

Goodson waived a preliminary hearing and the Grand Jury of this county in session on April 10th returned an indictment of murder in the first degree, and the trial set for yesterday. The Hon. Judge George F. Smoot presided with Hon. Winston Huddleston prosecuting for the State.

Quite a bit of time was taken up in the morning for the selection of a jury, and the following were selected: R. E. L. Ward, James E. Rasberry, Wilburn Ward, E. D. White, J. Shirley Davis, Curtis Lecroy, Stanley M. Jones, H. Brewer Glenn, W. W. Hand, L. Dewey Hughes, Green W. Melton and George W. Robinson.

The courtroom was filled to overflowing before the trial opened, and the downstairs of the courthouse and on the outside, several hundred persons were milling about. The sheriff and deputies were kept on the alert at all times during the day to keep order in the courtroom and keep the crowd under control, although there was no hint of violence as everyone appeared to be among that class called spectators, through curiosity, and hundreds were turned from the doors.

Spectators Of All Classes

The huge crowd congregated in and around the courthouse was made up of all classes and walks of life, many who came into town in the early hours of the morning by truckloads, many from the social class of Clanton who came to witness what is perhaps the really first sensational murder trial held in Chilton County in many years.

Sister Of Slain Girl Calm

The first witness to take the stand was Mrs. W. C. Davis, mother of the slain girl. Mrs. Davis was questioned for a very short time by the State and the defense, the latter being represented by Hon. Cecil Alexander, attorney of Prattville, Ala. Miss Pauline Davis, sister of the dead girl, was the second to take the witness stand in the morning session. Miss Davis told in an unusually calm manner how Goodson had come to the cafe in Clanton where she was employed and asked if Ruby was there, and where he could find her, and how later on Goodson accosted them while she and her two sisters, Ruby and Berniece, in company with a young man, Hub Griffin, were

21 Schools Are To Finish Work Friday

This week will bring about the closing of 21 more schools in this county, they having completed this term of school. This leaves only six schools in session in the county. All are high schools with one exception, the Clanton Grammar School.

Thos schools closing at the end of the week are New Cedron, Shiloh, Fairview, Cane Creek, Oak Grove, Mars Hill, Providence A., Union Point, Pates Chapel, Free Springs, Providence B., Concord A., Concord B., Chestnut Grove, Minooka, Thomas Jr., Enterprise, Cooper, Collins Chapel, Union Grove and Mt. Pleasant.

STRAWBERRIES SHOWING FINE PROSPECTS HERE

Local Shipments Being Made This Week; Plans Are To Ship Car On Monday

Unless some unforseen misfortune comes forth on the strawberry crops of this county, the prospects point to a splendid supply of fine berries according to reliable information.

There were five crates brought to Clanton last Monday and shipped to Birmingham. A car of crates were on the tracks here and the crates were being sent out over the county rapidly. It is believed that local small shipments will be made throughout the week, and a car will be loaded here next Monday for shipment, according to L. E. Diefenderfer.

Reports from various sections of the county state that berry growers have been and are having some trouble with an insect cutting the stems where there is a bloom. The insect new to this county, resembles the pea weevil with a long bill. It is said not to be bothering the berries nor the stems after the berries are on them, but cuts the tender stem holding the blooms. This is the first appearance of this insect in this section, and it is said that it has infested parts of the State of Tennessee some time ago. No way of ridding the crop of this insect has been introduced here, as it would not be advisable to spray the berries in an attempt to kill the weevil.

Another New Cafe Opened In Thorsby

Thorsby is still showing some extraordinary signs of progressiveness. Another new cafe and lunch room has opened there. This new place is known as Smitty's Cafe. It is located next door to the Thorsby Drug Store, on the Birmingham highway. J. E. Smith who has been a resident of Thorsby for a number of years, is the proprietor of this new place of business.

Mr. Smith was at one time in the grocery business in Thorsby and knows what people like to eat and how to serve it in a fine way, well cooked, at a reasonable charge. Mr. Smith stated that each Sunday they will serve regular chicken dinners, and that a cordial welcome awaits everyone at his new cafe.

MRS. GROVER HARRIS DIED SAT. APRIL 18

Beloved Woman Passes After Being Ill For Short Time After Operation

Chilton County was shocked last Saturday when the news was out that Mrs Grover C. Harris, wife of one of Clanton's oldest rural mail carriers, was dead. Mrs. Harris was carried to the Memorial Hospital in Montgomery week before last for an operation, which was believed to have been necessary to save her life. She died Saturday morning, April 18th, after putting up a brave fight for her life.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Harris was Bessie Belle Durbin, an attractive daughter of one of the pioneer families of the county and resided in the Fairview Community, west of Clanton, where she was born on August 25, 1891.

Mrs. Harris was married to Grover C. Harris, who is known throughout this section, having been a rural mail carrier here for a large number of years. She was a most devoted member of the Clanton Baptist church, having joined something like 28 years ago. For a number of years she served faithfully in the Junior Departments of the Sunday Schools, and was at one

Pheasants Being Turned Loose By Dr. Gragg

A few years ago Dr. V. J. Gragg of Clanton, defying every prediction by authorities on the subject that it couldn't be done in Alabama, set out upon the experiment of growing pheasants. At very great expense to himself he secured a trio each of Mongolian and Chinese Ring Necks from a grower in California, and rigged up a place to keep them and their offspring. Such discouraging predictions were made about the offspring that he was not sure there would be any, but he made preparation for them just them same.

It was not very long until the birds began to lay. He set the eggs under Bantam hens, and before the first season was over he had a group of nearly a hundred young pheasants. They grew so well that it was soon necessary to provide larger quarters. Nearly a whole block of space near the hospital was enclosed around and overhead with wire to keep them confined. Still they grew.

Then a very great calamity befell the venture. A dog got into the pen and destroyed the whole colony of birds at one lick. The doctor was not to be outdone. More adult pheasant stock was secured from the far west, and the process begun all over again. It was as successful as the first; and even more so.

By this time the plans of Dr. Gragg have progressed so far that he is able to begin to turn the birds loose to grow wild in parts of Chilton County. He has already released a group out on

Locally Written Play At Marbury April 24

Marbury talent will prevail in a most outstanding manner on Friday, tomorrow night, when there will be presented at the Marbury auditorium a play entitled, "Jamie's Dream Fairies." Not only will Marbury talent take parts in the play, but the play itself was written by Everett Ellis of Marbury and the songs to be used were set to music by Miss Bess Rogers of Marbury.

This play will cause one to live again the scenes of one's childhood. Features will be Mother Goose, Little Bo-Peep, Little Boy Blue, Fairies and others. No doubt everyone is familiar with thees characters, but this play presents them in a most original form. The hero of the play, his mother, Pepper and Salt, the fairy of a rather mischievous turn of mind, are some of the many characters represented.

The curtain is scheduled to go up at seven-thirty p.m., and admission will be 15 and 25 cents.

NEHI PLANT IS MOVING INTO NEW QUARTERS

New Home of Bottling Plant Will Give More Space and More Convenience

When a concern continues to grow and business is on the increase, it usually becomes necessary for that concern to seek larger and more convenient quarters or increase those occupied by it. The Nehi Bottling Company of Clanton seems to be in the line with such types of business as it is this week being moved into new quarters, giving it more room and more convenience.

The Nehi Bottling Company of Clanton will now be located in the building formerly occupied by the Bates Motor Company, near the old post office building. It will occupy two of the buildings there. The building has been undergoing repairs and proper fittings put in for the bottling plant.

Horsley White, proprietor of the bottling company stated that he found it necessary to increase the floor space, and expected to be in operating condition by the latter part of the week. Mr. White stated that he extends a cordial invitation to the public to visit his new plant where the Nehi beverages are bottled in this county.

Kiwanis Club Sponsors A Clean-Up Campaign

The members of the Kiwanis Club, realizing that nothing detracts as much as unsightly dumping grounds on vacant lots and in back alleys, are asking the cooperation of every good citizen of Clanton in a general clean-up campaign next week, beginning April 27th.

Mayor Smith is chairman of the public affairs committee of Clanton Kiwanis Club and is in charge of the clean-up campaign. Associated with Mr Smith on the campaign are Mr. Stapp and Mr. Powers.

This special committee in charge of the clean-up campaign will appreciate very much if everybody will enthusiastically enter this campaign to make our town more attractive during the next ten days. If you have suggestions to offer or need a truck to move trash from your vacant lot or alley, please call Mr. Lee Smith or Mr. Stapp and they will make note of same and try to give every possible assistance.

This is a splendid move on the part of the Kiwanis Club and a general clean-up campaign will not only mean a more attractive town, but the move will mean better health and this paper hopes that every man, woman, boy and girl will take part.

The Scouts, both boys and girls, will have a part.

Mr. and Mrs. Horsley White and Thelma and Essie spent Thursday and Friday of last week in Chipley and Lagrange, Georgia.

Earl Vinson Burned To Death Wednesday, 22

Shortly after noon, Wednesday, April 22nd, word was received in Clanton that Earl Vinson, son of Newt A. Vinson, had been burned to death in the home of B. Dukes of Poplar Springs community, about five miles south of here. Vinson was said to have been in the home, where he had sleeping quarters, when the house caught on fire, and he failed to make his escape from the burning building.

Another young man, Bud Dukes, was said to have also been in the room with him at the time, but was rescued as the flames were almost to him.

A Martin ambulance was called which went to the scene of the burning and brought the charred remains to Martin's funeral parlors in Clanton. According to reports Vinson was wearing a wrist watch which had stopped at 12:15 o'clock. Origin of the fire had not been determined at this writing.

Home And Barn Were Destroyed By Fire

The home and barn of G. J. (Jonathan) Headley were completely destroyed by fire last Friday about noon Mr. Headley resided just north of Clanton on the old Birmingham highway, near the mill village

The volunteer fire department answered the call, but very little use could be made with the hose, due to there being no fire plugs in that section, but the firemen put forth some unusual effort in protecting other homes nearby. The home of Porter Payton was damaged by the heat. Almost all the furnishings of the Headley house were saved, however, the kitchen furnishings were destroyed and also quite a bit of wood, corn, etc.

WOODMEN ARE TO HAVE BIG DAY HERE SOON

Central Ala. Field Day of The W. O. W. To Be Held In Clanton May 28th

Clanton is again to have the opportunity to play host to a large gathering of men from various sections of the state in a day of events outstanding, when the first Field Day of the year for the Central Alabama Woodmen of the World will be held here on May 28th.

The program of activities is scheduled to begin at nine-thirty o'clock in the morning. There will be 10 degree teams here, semi-military, for drill purposes. Some of the outstanding speakers of the day will be Congressman Lister Hill and Dr. Crawford of Omaha, Neb.

A large band will be on hand for the day and night to furnish music for parades, etc. In the afternoon the unveiling of a monument to the late Dudley Thompson will take place at the Clanton cemetery by the Woodmen. At seven o'clock that night there will be a huge street parade with torches, and at a later hour the Woodmen will assemble and a class of approximately one hundred men will be initiated into the lodge, according to E. C. Evans, District manager, who makes his home in Clanton.

Clanton should feel proud that it has been selected as the place for this Field Day to be held. There is expected over two thousand Woodmen, local and visiting, will be here for these exercises. Other details will be given out later, Mr. Evans stated.

County P.-T. A. To Meet At Isabella

Miss Cora Belle Maddox, of Isabella, chairman of the County Council of the Parent-Teachers Association, stated this week that the County P.-T. A. will meet at the Isabella School, west of Clanton on April 25th, for an all-day meeting.

All local organizations are urged to send representatives to this meeting which is scheduled to open at nine-thirty o'clock a.m. A report from the District P. T. A. will be made. Lunch will be served at the noon hour.

Kiwanis Club To Present Blackface Minstrel Tonight

For an evening of entertainment—entertainment that is built upon the principle to bring laugh after laugh, one should not fail to see the minstrel to be staged by the Clanton Kiwanis Club at the high school auditorium tonight.

In last week's News it was stated that the minstrel would be presented Friday night, April 24th. But developments in the progress being made necessitated the moving up of the date one night so the Clanton Kiwanis Negro Minstrel will be shown tonight

Did you ever hear of a fog farm? No, well then you should hear Cohen Stapp as a member of the "lodge" tell about that huge fog farm he owned. And too, you'll get a big kick out of his prevaricating. Did you ever see a human automobile? Then don't fail to see the one made up of Kiwanians at the minstrel. Mack Wyatt as "Vesuvius" takes a most terrible stand on the way people are married in the East and in tht West. Hear him tell the difference

"Giggling Lizzie" comes forth in a most extraordinary manner and relates some of her experiences after becoming rather lost in directions in a large city. Earl Thomas has charge of that idea. And by all means if you want to hear an old time negro sermon, hear W. H. Sartor as "Brother Brown" deliver that masterpiece of a sermon he has, and try to follow him in it. E. E. Upchurch will burst forth without the least warning with conundrums on local situations.

Those are just a few of the many things that will keep one laughing throughout the performance. There will be an eight-piece orchestra taking part also as well as songs by those in the minstrel. Dr. S. J. Ezell fills the part of interlocutor and comes very near getting into trouble due to his questioning of the characters

The minstrel has been under the direction of Mrs. L. C. Warr, assisted by Porf. Warr. The curtain is scheduled to go up at 7:45 o'clock, and a large crowd is expected to witness the staging of this most unique performance by members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club

SENIOR CLASS PLAY OF LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL HERE MAY 1ST

The graduating class of the Chilton County High School is preparing now for the presentation of its Senior Class Annual play which is to be staged Friday night, May 1st. The play is titled "Crooks for a Month," and is a comedy in three acts

The play is woven around a story of a real estate man who is facing bankruptcy, and is very hard pressed for money. He has a son and a daughter, the former together with some college friends take it upon themselves to give the old man some money right away, and get busy hatching up a scheme by which they can secure five hundred dollars in two weeks. They do it—and how. They originate some kind of occult temple and sell horoscopes. The daughter gets the idea that she can dance, and secures a place dancing under an assumed name in order to help raise the money for her father, who objects strongly to it

Miss Mary Heard plays the part of the daring daughter, with Homer Carroll as the real estate man. John Ponder Lawrence takes the part as the energetic and daring young son, assisted in his schemes by Frank McMurray, who plays the part of 'The Great Kamjain." This play is a scream, and don't miss it

Miss-A-Putt Miniature Golf Links Are Now Open; Ladies Given Complimentary Rounds

The Miss-A-Putt Miniature Golf Course of Clanton is open this week to the public, having been closed all winter. Much work has been done to put the course in playing condition and to improve it to a great extent. The Miss-A-Putt Course is located on the northern edge of town, near Ellis' Filling Station.

In speaking of the re-opening of the course, L. D. Easterling, operator, stated that for the remainder of this week, ladies will be given a complimentary ticket to play two rounds each day and night. This, however, is thru Saturday night only, Mr. Easterling stated.

The Miss-A-Putt Course is the only miniature golf course in Clanton and proved very popular last summer, its first opening season here. Mr. Easterling also stated that the prices have been reduced to fifteen cents per round, day and night.

William Arthur Willis of the University was at home for the week end.

Mrs. Grady Heflin and James Duke are spending a few days in Randolph.

May Queen Contest In Clanton Grammar School Is Increasing In Interest As Days Are Passing

The contest now in progress to determine which little girl will be crowned May Queen of the Clanton Grammar School is increasing in interest as members of the various classes are putting forth every effort to have their candidate elected.

Votes are being sold over town and there is a candidate from each class room. The contest opened April 17th, and will close April 30th, the winner to be crowned Queen during the May Day program of the school.

The money being secured from this contest is going to a most worthy cause, being placed to the credit of the school to assist in making it possible for the school to operate a full nine months. Following is a list of the little May Queen candidates and the grades they represent:

First Grade: Sarah Nell Sessions, and Clara Marie Cooper. Second Grade: Frances Popwell and Lillian Smith. Third Grade: Kathleen Petty and Annie Cordelia Smith. Fourth Grade: Theda Wyatt and Nell Rockett. Fifth Grade: Thelma White. Sixth Grade: Jane Pitts.

The Russian operetta, "Sonia" will be presented by the Choruses of Thorsby Institute under the direction of Miss Thoroman on Saturday night, April 25, at 7:30. Admission is 15 cents for students and children and 25 cents for adults.

A group of college students, led by Sonia Markova, plan a surprise party for Professor Smythe, "the absent-minded professor." Sonia's Aunt Martha Mayflower, a prim lady of much lineage makes her appearance and is much disturbed by the frivolity of modern college life, and threatens to take her niece out of school. Sonia has never seen her father, a Russian nobleman who was imprisoned by the Bolsheviki during the revolution. She receives a letter that he is in a Siberian prison and will be able to escape if money is sent. Pat Dunn, the popular hero at college, is in love with Sonia. He mistrusts the source of the letter. The conspirators appear in Russian disguise and Sonia prepares to pay over the money, but decides to go to Rusisa herself and find her father. She arrives at the castle in Siberia, the ancient home of the Markovas. She and her American college chums decide to stage a rehearsal of a musical comedy in which there is a Bolshevik mob scene. During the rehearsal a real Bolsheviki revolt breaks out. Pat overhears a plot to have Count Ginwhiski impersonate the lost father. He waylays him and affects the disguise himself. Pat unreveals the mystery and wins his reward.

The "absent-minded professor," Maurice, Peggy and Aunt Martha furnish a lot of wholesome fun. Don't miss it!

This operetta is given by permisison of The Willis Music Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mitchell Dam Girl Scout News

The Girl Scouts at Mitchell Dam are still progressing in their work. Their meeting was held in the forest Monday evening, at which time the test on fire making was finished, and I must say they are swell little firemen.

The Scouts are planning to have a grand time this summer in their little log cabin, just out of camp. They are also planning to help protect the wild flowers, so please cooperate with them by not destroying the flowers along the roadside.

Another interesting item of work underway at Mitchell Dam is the work of the Brownies, that is, the girls at the age of seven to ten. They are doing splendid work under the leadership of Sarah Hollis, one of our Scouts.

Reduce the Acid

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are overstimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips Milk of Magnesia; one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians have prescribed for 50 years.

Reduce Wilt
Increase Yields

Thousands of farmers, from Arkansas to Virginia on both clay and sandy lands, are giving their cotton extra potash—in addition to their regular fertilizer.

They are top dressing their cotton with 50 pounds of muriate per acre on clay lands and 100 pounds on sandy lands. Some use high-grade kainit. Muriate is concentrated kainit and potash in muriate is cheaper

They are also using extra potash with profit on tobacco, corn, small grains, peanuts, fruit, sweet potatoes, potatoes, and general truck.

RUN-DOWN and WEAK

"I began taking Cardui when in a weakened, run-down condition," writes Mrs. F. S. Perrit, of Wesson, Miss. "I took one bottle, and I seemed to improve so much that I sent for six bottles. After I had taken the six bottles, I seemed entirely well.

"Before I took Cardui, I was nervous, restless, blue and out of heart. I felt depressed all the time. After I took Cardui, all this disappeared.

"I gave my daughter Cardui and it helped to relieve irregular . . ."

YOUR Newspaper

It is more than true that business men and citizens generally should not fail to realize that newspapers are in the public service—they are not parasites living for their own profits, and that the community needs for a newspapers are such that, should there be no newspapers as a private enterprise, then the public, for its own benefit, must tax itself to provide themselves with newspapers. It is too often that we find business men who regard newspapers patronizingly as an institution that lives and thrives off their business. They look upon newspapers as something that they are more or less privileged to forget if the times are dull, and something they can recall to mind in those days when richer profits are seen.

A newspaper is a function, reciprocating service in the community in which it is located, an integral factor in everything it assists to motivate, therefore it is as worthy of its hire as the judge in his docket, the treasurer or the tax collector. In fact, a newspaper as an institution, is far more embracing than any or all, being the completed expression of the daily rounds of Life, which without, we would have to go back to the real chaos of disorganized society.

Such facts as those are recognized by the advanced type of person, but is also sometimes ignored by the ignorant or indifferent. The latter aim to keep the newspaper "in its place" by withholding a more just tribute. That is due, perhaps, to them having their own inferiority complex to contend with and their only object is a kind of self-satisfaction that comes from retarding the wheels of progress

These un-named opponents of the printed enlightment usually demonstrate the fact that they need the inoculation of the very high-idealed spirit that goes to make a real newspaper. And, while they are keeping the newspaper "in its place," they are keeping themselves there also. Such backwardness of theirs will be clearly indicated by their tenacious clinging to such outworn practices, slow conceptions of competitive requirements.

Let the community that wishes to step ahead, make its newspapers the staunchly supported banner carriers of its forward movement. The newspaper always gladly undertakes the many challenges to leadership and will invariably push forward against every obstacle. The only time the newspaper shows signs of weakening is when those it serves are weak.

Things Are Looking Up

We don't mean only the green things in field and garden. Economic depressions have no effect upon the processes of Nature the leaves come out and the grass comes up—to say nothing of the weeds—whether business is good or bad. And at this time of year it is always truthful, though not always the whole truth to say that things are looking up.

This year it seems to be true of other things besides the ones that grow. There are plenty of signs of improvement in business, not much in some lines, a good deal in others. Automobile production is increasing, which means more men working in the factories. The electric power output is higher than it was a year ago. That means not only that more people are using electric light but that industrial plants are buying more power. Building contracts reported for March show a gain over February. And it is hard to travel twenty miles in any direction from anywhere without running into a new highway or bridge under construction, or some other big piece of public work, giving employment to large numbers of men and putting in the aggregate hundreds of mililons of dollars into circulation.

There has been a great deal of unfriendly comment abroad over the situation in the United States during the past eighteen months. Unemployment, the breadlines in the big cities, and similar sensational items of news were printed in European papers, with the result that Germany, France and Italy picture the whole population of the United States reduced to destitution. Apparently they have never heard, over there, of our miniature golf craze, which began just after the depression hit us and so far has developed into a $150,000,000 business. Not everybody in the United States spends his time in the breadline!

And, to come back to the green grass and the weeds, Nature is doing a little better by us this year than last. At least there has been more rain this Spring all over the country than there was a year ago, and more snow in the North than for several Winters. There is still a lot of water to fall to bring up the average, but there doesn't seem to be any danger of another widespread drought in 1931.

On the whole, all things considered, we're doing pretty well, thank you.

o-o-o-o

Power For Eight Cents A Day

The 20,000,000 customers of the electric industry pay an average bill of 8 1-2 cents each day, according to Samuel Insull, President of the Middle West Utilities Company. Half of them pay 5 cents a day—the other half pay 12 cents. In other words, ten million Americans receive all the advantages of electric power for the price of a daily package of chewing gum, and ten million more receive it for less than the cost of a package of ordinary cigarettes.

It is for this reason that the battle over power becomes, on investigation, an absurdity. America is now perplexed by abundant important problems—prohibition, the tariff, foreign trade, unemployment, overproduction in certain basic industries, the rising cost of government and the like. Any one of these problems is of vital interest to all citizens. They must be solved, or social and economic chaos will result.

And our bland politicians go on talking about power.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

A thought struck me this week—I mean a thought what was a thought. It struck, and I grabbed it. I have been more or less writing of things, some serious and some not so serious, but this week, I am in something of a serious turn of mind. Thought I'd prepare you beforehand.

I'm basing my text on newspapers, especially the weekly paper, the press, The Fourth Estate, that line of profession that is regarded by those who know, as being a most high calling. Some have said that radios would eventually take the place of the newspaper. But, on the other hand, what would the radio be without the newspaper? Certainly the newspaper can do without the radio, but the radio cannot do without the newspaper. And anyway you can't wrap your lunch in a radio, neither can you stick a radio in your pocket to read when at leisure, neither can your picture be seen in a radio and there are millions of other items in favor of US.

You wouldn't start a fire with your radio, you wouldn't have a party written up and recorded over the air, unless maybe you pulled one of those million-dollar parties and give Austin automobiles as souvenirs.

To hear Dr. Neighbors, Charlie Cox, Fenn Jones or Frank Callen tell about what they saw and heard in Texas would make most anyone wonder why Alabama couldn't be as near independent as that state. Why, they tell me that the farmers over there are about to forget how to raise cotton—because they want to forget. They are in the truck farming, poultry and dairying business, and some of the banks there report that their deposits are greater this year than they were last year. Well, if we can't make the whole state of Alabama like that, what is to hinder us from making Chilton County an independent county, that is I mean more independent than it is. There is perhaps one thing that would have to be done. Some fellows would have to forget about the dollar for just a short time, and get the farmers to plant the proper thing, or thumbs down on advancements.

Folks, things are getting rather dry these days and our firemen say the weather is mighty hot to be rushing round fighting fires, so let's be a little careful this summer. Some folks think that winter time is the time when we have most of our fires in town, but by George, we had a couple of fires in one day last week. Let's be safe and not sorry.

* * * *

Speaking of newspapers. Did you know that when a stranger comes into a town, especially a small town, they draw a large amount of their opinion of the town from the newspaper that is published there. A town may be a dandy, but its newspaper a rather poor one, then that holds things down in a big way. I know that C. G. N. has had numerous requests for copies that come from various corners of the United States, from concerns and people that want to get an idea of what kind of a town Clanton is. And does C. G. N. speak in a big voice that Clanton is alive and booming? I should smile and say yes. Look at your newspaper—everyone else does. Clanton is very, very fortunate in having two good newspapers to speak to the outside world and tell what a good town am I.

* * * *

I not that the Nehi Plant has moved into larger quarters round in the section of town that Dief's, the News, etc., are located. A very good idea Mr. White. I welcome you to this section of our city that is riding high, wide and handsome. You'll have to get accustomed to the noise round there though, and watch yourself on the highway. Things get pretty rushing sometimes.

* * * *

I started this column off like I was going to tell something grave and serious. That was my intentions at first, but since giving it a second thought I've decided to lay off the subject I first started to write about. It's rather delicate, and I've got something of a hangover this morning. Nope, I didn't go to see that little blond teacher last night either. It was a red-head.

The Great Dook Recommends Chaperones

On a letter to me this week, the Great Dooker Pooker, of the Magic City writes an additional letter after commenting in the Coal Bin Friday night, to the people down here. Dook has no doubt been places, seen people and done things, and ought to know something, and does know wherein he speaks. Here's his letter this week:

"Dear Doug:

"I heartily subscribe to the opinions expressed by you in the matter of public dances and if I was you, I believe I'd recommend that, when any more public dances is had down there, boys be chaperoned by their popper, pro their bono. But if the wimmin down there persists in wearin' these Eve-ning gowns, you had better get somebody to chaperon the poppers.

"Once I attended the spectacular opening of a magnificent dance hall, said to have cost about $350,000. The public was "cordially invited" at so much per head and partners was provided for any who came without them, there being a mob of ladies and gentlemen "in waiting." There were about 300 couples on the floor, and about one square yard of floor space was all that any of them required for the evenings dance. They simply locked horns and stayed where they was at. In the centre of the room stood a chaperon (bouncer) who was assisted by another such and stationed at each of the four corners of the room. If a couple danced too enthusiastically, the chaperon would tap them on the shoulder at the first offense; and at the second, out they went. During the evening, I saw several couples leave the floor after being approached by a bouncer.

"Then one time I went with a friend to a dancing school. He wanted to learn how to dance. He was registered and then assigned a teacher, who at once took her victim to a private dancing room, with waxed floors and a graphophone. The teacher is paid by the school but expects and gets a tip from her victim. My friend told me that he had to change teachers several times before he found one who made any effort whatever to teach him. It seems that most of them were fishing for a date after the lesson.

"Maybe Clanton ought to hire some bouncers at their public dances."

Letters To The Editor

WHY NOT ALL THE ROADS?

Dear Editor:

I asked one of our mail carriers a few days ago why did the road machines go over all the roads around his route and scrape them good and smooth, including private roads, and did not scrape his road.

He said: "Well, I asked them why they did not scrape my road, and they said, 'We just forgot it.' "

Discrimination against Uncle Sam's employees, and little school children by our county officials will cause them to be a failure, and also the party they represent.

The county officials that renders impartial service are the ones the voters will remember favorably in the next election.

C. O. Bell, one of the county's progressive farmers was in Clanton Tuesday attending to business matters. While in town Mr. Bell called at the News office and had with him several baskets of fine looking strawberries. Before he left the News managed to secure a basket of the berries. They showed they had been carefully taken care of and were well filled out. Looks like the crop this year is going to be good.

Concord-Billingsley

We are sorry to say that several in this community are on the sick list at this writing, but we hope to see them well again soon.

The quarterly conference which was held here last Saturday was well attended. Every church on this circuit was represented. Several visitors from other churches also attended. We were indeed glad to have them with us.

Rev. J. H. Limbrick was present and brought to us a wonderful message at the eleventh hour, and also Rev. F. A. Gibson was present. We were glad to have them with us, for they have both served as pastor of our church.

Our pastor, Bro. Headley, filled his appointment Sunday and delivered a wonderful sermon, but on account of rain there wasn't any services Sunday night.

Bro. Headley was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Lawrence and family Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Popwell and children and Mr. E. B. Popwell of Thorsby, Mrs. A. P. Wililams and children of Shiloh community, Mrs. Emma Williams, Messrs. T. J. Deramus and T. L. Williams were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williams and family last Sunday.

Several from here attended the play at the Billingsley school last Saturday night.

We were planning on having a singing here last Sunday afternoon, but on account of the threatening weather, and sickness we didn't have it, but if nothing prevents we will try it over the first Sunday afternoon. We hope that everyone will be well again by that time. Those who came Sunday afternoon come back again and we will try not to disappoint you next time. All singers and lovers of music have a special invitation to come.

EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION BACKSPROGRAM

Outlined Program Will Aid Rural Schools To Maintain Usual Term Length

A program that is of wide interest over the state and of much interest to the rural elementary schools has been outlined and inaugurated by the Alabama Educational Association, according to information reaching the News this week.

This program of the association is to be placed before the present legislature. It is to ask the state to recoup to the counties any losses sustained as a result of a decrease in tax assessments. This is for educational purposes. And that the appropriation of the last legislature be continued. That an emergency appropriation of two million dollars be asked for rural public schools, and that all other units of the educational system such as colleges, etc., be asked to delay their efforts to secure an appropriation until the small rural elementary schools are taken care of.

This letter is being asked on account of the great need for immediate aid along the rural school side. This program is being pushed by the A. E. A. and state posts of the American Legion.

There is perhaps no doubt that this idea will meet with the hearty approval of everyone, and more so with those who are deeply interested in the securing of prompt funds for the rural schools.

Chief White Elk Visits C. C. H. S.

By Dan Smith

Everyone enjoyed Chief White Elk's visit to the high school last Tuesday. His talk was on "The Indians of Yesterday and the Indians of Today." This Indian is well educated. He holds a degree from the University of Chicago and has license to practice medicine, but can't do it because he has never given up his allegiance to his tribe. He asked the student-body questions relating to the Indians and the White man. The one answering the nearest to the correct word wanted, received a present from Chief White Elk. Frances Davis won the prize for the girls, and Paul Cox won for the boys. The Chief's talk was well received by all who heard him. He plans to come again September, bringing with him a number of native Indian girls who are musicians. They will put on a musical program.

Play Day At Montevallo

By Nell Neighbors

Physical education in high school is now a part of school work. This work begins in September, and continues until school closes. We receive points for different things we do during the year. We are supposed to make 1,000 points during the year. Our school did not make that many points, but we did make enough to qualify us to enter the Annual Play Day at Montevallo which is held each year in April. Those qualifying to enter and make the trip this year under the direction of Miss Wells as directress were: Nell Neighbors, Ethel Wilkerson, Roselle Gentry, Mary Charles Cox, Alice Petty, and Pauline and Grace Plyler. Miss Wells and the class wish to thank Mrs. N. R. Plyler and Mr. W. H. Sartor, who so kindly furnished their cars to make the trip.

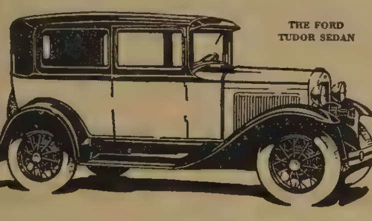
FORD RELIABILITY



Long, hard use shows the value of good materials and simplicity of design

EVERYWHERE you go you hear reports of the good performance and reliability of the Ford.

One owner writes—"The Ford Tudor Sedan I am driving has covered 59,300 miles through all kinds of weather. It is still giving perfect satisfaction."

Another owner describes a trip of 3217 miles in 95 hours over bad roads and through heavy rain and sleet in the mountains. "Throughout the entire trip," he writes, "the Ford performed excellently and no mechanical trouble of any kind was experienced. The shatter-proof glass undoubtedly saved us from serious injury when a prairie chicken struck the windshield while we were traveling at 65 miles an hour."

See the nearest dealer and have him give you a demonstration ride in the Ford. Then, from your own personal experience, you will know that it brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the good people for their faithful work last Friday while our father's house was burning. If it had not been for the brave men, our whole row of houses would have burned. Everything in the kitchen was burned, and there wasn't any insurance at all. May the Lord bless each and everyone. Tongue cannot tell how we appreciate what they did for us.

STRAWBERRY CROP IS DAMAGED BY THE STRAWBERRY WEEVIL

County Agent Stapp advises us that he is receiving many reports of seriously damaged strawberry fields by a comparatively new pest to strawberry growers of this section.

Mr. Stapp gives the following news article for the berry growers' information:

The strawberry weevil is a snout weevil, about one-tenth inch long, which is closely related to and resembles, except in size, the cotton boll weevil. It spends the winter in the beetle stage in the strawberry beds and emerges early in the Spring. After feeding for several days, the females start depositing eggs in the unopened buds. The stems of the buds in which the eggs are laid are cut by the weevil and the bud dies. This is the reason for the damage done by this pest. Plowing under of old beds, rotation of plantings, and applications of dust, made by mixing arsenate of lead and dusting sulphur or calcium arsenate and hydrated lime, usually will keep this pest under control.

Food Plants

The natural foods for the strawberry weevil are wild strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, and red bud. It seems to feed largely on the cultivated strawberries at times when most of these other food plants are not available.

Feeding Habits

The adult weevil may feed on the leaves of the strawberry plants, however, it feeds largely on the pollen of the strawberry. The female feeds for several days on the pollen of the unopened buds before any eggs are deposited. For this reason, damage can by escaped to some extent by planting varieties that produce very little pollen. The Aroma is a variety that is practically immune to the damage by the strawberry weevil.

Life Cycle

This insect produces only one generation each year. The adult passes the winter in the strawberry beds or in grass or weeds nearby. Early in the Spring these beetles emerge looking for food. As previously stated, they feed largely on the pollen of the unopened buds. After feeding on the pollen several days the females start depositing eggs in mature buds, but buds that have not yet opened. After the egg is deposited, the adult then turns and cuts the stem just at the base of the bud. This, of course, causes the bud to dry up and die. Quite often infested buds will drop to the ground, but usually enough of the dead buds are left hanging on the plants to clearly indicate the presence of the insect. The very small, whitish eggs, hatch usually within seven or eight days. The tiny grub then starts feeding on the pollen contained in the buds and the worm reaches maturity within three or four weeks. It then transforms to the inactive stage, which we know as the pupa. It spends from a week to ten days in this stage and then emerges as a beetle, taking from four to six weeks to complete its development from egg to adult. After the young beetles emerge, they start feeding on the foliage of the plants and do so until early Fall when the again seek protected places in which to spend the Winter.

This pest, like most other insects, does serious damage one year and then practically disappears for maybe two or three years when it again appears in such numbers as to cause serious damage. This most likely is due to the fact that it has insect enemies. There is a tiny wasp that is known to lay its eggs in the young grubs while they are in the buds developing. In the years that parasites or other natural conditions do not control this pest, artificial methods of control have to be resorted to.

Artificial Control

One of the first steps in keeping down numbers of this pest is the destruction of all old beds by plowing them under. It has been found that when this insect is covered with only an inch or two of soil that it is unable to free itself and, therefore, is killed. Quite often in beds that are to be used another year, a thorough plowing of the rows following the gathering of the crop will result in the destruction of many of these pests. Some few recommend the use of a mower to cut the leaves from the plants just after the crop has been gathered and as soon as the leaves have become thoroughly dry, the whole patch is burned over, thus destroying the foliage. If done with care, this burning process should not injure the crown of the plants. This method of control, however, is recommended only to those that will take unusual care in the operation.

The Use of Insecticides To Control The Weevil

Experimental work has shown that this insect cannot be readily poisoned. However, it has been discovered that dusting the plants with a mixture made of one pound of arsenate of lead and five pounds of dusting sulphur, or a mixture of one pound of calcium arsenate and four pounds of hydrated lime, is very effective in repelling the pest. The plants should be dusted at the rate of 12 to 15 pounds per acre with either of the above mixtures. The first application of dust should be applied as soon as fairly mature buds are noticed generally over the field. A week later the second application should be made. The most effective way of applying this dust is by the use of a dust machine. If a dust machine is not available for use; a hand sifter, made by covering an ordinary mule muzzle with 16 mesh screen wire, with a handle made of heavy wire, will prove fairly satisfactory. A fairly even distribution of dust over the plants can be made with this apparatus by walking along the row and rotating the apparatus back and forth by a twist of the hand.

Extension Entomologist.

Pilgrims Rest News

We are thankful to say that health of this community is very good at present, and after such a good rain everyone may continue planting their crops.

Sunday was our regular preaching day at Pilgrims Rest, and we had a fine sermon delivered by the pastor, Rev. Norris. We also had a good Sunday School, with several visitors.

Mrs. Alice Herrod from Haynes is visiting friends and relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Stroud from Enterprise spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Ousley.

Several from around here attended the play, "Eyes of Love," at Billingsley Saturday night.

Mr. Andrew McCollough spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Ousley.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Apperson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Willie Browning.

Friday was the last day of school at Pilgrim, so Mr. E. M. Ousley carried a truck load of school pupils and patrons to Montgomery. All enjoyed the day fine, going through the Capitol and White House, also watching the airplanes. Mr. Ousley took an eight-minute ride in one which he enjoyed fine. We also visited the deer park at Prattville. The school was taught by Miss Leila Belle Smith, a fine young lady, whom we all regretted to see leave very much. Everyone seemed to love her, and we feel sure of the fact that she gained many friends while in our midst. She was a fine teacher, dearly loved by all her pupils, and not only this community, but surrounding communities. We al lare hoping she will be with us again next winter as our teacher, also looking for her to visit us this summer. We feel that she did her part in trying to teach her pupils.

Mr. E. M. Ousley, Mr. Eugene Walker and Mr. Henry Ousley made a business trip to Clanton Monday.

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily, half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwells' Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.

Party Sails in Secrecy.

On the date of my sailing, May 28, 1917, my party assembled at Governor's Island, New York. All had been instructed to proceed with the utmost secrecy, even wearing civilian clothes until they were aboard the steamship Baltic.

Although we ourselves stole silently out through the fog and down the bay, the large number of quartermasters and other officers stationed near New York dashing around in uniform rather ostentatiously that day really amounted to an announcement something out of the ordinary was happening.

But it must be said to the credit of the press representatives that they were most discreet, as the papers generally published nothing about us until we were in Europe.

During the voyage most of my time was spent in conference with the heads of staff departments regarding their duties and plans. The study of French was taken up by many officers, and classes were in session at all hours.

In the Danger Zone.

June 6 the Baltic began to zigzag and we realized we were in the danger zone. Next morning an escort of two American destroyers gave us something of a thrill and feeling of restored confidence. No submarines were observed, however, and the weather was perfect throughout the voyage.

We steamed into Liverpool June 8. A cordial reception awaited us, with a guard of honor from the Royal Welsh fusiliers. This selection had a sentimental significance in that the regiment not only fought against us at Bunker Hill but fought beside us during the Boxer rebellion in China. As we stepped off the gangplank the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" to welcome us, this being the first time in history that an American army ever was received officially in England.

A royal coach attached to a special train took our party to London. At Euston station we were welcomed by Lord Derby, secretary of state for war; Field Marshal Sir John French, Gen. Lord Brooke, Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador, Admiral Williams S. Sims, and many other British and American officials.

King George Not Optimistic.

I was received by King George at Buckingham palace June 9. His majesty was in the uniform of a field marshal and he talked with me in democratic fashion for a few minutes before the other senior members of my staff were presented. The king expressed his pleasure that America had come into the war, and dwelt upon the fact that Anglo-Saxon people were united at last in a common cause.

"The Anglo-Saxon race must save civilization," he added.

Certainly his majesty did not appear optimistic over the outlook, and asked me numerous questions about America's preparation for war.

Leaving the palace, we went to our embassy and during an informal talk Mr. Page remarked how happy he was that America was at last in the war, and added:

"Now I am able to hold up my head and look people squarely in the eye."

Through his service as ambassador he was beloved and honored by the British people, who admired his virile personality, but many Americans did not approve of his rather apologetic attitude toward his own country prior to our entry into the war in aid of the allies.

Admiral Sims Not Satisfied.

I had a talk with Admiral Sims, who was not in personal command of our fleet serving with the British navy, but remained in London with an office at our embassy and directed the movements of our naval vessels, especially destroyers, from there.

He was not satisfied with the support given him from home, and complained that the Navy department had not sent all the destroyers asked for. He said the department seemed to fear attacks along our coast and did not realize the danger to the cause in the enormous destruction of merchant shipping going on in European waters.

The admiral's report of these losses was nothing short of startling, but he thought they might be checked if he could have a sufficient number of destroyers. Without more of this class of vessels, Sims was not sanguine over the prospects of protecting our transports. However, he made it clear that every possible effort would be made to that end.

CHAPTER V

I was a guest at luncheon at Buckingham palace June 11, 1917, with the American ambassador, Walter Hines Page, and Mrs. Page. The king, the queen and Princess Mary were present. There was an air of charm and simplicity at the palace that permitted a freedom and intimacy in the conversation. The plain fare was quite in keeping with the food situation throughout England.

After luncheon the king, the ambassador and I stood near a window overlooking the garden, which, as his majesty explained, instead of growing flowers, was producing potatoes. The king told of the kaiser's visit to London a few years before and how he had brought his chief of secret service along and put him up at one of the hotels to learn all he could while the kaiser himself was a guest at Buckingham palace.

His majesty spoke bitterly of the inhumanity of the Germans, dwelling especially on the night bombing of London. Pointing to the beautiful statue of Queen Victoria just outside the window, the king suddenly exclaimed:

"The kaiser, God damn him, has even tried to destroy the statue of his own grandmother."

For a moment I was surprised at his words, but I quickly realized that it was a solemn expression of profound indignation, and not profanity.

Calls on Chief of Staff.

After leaving the palace I called on Gen. Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial general staff. He was a rugged, heavy-set, blunt soldier, of Scotch descent, whose record in the army had been exceptional in that he had risen from the grade of private to his then high position.

As he sipped his tea I explained our plan for the organization of our armies by using the small regular force and the National Guard as a nucleus. As the British themselves had gone through the same experience two years before, I stressed the fact that it would take considerable time. Like all the British officials, he was much in favor of having our forces serve with or near their own. He pointed out that we were both Anglo-Saxons, spoke the same language, and gave other reasons to support his views.

It seemed necessary to explain in detail that as the American navy was working with the British navy we should probably plan to place our army beside the French if there was to be any preference. It appeared logical that we should do this, as we were to operate on French soil and use French ports, railways and material. The main thing, I went on to say, was to form our own army as soon as possible for use wherever it seemed best.

No British Aid in Shipping.

I emphasized our lack of tonnage and told him that we must have additional shipping if we were to bring over an army worth while, but his reaction to this was not encouraging. He said he thought that it was entirely out of the question for them to provide us with any British shipping, as they were already in sore straits to find vessels for their own national necessities.

I called on Mr. David Lloyd George, the prime minister. He went right to the point and asked when troops would be organized and trained and the numbers we expected to send over. He was cordial enough and expressed a desire to assist us in every possible manner, but when I stressed our need of assistance to bring over our troops he did not seem to be particularly interested and gave little hope that the British would be able to furnish us any shipping whatever.

Under the circumstances the apparent unconcern of the British as to our need of shipping is not difficult to understand. They were seriously alarmed regarding their own food situation. It seemed to me, however, that they had allowed their pessimism to carry them too far in the direction of hopelessness. At the moment, they could see no relief for the future and no prospect of aiding us in tonnage.

Great Ovation in France.

After leave-taking calls and numerous informal visits, conferring with various leaders and making one trip to a training camp, our party left June 13 for Folkestone and France. At Boulogne we again received an impressive welcome, and a few hours later we were in Paris.

The officials who met us at the station included M. Paul Painleve, minister of war; Marshal Joseph Joffre, Rene Vivian, Major General Foch, then chief of staff, and United States Ambassador William G. Sharp. There were many others. The station was packed and the atmosphere seemed electrical with pent-up enthusiasm.

Outside dense masses lined the boulevards and filled the squares along the route to our hotel, the Crillon. Cheers and tears mingled as men and women shouted acclaim. Women climbed into our carriages screaming "Vive l'Amerique" and threw flowers until we were buried.

It was said that never before in the history of Paris had there been such an outpouring of people. I was to see its parallel when the armistice was signed and on two other occasions, once when President Wilson arrived and later when the victory parade took place, July 14, 1919.

At Napoleon's Tomb.

Although I was very anxious to get to work, it was necessary for me to make certain official calls and attend a few entertainments that had been planned for us. The French suggested that we should first go to visit Napoleon's tomb in Les Invalides.

We were taken down to the crypt, where I was handed the great key and was asked to unlock the heavy wrought iron entrance door. We were shown uniforms and the baton that belonged to Napoleon and then his sword. Our veteran escort reverently removed the sword from the case and offered it to me, as if to transmit some of the genius of the great captain.

So much of French sentiment and tradition are associated with this tomb and its treasures that every one who visits there with Frenchmen must share their feeling of profound emotion. This incident, more than any other connected with my reception, impressed me with the martial spirit of the French people.

Finds Poincare Reserved.

I called next to pay my respects to President Poincare and to present greetings from President Wilson.

"The French people are very happy," he said, "that America is in the war. Your coming is a great satisfaction to us."

He inquired generally about our plans, seeking, as they all did, some assurance that we should soon be in the trenches. His attitude was rather formal and reserved, but he at once impressed me as a man of ability and force.

Petain "Most Agreeable."

A visit to French general headquarters at Compiegne was made, primarily to meet General Petain and the officers of his staff. Petain is above medium height and weight. He wore a full mustache, slightly gray, and was then about sixty. He has a kindly expresion and is most agreeable, but not especially talkative.

His keen sense of humor became apparent from the jokes he told at the expense of some of his staff. Our conversation after luncheon was almost entirely on military affairs, including America's probable part in the war, which, as matters stood, gave little promise of becoming effective until the following spring.

My impression of Petain was favorable and it remained unchanged throughout the war. Our friendship, which I highly treasure, had its beginning at this meeting.

The Election of Troop 51

Last Friday night, April 18th, 1931, Troop 51 met at their regular meeting house and had their meeting. It lasted one hour and a half and every minute was taken up in business of work. We started by saying the Scout Oath, and we went on with our business. We have started two log cabins for each patrol to use as they like.

Then after the meeting we started electing "Who's Who," in our Troop. We had several officers to be elected.

Searcy Martin was elected most efficient Scout; Owen Deal the most handsome and friendliest; Horace Vinson, most trustworthy; Hayes Marcus, biggest booster; Thomas Marcus, best all round, and the most loyal; J. C Connell, the bravest; Bobbie Powers, best sportsman; Julius Martin, neatest Scout, and every Scout was well satisfied. Eugene Wilkinson was most pleasant and the wittiest Scout, and Irby Wood the most courteous. We closed by the Scout Law.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE PREPARING FOR MAY DAY PROGRAM

Montgomery, Ala., April 22—Clanton students at Womans College of Alabama will take part in the annual May Day festival here on May 2. Not only will Chilton County college students participate in the event, but invitations have been sent to every high school student in this county and it is expected that a delegation from Chilton County will attend.

Program

In addition to the spectacular May Day festival, in which four hundred students will take part, the program includes a plan of play especially for visiting high school students, and also the impressive ceremony of the inauguration of the new student president, Montine Lisenby, of Dothan.

Beginning at 9 a.m. all visiting high school students with the directors will stage a striking and original parade over the college campus. After the parade, the sports will begin and play for the joy of playing will be the order of the day. The program of sports includes archery, tennis, volley ball, basket ball, horse-shoe pitching, swimming and informal games.

Inaugural Ceremony

At 3:30 the ritualistic ceremony of the inauguration of the new student president will take place. President Walter D. Agnew will administer the oath of office to Miss Lisenby, new head of the student government association. The various classes will pledge their loyalty through songs and gifts of flowers.

Following the inauguration, the gorgeous May Day festival will take place with the crowning of the May Queen as the central event. The theme of the festival is derived from the mediaeval period, it will portray the glamour and decorative richness of that time. The prince and princess, the maids, the courtiers, jesters, the jugglers, and all that goes to make up the mediaeval court will be made to live again in the pageant that will be presented on May Day.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this method of extending our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many deeds and words of kindness extended to us in our bereavement in the recent death of our beloved wife and mother. We especially wish to express our thanks to Dr. Napoleon Johnson, Miss Luela McDowell, and Mr. Mell Martin for their services. May God's richest blessings be your for these kind acts.

Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

Our hearts rejoiced last Sunday as our attendance at Sunday school reached 148. That broke all records for the past few years, but it is still below what our average should be. Help us to reach two hundred Preaching next Sunday at 11 a.m. and at 7:30 p.m. by the pastor. If you belong with us, we want you present every Sunday. When you allow other things to keep you away from church on Sunday, you are making God occupy second place. God is going to be first with you, or not at all. God is calling for you to enter His house on the holy Sabbath.

Goodson Is Sentenced To Life Imprisonment

on their way to the home of R. A. Arledge, where Pauline boarded. She went on to tell how Goodson came to the house and conversed with Ruby, and how she went for help when Goodson became somewhat unruly, and how she heard the first shot fired, and went to her sister's side, to take her in her arms where she died in a pool of blood, shot three times through the back, and struck over the head by a pistol as was testified to by Hub Griffin and R. A. Arledge, who were about to come into the room where the commotion was going on.

Hub Griffin was the third witness to take the stand, and he told how he had started into the room when he saw Goodson striking Ruby over the head with the butt of a pistol, after he had shot her. R. A. Arledge at whose home the shooting occurred, took the stand following Griffin and he also testified as to how he saw the boy striking the girl over the head, and how Goodson fled when he saw Arledge looking in the door of the room.

Goodson In Tears During Trial

All during the trial, Goodson sat at the table near the stand with his head bowed on his arms on the table, only raising it now and then to wipe tears from his pallid and slender face, and during recesses he would only raise it to speak to a relative for just a moment and then tears would flow and he would bow his head again. He was not placed on the stand during the trial.

Then followed the examining of witnesses who were summoned by the State. Robert Alred, employee of a drug store here, took the stand and testified that Goodson was in search of a pistol on April 4 or some cartridges for a pistol. Ernest Moore, operator of a cafe here, also stated that Goodson came to his place and inquired where he could secure some cartridges for a pistol. J. Mell Martin, undertaker and coroner, took the stand and gave information concerning the shots fired into the body of the girl, etc.

In the afternoon session of the trial, the witnesses caleld were in majority of cases for the defense. J. M. Willett of Autaugaville, the original home of Goodson testified that he had noticed Goodson doing things in a peculiar manner, and that he had known him for sometime, and that the boy's father also appeared slightly mentally unbalanced at times.

Mother Of Goodson Takes Stand

Mrs. Zeke Goodson of Autaugaville, mother of Collier Goodson, took the stand and was questioned. She told that her son had at times acted abnormally, and had pulled her hair at times and had been ugly. She also testified that her husband was now confined at home due to his peculiar actions, and that at times he appeared slightly insane, waving his hands and talking nonsense, and that he would at times become violent. She stated that her son read the Bible quite a lot, and that at times they were unable to get him to eat or sleep.

As soon as the State took Mrs. Goodson for questioning she soon collapsed on the stand, and was carried from the courtroom. Horace Lowe of Autaugaville took the stand and gave testimony that attempted to show that Goodson was mentally unbalanced. The Prosecutor asked him if he, Lowe, had been sent to the penitentiary, and the reply was that he had, for two years for forgery. He was dismissed.

Other witnesses taking the stand included H. M. Whetstone, W.R. Wheeler, G. W. Goodson, Alvin Jones, Will Faulkner, Horace Carter, all of Autaugaville, and Dr. R. J. Gholson of Prattville, and Walter Broadhead, Gaines Silas, Lloyd Martin,, Ben Tucker, G. L. Griffin, C. L. Wilkins, and Clyde Wilkins, all of the Enterprise Community in this county and the home of the slain girl, and where Goodson had been employed on a farm for sometime.

Mrs. Goodson was again called to the stand, in a very nervous state. She told that her son had written her a letter back to Autaugaville, after he had come to this county to work, telling her that he was sorry he had been a bad boy at home and that he wanted her to forgive him, as he was going to lead a better life thereafter.

Spectators Moved By Attorneys

When Hon. G. C. Walker, County Solicitor, took his place before the jury after all witnesses had been dismissed, his plea to the twelve men brought sobs to the mouths of many in the courtroom, while he pictured the murder as brutal and the dead girl as innocent, telling the jurymen to take it to their home, imagining the girl were their own daughter, as he asked for the death penalty.

He was followed by the counsel of the defendant, who in a most elaborate manner spoke to the jurymen, telling them of the vast possibility of insanity in the young man who was charged with the murder of the girl.

Alexander was followed by Huddleston, who brought more sobs to the mouths of the people and more tears to the eyes of many women and men as he pictured the murder of the girl.

Judge Smoot then gave the jurymen the rules and instructions pertaining to such cases as laid down by the law, and the court adjourned, the jurymen going to supper, to return to the jury room where they were to decide on their verdict.

Essie White's Birthday Party.

The rain on Tuesday afternoon did not spoil the fun of about twenty-five little folks who helped Essie White celebrate her sixth birthday. Essie was six on Wednesday, April 22. Various games were played during the afternoon. Spring flowers were used to decorate the rooms while a color scheme of pink and green was carried out in the dining room. The table was centered with a large white birthday cake holding six tiny pink candles. The ring was drawn by Richard Hugh Lawrence. Lillian Smith drew the dime and Wilbur Prince drew the thimble. Delightful sandwiches, cake and punch were served. Essie received many lovely gifts from the following: Betty Jean Armstrong, Jerry Alred, Joan Atkinson, Junior Thompson, Paul Gowan, Richard Hugh Lawrence, Julia Nell Parrish, Lillian Smith, Inez Wyatt, Flem Higgins, Jr., Frances Smith, Annie Cordelia Smith, Joe Frank Higgins, Louis Benton Eubanks, Charles Mims, Jack Lowery, Gene Mullins, James Walker, Wilbur Prince, Aileen Popwell, Lois Rockett, Saradean Smith, Blanche Taylor and Thelma White. Mrs. White was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Milton Smith, Mrs. Joe Higgins, and Mrs. Reedie Taylor.

Mrs. Grover Harris Died In Montgomery Hospital

time president of the Woman's Missionary Union, and was active in all work of the Missionary organizations.

Impressive funeral services were conducted at the Clanton Baptist church Sunday afternoon at four o'clock by Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the church, who related before countless friends of the deceased, her Christian life. Interment followed in the Clanton cemetery, with Martin & Sons in charge. The floral offerings from various organizations and numerous individuals attested in a strong manner, the high esteem in which this woman was held and the love and respect always shown her.

She is survived by her mother, her husband, one daughter, one son, two brothers, three sisters, and hundreds of friends.

In the death of Mrs. Grover Harris, hundreds of people of this section will feel that they have suffered a keen personal loss. Mrs. Harris was widely known throughout this county. She has devoted her life to those things which are recorded in her favor, those things that bring close to her all who came in contact with her, whether through business or through social channels.

To those people who give deaths but little of their thought, the death of this highly esteemed lady has caused them to bow their heads and offer a prayer. They review in their minds the countless deeds of kindness, the hours and efforts spent by her in Christian work, and at the same time Mr. Harris will enter their thoughts, that will be made up of a life devoted to religious activities, a life of service to fellowmen at all times.

The sympathy of every person who has ever known our esteemed citizen, Grover C. Harris, Sr., will go out to him and his children in a voluntary and unselfish manner in this, his hour of grief, which is also an hour of grief to hundreds of others who knew Mrs. Harris.

In reviewing the life of Mrs. Harris, we find that we also review the life of Mr. Harris, who has served as rural mail carrier here for a number of years, and we reach the point, with a heavy feeling, a remorseful feeling in our heart, causing us to stop and ponder, wondering why God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to take for himself this Christian woman at this time.

From the day Mrs. Harris became confined to her bed, in places where the news spread, there was a feeling of utmost regret. Friends everywhere inquired each day, almost each hour concerning the condition of their beloved friend, whose death was a shock to the entire county. After her removal to the Memorial Hospital in Montgomery, the interest in her condition became more tense. Prayers were offered for her speedy recovery every day during the period in which fear was felt for her. It will be many, many years before the absence of Mrs. Harris among her friends, among those outside of her immediate family, will go unnoticed.

Mulberry at the place of Cleve Mims, and another group near Clanton at the farm of Dr. P. T. Hinkle. The hope of the promoter of these birds is that they may eventually grow and increase in numbers to such an extent that they may be classed as plentiful wild game birds in this part of the country. The experiment is certainly worthy of the interest and co-operation of every citizen and sportsman in our county.

Many years ago a certain Judge Denny introduced the pheasant to the State of Oregon, much in the same manner as has been pursued by Dr. Gragg here. Today it is said that there are more pheasants in Oregon than in the whole Chinese empire, which is their native home. There is every reason to believe that the pheasant will live and prosper in Alabama. If it can it will be a game bird that will challenge the sportsman's very best sense of strategy.

Absolute protection for the birds that have been liberated is necessary, however, and Dr. Gragg appeals to everybody to help out in providing this protection. It is said that effort has already been made by some in the neighborhood to kill the birds. This is regrettable, and every sportsman hopes that such attitude will be abandoned.

Doubtless in a few years if these birds are left alone they will be more plentiful in Chilton County than quail. Under favorable conditions the hen will raise two broods a season. They are large producers of eggs. Therefore, they increase rapidly if properly protected.

Investigation has proven that the pheasant is a valuable friend of the farmer, because it is a vicious destroyer of insects, snails, spiders, earthworms, acorns, berries, weed and grass seeds. From the standpoint of the agriculturist and forester, the pheasant is far more beneficial than injurious.

Judge Denny is memorialized in Oregon for the introduction of this finest of all game birds into the State. We hope that Dr. Gragg may some day be so acclaimed by the sportsmen of Alabama. Many have expressed an interest in his venture. Let us spread the news to every person in the county and get universal protection for the pheasants.

CHILTON HIGH PLAYS MARION HERE FRIDAY

Local Team Defeated Plantersville There; Plays Two Games With Marion

Again the baseball tossers and hitters of the Chilton County High school thowed their "It" when they sauntered over to Plantersville and came back last Friday afternoon with another victory. The local team defeated Plantersville by a score of 10 to 2.

Two substitutons were made for Clanton during the game. Arnold for Harris and Taylor for Tiffin. Nothing bad wrong with those taken out, just a matter of giving all the boys a little fun in the game. Fred Busby became tensely interested in the game and away went a home run for Clanton from his bat. Littlejohn took it upon himself to frail the ball a hard one just for fun, so it seemed, and off went another home run for the local boys. Simms went up to bat four times and tried to embarrass Plantersville's pitcher by getting three hits, but the Plantersville boys stood up exceedingly well, showing some real sportsmanship, although they met with defeat. But apparently the Plantersville players are of that type, scarcely found, that when defeated they go about to become stronger for the next attack. Morrow, playing 1st base, showed some good playing as did C. Willis.

Paul Cox, throwing the ball for the Plantersville boys to sling the bat at, showed what a Clanton arm can do when the opportunity presents itself.

Clanton Defeats Selma Here

The baseball team of the Selma High school motored over here last Tuesday afternoon to play against the local high school lads, and returned defeated by a score of 10 to 4. Paul Cox did some nice throwing as Selma only managed to get three hits during the game, while the Clanton boys took off 14 hits from Powell of Selma. Tom Tiffin caught those swift and sluggish balls of Cox, for Clanton. Ted Littlejohn just wouldn't the game go without a home run, so away he went with the only one made for Clanton.

The local high school team will meet the widely known team from the Marion Military Institute, of Mairon here tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock, and again on next Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. These two games promise to be real interesting. People here know the kind of football teams the Marion school turns out, and their baseball teams are just as dangerous. However, it is hoped that the Clanton boys will not allow that thought to interefere with their past good showing, and that they will show up just as well under the attack from Marion.

CLANT. LAUNDRY USING NEW 'LESS SERIOUS' ADVERTISING

Beginning in last week's issue of the News, the Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company, launderers and dry cleaners, opened a series of what is known as "less serious" advertising. These ads will appear each week in the News for several weeks.

The "Less Serious" advertising idea is more or less new in its use at present, but advertising companies are gradually turning to the idea and the News is now able to furnish such series in a most up-to-date lineup. The Clanton Laundry & Cleaning Company received exclusive rights to the first release of such advertising from the News. These ads have a punch to them, being properly illustrated and worded.

BERRIES BEING SHIPPED WITH GOOD OUTLOOK

Scenes about Shipping Points Show Optimistic Spirit of Growers And Shippers

Strawberries are being brought to the shipping points of Chilton and Thorsby every day now, and the outlook for a fine crop is still getting better, according to those who are in a position to know at this time.

So far this week, two cars have been shipped from Thorsby and one from Clanton. It was stated that by the end of the week, Thorsby will have shipped approximately ten or twelve cars and Clanton almost that number.

The berries are not being loaded at Jemison as was done last year, but are being loaded on cars at Thorsby.

Scenes around the shipping points of the berries, where the growers are bringing in their berries for inspection and loading, show that a very optimistic spirit is prevailing among those who are raising the berries. The berries themselves are full and are some of the finest looking seen in this county for sometime. Tourists along the Birmingham-Montgomery highway are being met on every turn through the county with stands, where charming young ladies and others are offering strawberries for sale in quart baskets. This outlet, or sale, for berries alone is netting many farmers a neat little sum.

Cooke Players Will Be In County Soon

An announcement was received from the Cooke Players that they will appear in Maplesville and in Thorsby in the very near future. They are scheduled to be in Maplesville for one week, beginning Monday, May 4th. The announcement came from H. M. Cooke, who is well known over the county, and whose entertainers are well liked.

Thorsby will be their stop after playing for one week in Maplesville. They will appear in Thorsby for one week, beginning Monday, May 11th, according to their ad which appears elsewhere in this issue.

FARMERS HARDWARE CO. OFFERS REFRIGERATOR BARGAINS

On another page in this week's issue there appears an ad from the Farmers Hardware Company of this place stating they are offering some outstanding savings on refrigerators. On looking over the line of refrigerators carried by this well known concern, a representative of the News found they had almost every size. Lester Jones of the hardware store stated that they have refrigerators in many sizes, colors, and that the price was right. Read their ad, as other items are also listed in it.

PICNIC COMING FOR FORMER COOSA PEOPLE

All-Day Get-Together Planned for People from Coosa Now Living In Chilton

An announcement was made this week that will without a doubt go to the heart of many persons in Chilton and Coosa counties. This announcement stated that a big all-day picnic is being planned for the third Sunday in May, which is May 17th.

It will be an all-day affair, and will be held at the new ferry, just below Mitchell Dam, on Coosa River, where the ferry connects Coosa with Chilton on the new Rockford road. This will be something of a reunion of the people who came from Coosa County and are now residing in Chilton County, and a large number are expected to be there from the Coosa side. All are asked to bring lunch, and the older people are especially invited to take part in this event. Any further announcements will be made later, but don't forget the date, Sunday, May 17th, when the people will meet their old friends and have a grand and glorious time together.

Local Senior Class Presents Play May 7

Coming as something of the climax to entertainments in Clanton by schools the Senior Class play of the Chilton County High School will be presented on next Thursday night, May 7th.

It was at first stated that the play would be given Friday night, May 1st, but this was later changed to the former date.

The play is entitled "Crooks for a Month" and promises to be one of the best ever staged by a Senior Class in Clanton. The cast of characters and a synopsis of the play will be published next week.

GRADUATE LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL AND AUBURN BECOMES INSANE

A story reaching the News this week shows that one of this county's most promising young men will no doubt soon become an inmate of the insane asylum. Jack Dickinson, whose home is in the lower part of the county is confined in the Montgomery jail, awaiting papers for his removal to Bryce's Hospital in Tuscaloosa, it was stated.

Dickinson is a graduate of the local high school of several years ago and is approximately 30 years old, coming from a fine family of this county. He attended the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn where he graduated with honors, specializing in electrical engineering, and later being employed by a large electrical concern at a handsome salary, doing some research work at the age of twenty-one. During his intense interest in his work, is said to be the cause of his becoming mentally unbalanced, he lost the use of one of his eyes. He refused to give up his work at that time, continuing to give the study of electricity his undivided attention.

MAY QUEEN TO BE CROWNED HERE FRIDAY

Contest of Grammar School Grows in Interest As Closing Day Draws Near

Interest throughout the city is becoming more and more intense in the May Queen Contest being sponsored by the Clanton Grammar School, as the closing time for casting votes draws near. The final posting of the votes will be made this afternoon at six o'clock, however, votes may be placed up until ten o'clock tomorrow morning, at which time the contest closes.

Some charming little Miss of the grammar school will be crowned Queen of the May as the result of this contest. No announcement will be made of the winner until Friday afternoon, May 1, at two o'clock at the courthouse, when Mayor J. Lee Smith will place the gaily decorated crown on the little girl's head.

The May Day parade of the grammar school preceding the crowning of the Queen will originate at the school building. The float which will be attractively decorated, carrying all the contestants will be preceded by a her-

"MON" WYATT SAYS HE HAS REAL BARGAINS IN NEW TIRES

Judging from an ad from the Woco Service Station, located in front of the courthouse here, and which is operated by G. M. (Mon) Wyatt, they have something interesting to offer a person contemplating the purchasing of a new set of automobile tires.

Mr. Wyatt stated that he has placed prices down on new Firestone tires so low that it would be folly for an automobile owner who is using old tires, not to buy at such prices. He also states in the ad that they will allow a very liberal trade-in on old tires, and that one's old tires will probably be worth more as trade-ins than otherwise.

Thanks From Kiwanis Club

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton is highly gratified at the splendid patronage accorded by the people of Clanton and surrounding communities to the two entertainment features recently sponsored by the Club, the picture, "Just Imagine" and the blackface minstrel.

President J. Mell Martin has issued the following statement on behalf of the membership of Kiwanis:

"On behalf of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton I wish to say to those who so graciously accorded us your patronage at our town entertainment numbers that we fully appreciate your interest and cooperation.

"The picture show—Just Imagine—and the negro minstrel, were sponsored by the club in an effort to raise a fund which will be used by the club in its program of community service. Those who patronized our shows, therefore, have a part in our program of service to this community, and we thank each and everyone.

"The success of these two numbers is so gratifying that the club has planned to sponsor some other entertainment features during the summer. We will appreciate your continued interest and help.

"The Club at all times appreciates the help and friendly interest of anyone in carrying out its objectives for the betterment of our community. Kiwanis has only one purpose—to serve our community—and when you help Kiwanis, you thereby help our community.

"We thank you, one and all."

A REQUEST THAT ALL NEWS MAILED IN BE SIGNED

Quite often news items and articles mailed or sent to the News with no name signed to them, and as has been repeatedly stated, such items must be signed by the one sending them in, as it is the rule of the News and other newspapers not to use articles that are not signed.

That does not mean the signature will be published. It is never published unless deemed suitable. This week, several letters came in, well written and containing interesting news from over the county, but the writers failed to sign their names, and consequently the News was unable to use it. We gladly publish items mailed or sent in, if properly signed.

HUGO L. BLACK WILL SPEAK AT LEGION MEETING

Local Post Invites Public To Hear Senator Black Speak Here On May 4th

It was announced here this week by J. N. Calloway, Commander of the Chilton County Post of the American Legion that Senator Hugo L. Black has accepted an invitation to speak at the meeting of the local American Legion Post on the night of Monday, May 4th.

This announcement will be greeted with no small amount of pleasure by members of the local post and the entire county, and Senator Black is a forceful, deep thinging speaker. Many have had the pleasure of hearing him before and will not miss this opportunity, and those who have not heard him will surely take advantage of this time. Senator Black will be accompanied by his secretary, Mr. Grant, who is also an active Legionnaire.

The local post of the American Legion urges that the entire public hear Senator Black, and extends an invitation to that effect.

Dr. F. J. Lee Now Located In Thorsby

For the past several weeks, accounts of new business concerns opening in Thorsby have been carried in this newspaper, and this week another piece of evidence that Thorsby is among the growing little towns of this section of the state comes forth. Dr. F. J. Lee, physician, has recently located in Thorsby, where, although he has been there only a short time, he is becoming well known in that section

Dr. Lee comes to Thorsby from Birmingham where he has had fourteen years of active practice and from where he comes well recommended. Dr. Lee does a general practice. His office is located in the building formerly occupied by the office of the Alabama Power Company, on the street south of the Bank of Thorsby. The interior of the building has been remodeled to suit the needs of Dr. Lee.

He stated to a representative of the News that he will eventually move his family to Thorsby from Birmingham and make his home there.

LOCAL DISPLAY WINDOW GETS SPECIAL NOTICE

Window Of Clanton Building Supply Co., Photogaphed For Hardware Magazine

The Belknap Hardware Company recently sent a photographer from Yearger's Studio, Montevallo, to Clanton for the purpose of taking a picture of a Window Display at the Clanton Building Supply Company, which has been attracting attention here for some time, due to its unique arrangement and purpose.

The window contained numerous articles of hardware, most of these suspended from the ceiling of the window. The local hardware store put on a guessing contest for the nearest correct guess as to the total weight of all the articles in the display. The window was very attractive as well as effective.

It is understood that the company having the photograph made will use it for publication in various hardware magazines in the very near future. The comments from the concern having this done were very complimentary to the Clanton Building Supply Company. The window is not at present displayed, as a new display has been arranged in its place.

Mr. Earl Vinson, age 18, was burned to death last Wednesday, April 22, in the home of B. Dukes, near Poplar Springs. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Newt Vinson of our community. He was laid to rest Thursday at 11 a.m. at Maple Springs. Rev. A. C. Nelsou officiated. Martin of Clanton was in charge of the body. He leaves to mourn his death a father and mother, one brother, Mr. Julius Vinson, of Montgomery, one sister, Mrs. Elva Mims of Eastview, besides a host of relatives and friends.

We had a real good singing Sunday evening. We were glad to have with us some visiting singers from Corinth, and Montgomery. We welcome them back at any future time.

Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Nelson motored to Mt. Springs Saturday where he conducted services Sunday.

There will be a working at the church next Thursday a.m. for the purpose of planting the plot of ground to be cultivated by the church. Anyone wishing to help is invited to come with mule and planter, plow, or fertilizer distributor.

Mr. Newt Vinson is sick with flu. We hope he will soon be well again.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Coggins were the Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dobbs.

Miss Birtie Patterson visited Miss Maudie Ree Traywick Sunday.

Mrs. Alva Patterson was the guest of Mrs. Veda Glenn Sunday.

Mr. Jimmie Williams visited his brother, Willie, Sunday.

Mrs. Sallie Strength spent Saturday night with her brother, Mr. Jim Rushing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Mims were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mims Sunday evening.

Mr. Julius Vinson of Montgomery is spending this week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Newt Vinson.

The Christian Endeavor rendered a good program Sunday night after which the pastor preached a sermon.

The C. E. was conducted by Miss Catherine Strength.

The Ladies Aid will meet next Thursday evening at Mrs. Lola Mae Nelson's. All the ladies of the community are invited to meet and unite with us.

Mr. S. P. Smith and family were the all-day guests of Mr. O. D. Deloach and family of Clanton Sunday.

Come to Sunday school next Sunday and worship with us.

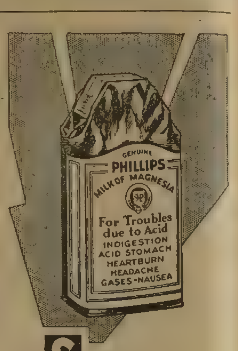
With Spring here in its beauty, how can you remain away from God's house on the Sabbath Day? We have a place for all who do not worship elsewhere. Come thou with us and we will do thee good.

Sunday school at 9:45 A. M. We have a class for all ages and grades. Snap out of that lazy indifferent feeling on Sunday morning. Come to Sunday school and church.

Preaching by the pastor at 11 A. M and at 7:30 P. M. Our congregations are growing, but we are not satisfied The more we have the more we want Our aim is to do you good.

Prayer service each Wednesday night at 7:30.

Be honest, when you stay away from church on Sunday, do you want your family to do as you have done? Set an example of church loyalty. If churches are worth having, they are worth having for all. Everybody ... church is our program.



SOUR STOMACH

JUST a tasteless dose of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes.

But don't depend on crude methods, try the best way yet evolved in all the years of searching. That is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind that the physicians prescribe.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Clanton Building Supply Company Secures Agency For Widely Advertised Make of Automobile Tires; Using Advertising Space In News

The Clanton Building Supply Company is announcing this week that they have secured the agency in Clanton for the well known India automobile tires and tubes. In commenting on these items, Mr. J. D. Rockett said, "We are glad that we are able to offer the people of this county these tires, because it is now possible for automobile owners to buy these tires at home, and yet we are able to meet the prices of mail-order houses, at the same time the buyer can see the tire he is buying at our store. It was with pleasure that we found this could be done. We have made a thorough investigation of the India tires and found that we are also able to guarantee them in such a way that it is pleasing to the customer."

In this week's issue of the News, the Clanton Building Supply Company is using space to advertise the India tires and tubes. They have an attractive window display at their large store here on India tires also. There is quite a large amount of money sent away from this county to mail-order houses for tires and tubes, and now the buyer of an automobile tire who sends his money away for tires, should investigate in Clanton before sending his order off. Mr. Rockett stated they would be glad to show anyone why they are able to offer these tires at such low prices.

Scout Jamboree To Be Held May 1

Auburn, Ala., April 29.—The annual Scoutcraft Jamboree held at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute will be staged on Drake Field, May 1, with approximately two hundred scouts attending from the Central Alabama Area Council.

The day's activities of varied contests will come to a climax at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon when President Bradford Knapp of Auburn will present the awards. By special wire arrangement, this feature will be broadcast over Alabama from Station WAPI in Birmingham direct from Drake Field.

Scouts will attend from Lee, Macon, Clay, Coosa, Chilton, Dallas, Lowndes, Wilcox, Tallapoosa, Russel, Butler, and Elmore counties. For many years previous to 1930 Troop 2 of Opelika has been the jamboree winner, but Troop 9 of Tallapoosa took the prize last year.

The jamboree will include a general inspection of all troops, and contests in archery, rescue race, scout window displays, water boiling, first aid, morse signalling, fire by friction, and tower building.

At noon the Scouts will be guests of the college at a barbecue luncheon held at the local scout headquarters near Drake Field. They will be entertained by the local theatre with the showing of a picture.

MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL NEWS

School closed at Mt. Pleasant last Friday, April 24. There were eight Junior Three pupils who finished the course of study offered in Junior Three work. They were the following boys: Renfro Price, Grady Miner, Woodrow Price, Lawson Bell; girls: Eunice Holley, Julia Edwards, Luettie Cooper, Vera Jones.

Dr. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the Clanton Methodist Church, delivered the address to the graduating class. His subject was, "Reliable Men and Women," and was delivered in a most highly pleasing manner.

Prof Warr, from the Chilton County High School was present, and also gave an inspirational talk to the class, touching on the subject of, "The Purpose and Object of Education."

The exercises were held Friday morning at ten o'clock in the large Junior High Classroom. A large number of the patrons were present.

The following day, Saturday, the Mt. Pleasant School went on their Annual Picnic. This year it was given at Log Cabin Beach, below Mitchell Dam; 109 pupils from the school, besides a good number of parents and young people, not members in school were present.

The members of the faculty were present, those being the principal, R. B. Johnson, Miss Mildred Raney, the primary instructor and Miss Littlejohn, the sixth grade teacher.

Among the forms of amusement were boat-riding, games for the little folks, kodaking, swimming, flower gathering, music, etc. Everyone seemed to enjoy the day. No accidents or misfortune came to a single one. The day was fair and warm making it ideal for picnickers.

My Experiences in the World War

By General John J. Pershing

Copyright, 1931, in all countries by the North American Newspaper Alliance. World rights reserved, including the Scandinavian. Reproduction in whole or part prohibited. W. N. U. Service

At the luncheon there were several general officers, among whom was Maj. Gen. Franchet d'Esperey, then in command of a group of armies under Petain. He was considered one of the ablest and most aggressive officers in the French army and was very popular with his men.

As we wished to get a glimpse of the actual front he took us by motor as near as possible without drawing the fire of the enemy's artillery, although at that time there was little activity on that part of the front. The point of observation that we reached was opposite St. Quentin, which was then within the enemy's lines, and which was later near the center of the great German drive of 1918 against the British.

On the return trip the chauffeur, after being cautioned several times, continued to drive at a somewhat dangerous speed, which so exasperated the general that he finally threatened the chauffeur with violence, whereupon the speed was greatly reduced.

CHAPTER VI

As soon as the formalities incident to our arrival in Paris were over—and I made them brief as possible—we got down to work, as it was urgent that we should begin at once to lay the foundation for the development and employment of the American army.

To expedite handling the many questions that must arise, especially in our relations with the French war office, which controlled practically all industrial facilities and transportation, it was War Minister Paul Painleve's idea that there should be a group of French officers placed at our disposal.

Marshal Joffre was designated as head of this liasion group. The instructions received by Marshal Joffre from the minister of war were transmitted to me in a polite note. Naturally, it was pleasing to think of being associated with Marshal Joffre, but I thought the adoption of the plan at this time would only add an extra channel through which requests must pass and that this would complicate rather than simplify matters.

The scheme indicated that a sort of tutelage was contemplated, which also made it objectionable.

In my opinion, it would be more expeditious to utilize the French officers on duty at my headquarters and develop a workable system through experience. I explained my views to M. Painleve and readily arranged for the officers of our supply department to confer directly with the chiefs of the coresponding bureaus of the French organization. But this was only the beginning and we soon found that we had much to learn of the difficulties of dealing with French bureaus, either directly or indirectly.

There was no question that under the great enthusiasm the afternoon of our arrival there existed serious despondency among all classes. The terrible strain of the previous years of continuous fighting, with heavy losses, was telling against both the French and the British. Temporary success in different theaters of war had brought small comforts, followed as they had been all too frequently by disastrous reverses.

With actual conditions in mind, one could fully understand why the allies had been so insistent that a contingent of American troops be immediately sent to France to bolster their morale. While not yet prepared to do any fighting, we could and did furnish men for service behind the lines. We also provided raw material and certain manufactured supplies as rapidly as possible and financial aid without stint.

U. S. Inaction Shows Effect.

The more serious the situation in France, the more deplorable the loss of time by our inaction at home appeared. It is true that a committee at the war college in February had presented a brief outline report on the organization of a limited force, yet no comprehensive general plan had been considered for the formation or employment of such a force, much less for a larger one.

It was finally decided we should use the ports of Bordeaux and St. Nazaire. It was likewise estimated that the rail lines leading to the Lorraine sector, with collateral routes available, could be improved to meet our needs.

Then it became necessary to determine the sector where our forces, fighting as a unit, would be most effective. After lengthy study and consultation with allied leaders it was logical to conclude that from the purely military standpoint the employment of the American armies on the Lorraine front would prove the most beneficial. In conference with General Petain, who had reached the same conclusion, the decison was made accordingly.

It was necessary to have a particular sector in mind to plan definitely and construct requisite rail and distributing facilities. It was tentatively understood between General Petain and myself that the American sector should include the St. Mihiel salient. I suggested that the first American offensive would naturally be its reduction. He fully agreed.

Place of Red Cross Decided.

Maj. Grayson M. P. Murphy, head of the Red Cross in France, and his assistant, James H. Perkins, called at my headquarters June 17 to discuss co-operation with the army. It was decided the Red Cross could best handle its work if given a semiofficial status, so Major Murphy was attached to my headquarters.

It was the French situation that gave me the gravest concern. Pacifist sentiment was prevalent in France and in many quarters there was talk of a peace parley. This pessimistic and despondent mood of the people further depressed the morale of their armies as men at the front contemplated another winter of suffering and distress for their families.

To help meet these conditions I suggested to Major Murphy that the first task of the Red Cross should be to aid needy French people. As a result he and Perkins proposed that funds be distributed to soldiers' families wherever necessary.

When the idea was presented to General Petain he expressed the keenest appreciation and at once undertook through his military organization to obtain the necessary data. The Red Cross arranged to make 5,000,000 francs (nearly $1,000,000) available to be distributed by local charitable agencies as rapidly as the information could be furnished as to where funds should be sent.

Sees First Troops Arrive.

I went to St. Nazaire June 28 to meet the advance elements of the first division and inspect the port.

The first section of the first division convoy had brought to St. Nazaire the headquarters, the Sixteenth infantry, two battalions of the Twenty-eighth infantry, one battalion of the Fifth marines and some motor transport troops and stevedores. To see the naval vessels and transports flying the American flag in the harbor gave us all a thrill of pride. It was a pleasure to meet the naval commander, Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, who was to have general charge of the convoy system.

The regiments of the division had all served under my command at one time or another. They were now, however, composed of a large percentage of recruits and would have to go through a long period of training. After a few days spent in the cantonment at St. Nazaire the infantry of the division was sent to the training area of Gondrecourt, north of Neufchateau, and the artillery to Valdahon, near Belfort.

Arrival "Tipped Off."

Maj. Gen. William L. Sibert, who had won distinction as an engineer in the construction of the Panama canal, was in command of the first division.

The two infantry brigades were commanded by Brig. Gens. R. L. Bullard and Omar Bundy, both of whom had many years of line service behind them. I had known all three of the general officers, as we were cadets together at the academy, although all belonged to classes ahead of mine.

It had been arranged that the regulations restricting reference to the allied armies by the press should apply to the American forces. But to my utter surprise the French and British papers, in their eagerness to let their people know that the elements of the American army had really reached France, carried full accounts of the arrival of this convoy, giving the port of debarkation, the designation of units and the number of men.

Tighten on Censorship.

The publication of this piece of news was in open contravention of the censorship rules and called for immediate steps to prevent further infractions. My vigorous protest resulted in our placing in the French press bureau an American representative, to whom all matter regarding our army was to be submitted for approval.

There is no doubt, however, that the suppression of news prevented our people from obtaining a clear and contemporaneous conception of the great and often brilliant achievements of our armies and left such knowledge to be gleaned from menger accounts by participants or from the later writing of historians. It was unfortunate that such rules had to be enforced, as otherwise much that might have been published at the time may never be known, but there was nothing else to be done without serious risk.

CHAPTER VII

As the French authorities wished to honor our national holiday they requested that some of our troops parade in Paris July 4, 1917. We were not prepared to make much of a military impression, as our men were largely recruits. But to stimulate morale the French wanted to demonstrate that the Americans were actually coming, so a battalion of the Sixteenth infantry was brought up from Saint Nazaire.

The untrained, awkward appearance of this unit, which was accepted as the cream of our regular army by the French officials, no doubt tended to confirm their belief that it would be some time before we should be able to organize an effective army.

If they could have foreseen the triumph of this same battalion at the peak of the great counter-offensive on the field of Soissons just one year later we might have been spared many delays and difficulties in carrying out our plans.

Troops Bring Joy to French.

Nevertheless, the first appearance of American combat troops in Paris brought joyful acclaim from the people. On the march the battalion was accompanied by a great crowd, many women forcing their way into the ranks and swinging along arm in arm with the men. With wreaths about their necks and flowers in their hats and on their rifles, the column had the appearance of a moving flower garden.

With only a semblance of military formation the animated throng pushed its way through avenues of people to the martial strains of the French band and the still more thrilling music of cheering voices. Many dropped on their knees in reverence as the column went by.

The battalion marched to the cemetery where the tomb of Lafayette is located. The ceremony there consisted of a few speeches, the principal speaker being Brand Whitlock, our ambassador to Belgium. I had been asked to deliver an address but had designated Col. C. E. Stanton of my staff, an old army friend and something of an orator, to speak in my place. However, I was prevailed upon to speak extemporaneously.

"Lafayette, We Are Here!"

It was on this occasion that utterance was given to an expression that could be born only of inspiration, one that will live long in history: "Lafayette, we are here!"

Many have attributed this striking utterance to me, and I have often wished it could have been mine. But I have no recollection of saying anything so splendid. I am sure those words were spoken by Colonel Stanton, and to him must go the credit for so happy and felicitous a phrase.

The parade of our troops through Paris doubtless fortified the morale of the people to a certain extent, but we all knew that eventually something very much more effective would have to be done.

The real question was whether the allies could hold out until we were ready. It was clear that no halfway measures on our part would answer and that allied hopes lay in American military assistance on a vast scale at the earliest moment.

Cables for 1,000,000 Men.

The allies thought an American force of 500,000 men the maximum that we could have in France in 1918, but in my opinion that would not be enough to meet the situation. If we could have had half a million fighting men in France in the early spring it would have been a different matter.

But looking ahead it was necessary to allow from 35 to 40 per cent for the services of supply, which would leave out of this number only approximately 300,000 fighting troops. Although this would aid, we could not be content merely to lend a helping hand but must prepare to strike a decisive blow.

While the appearance on the front of any American force was still months away, yet there was little doubt that if we could induce allied co-operation we should be able to give much greater assistance than they believed possible. Our study having confirmed the correctness of my tentative estimate made on the Baltic, I therefore called Washington, July 6, as follows:

"Plans should contemplate sending over at least 1,000,000 men by next May. . . . This estimate would give practically half million men for trenches. Inasmuch as question affects all allies whose common interests demand that we exert maximum military power consistent with transport problem, suggest early agreement be reached among allies which would provide requisite transportation . . . and limit sea transportation to food and military supplies and the exclusion of every kind of luxury as well as other supplies in excess of immediate needs of countries dependent upon oversea supplies."

Question of Transportation.

The question was, therefore, one of sea transportation, but so far all efforts to get the allies, especially the British, to consider giving help to bring over men and supplies had been futile. They did not seem to realize that America would be practically negligible from a military standpoint unless they could provide some shipping. Nor did they seem to appreciate that time was a vital factor.

But the spirit of full co-operation among the allies did not then exist. They seemed to regard the transportation of an American army overseas as no concern of theirs. This apparent indifference also gave further color to the suspicion that perhaps after all an American army as such was not wanted. The situation from our standpoint was grave and embarrassing, for it looked as though it might not be necessary for us to save either the allies or ourselves.

An entry in my diary notes: "Two of the Roosevelt boys, Theodore, Jr., and Archie, reported. Unable to participate himself, their father's fine spirit is represented by his sons."

CHAPTER VIII

As the details of our mission abroad developed it soon became evident that in all that pertained to the maintenance and supply of our armies as distinguished from the purely military task, men with expert knowledge and broad experience in business, industry and transportation would be needed.

In the technical branches of the army there were many officers with theoretical training in special lines, but with some notable exceptions they generally lacked broad constructive or administrative experience. From the very start I determined to obtain the best talent available, and was fortunate in practically every field to find able men who were anxious to do their part.

The earliest application of the principle was in connection with timber and lumber procurement. The call for lumber would be enormous, and since it would be impossible with our limited tonnage to bring a great quantity across the Atlantic, most of it would have to be obtained in Europe.

A cable to the War department early in July, 1917, recommended the immediate organization of a forestry service, consisting of sawmill units, to be composed of experienced lumbermen and 8,000 to 10,000 unskilled laborers to build roads and transport lumber. Special request was made for the appointment of Prof. Henry Graves, chief of the United States forestry service, who was then on the ground, as the man to take charge of this service. A number of other specially qualified men were requested as we entered the task of building up the supply service, but as this was the first intimation given to the War department that such a force would be needed naturally it was some time before it was actually at work.

THE PASSING AWAY OF MISS RUBY DAVIS

Ruby Davis was shot and instantly killed on Saturday night, April 4th, 1931 by Collier Goodson.

She was attending school at Talladega, Ala., where her brothers are located in business, and had returned home to spend the Easter holidays with her mother and home folks.

Ruby was a kind, loving young lady. She was 17 years old. She gained the friendship of everyone she met or knew. She was very kind and considerate of her mother and brothers and sisters, or anyone else in time of need.

The idea of this sweet one, begging to come back home once more to see mother, and perhaps kiss her good-bye again as she did before leaving her home, to see her sister, Pauline, at Clanton, Ala., and the last time returning was sweeter than ever before. She arrived at home about ten o'clock Sunday morning and was laid to rest at Mt. Pisgah cemetery April 6th, Martin in charge of the body.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Gipson and prayer by Rev. Ezell.

It greatly grieved us all to hear of the passing on of this sweet one. She was so wonderful in all her loving ways and thoughts, that her good works commenced here will continue to grow and remain a loving monument to her virtues and beauty.

She leaves her mother and four brothers, Augusta, Luther, Stanley and Baker, and two loving sisters, Bernice and Pauline, a host of other relatives and friends are left to mourn her.

May the One who comforts and sustains all be ever with them through this vale of tears. The sweet spirit of Ruby on April 4th found its way into the portals of heaven, and into the presence of her Saviour and loved ones who were waiting to welcome her soul to its heavenly home.

We miss her, oh, so much. But she is transplanted to a more glorious home there to await the coming of those she loved and who loved her

The beaconed angels kissed the loving eyes of her and closed the white fringed keeper.

This precious one is now at rest. God keep the silent sleeper. But let's not think of her death—just waiting over yonder; in that fair and happy land with loving hands to welcome us there.

We'll see her sweet smiles again some day on that eternal shore where there will be no more parting and no tears to be shed for she has gone on to meet her loving father and dwell with him forever more. Weep not, dear Ruby, for we'll meet you by and by.

—A Loving Friend of Ruby, Alice Williams.

Going Back To The Farm

We have been hearing for many years about the movement from the farm to the village and the city. Commentators who have let their imaginations roam have pictured a future civilization for America in which there will be no rural life at all. Everybody will live in cities, and food will be produced by chemical processes in factories to which these city dwellers will go every day to work. Light and sunshine and ventilation and exercise and all of the other essentials of health will be provided, according to these dreamers, by artificial means devised by engineers.

As a matter of cold fact, it turns out that the tide of migration from the farm to the municipality has been slackening for many years, and now has definitely turned in the other direction. For the first time in twenty years the records of the United States Department of Agriculture show that there was a gain in farm population during 1930. There are 208,000 more people living on the farms than there were a year ago. One reason for this is that life on the farm is more comfortable and less strenuous than it used to be. The average farmer is no longer isolated from the world. Most farms today have electric light and power, access to communities in every direction over good roads, and automobiles with which to go to town to see the movies or take part in social gatherings. Most of the farmers who haven't already got radio sets will soon have them, while the telephone, now almost universal, brings the whole country within speaking distance.

The commercial farmer—the farmer who makes a business of farming—has been affected by the present wave of economic depression even more than the manufacturer. But the great majority of small farmers, with whom life on the farm is more a mode of living than it is an industry, are the people of America who have suffered least by reason of the economic slump. The drought, to be sure, has hit hundreds of thousands of these, but the drought hasn't been universal, and in the sections where nature has not interfered there seems to be little doubt that the greatest security and contentment to be found anywhere in the United States is found on the nation's one-family farms.

That sense of security, of having a piece of solid ground under one's feet from which at least a living can be obtained by whoever is willing to work, is doubtless the reason why, in a season of widespread industrial unemployment, there has been what amounts to a rush of migration back to the farm. And it seems to us that the unemployed industrial workers who have removed themselves and their families from the congested industrial centers to the healthful security of the farm, have displayed a high degree of prudence and intelligence.

Business Is Better

Careful inquiry at the retail stores along Capitol Street brings the conviction that prosperity is on the way, if it has not actually returned.

At least ten per cent of the male population, according to haberdashers, has been able to buy new straw hats.

One store reports the sale of a pair of knickers and several golf sticks to a newly-elected member of the Country Club.

At the University Club the young lawyers no longer order two luncheons to be served to four people.

A filling station employee says only a few motorists act like they were trying to wean their engines.

A Ford owner actually chugged up Sunday afternoon and said, "Fill 'er up; I don't give a damn for expense."

Kress and Woolworth stores report a sharp decline in sales of bridge game prizes. Evidently the wimmen folks are buying 'em at costlier establishments.

Only this morning an automobile whizzed around the corner on Capitol and President with two spare tires on the rack, one of them new.

Bootleggers say that customers can no longer ask, "Haven't you got a cheaper quality?"

The custom of getting a haircut at least once per month has been resumed in the best social circles by both men and women.

A report to Mayor Scott from the street cleaning department says that cigar butts found in the gutters are not as short as those of sixty days ago.

Fewer members of the Rotary, Kiwanis, and Lions clubs sit on the sidelines during the weekly luncheon, claiming that doctors have ordered them to diet.

You can get on a street car anywhere in town and drop a penny in the aisle without creating a panic.

Indications are that hotel bellhops will be able to get new Summer uniforms by next Autumn.

A woman walked into a chain grocery store this morning and ordered a double porterhouse steak. The butcher looked groggy, but he did not faint.

Radio dealers report an increasing number of prospects who express willingness to make the first payment.

There has been a noticeable decrease in the number of persons who shop around before buying razor blades.

Winter suits are being placed in moth balls without first being dry cleaned, but laundry agents had a very fair business in wash suits last week.

All in all, it looks like we are gradually working our way towards what Warren G. Harding called "a return to normalcy."—Jackson Daily News.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"Why should I say the world is gray,
Because it is gray to me?
There's some who think it's bright
And just as rosy as can be.

Why should I gloom when blossoms bloom
For others that I know?
Have I the right to scorn and spite
The whole blamed flower show?

What if I have no friend to lend
A hand across the space.
That does not mean this earthly green
Is not a friendly place.

Do blind men doubt a sky's above
Because its blue seems black?
Do deaf men swear at those who hear
The thunder rolling back?

Must I confess that happiness
Has passed the whole world by,
Because it shuns of all the ones
This little one called I?"

* * * *

For this column to be interesting, it must have a bit of something like the above now and then, from yours truly. Nope, that doesn't mean I'm IT, altogether, although sometimes I do think I am.

* * * *

In my opinion, after passing judgment, the Kiwanis Minstrel last Thursday night was a success, all around, and I believe those who saw it will agree. It is perfectly natural that the things sponsored by the Clanton Kiwanis Club are worthwhile.

* * * *

Sometimes I get pretty sore at some officials round about. Seems to me like everyone is afraid to do anything, for fear it may not click with the other fellow. How in the dickens do you ever expect to get anywhere like that? I sometimes wonder if some men are minus a backbone, or the one they have is like so much rubber. Most anything that is worthwhile, takes a leader to carry it on, and yet when something in the way of improvement is mentioned in some circles each fellow is afraid to start anything. Even if you fail, that is better than NOT having tried at all. I can see two or three leaders in the making already round Clanton, and some of these days they are going to make things hum or something.

* * * *

Clanton's really first murder trial in a long time sure brought out the spectators last week. People of all classes were pushing and turning to get seats at the courthouse to hear that trial, and yet there really wasn't anything sensational about it, unless maybe, it was Winston Huddleston's speech to the jury, or the one by Hon. G. C. Walker. Some ladies who like to weep for the pleasure could have had a splendid flow of tears if they had heard these two men. Farmers—farmerettes—doctors—lawyers—merchants—mothers—near-mothers—fathers—sons—daughters—social lions—social lionesses—gossipers—teachers—and I have no idea of the varied assortment of folks who crowded into the courtroom morning and afternoon for that trial. Funny things, these humans.

I'M WONDERING—

Just how naked is "naked as a jay bird."

At what age a jay-bird puts on its cloak of feathers to keep from being naked.

Whether jay birds are embarrassed when they are naked.

Just how drunk is "drunk as a boiled owl."

Whether boiled owls are ever drunk.

Who has ever seen a boiled owl.

Why would one want to boil an owl.

What is one supposed to say when a person asks, "Whatcha say?"

Why I received two letters the other day from the little blond teacher.

Why one was in one type of handwriting and one in another.

Why some people stay up so late in Clanton.

Why some people are so snooty.

What it is a certain young lady said she'd tell me sometime.

What man registered as Joseph Anderson and wife at a certain city hotel.

Why bring that up.

What has become of B. Fair and A. Resenter.

Who took that shower bath on top of a building.

Why someone doesn't put up a big dance hall and ball room in or near Clanton.

Who would take it in if someone did.

When my little red-head is going to become friendly again.

Who wrote me that letter saying this is the best column going, and forgot to sign a name.

Why the ed was late coming to work the other morning.

Why a certain young man said what he did to a certain lady on the corner last Friday afternoon.

Why his plans failed to be carried out as he expected.

Isn't that just too bad.

What I will wonder next.

Here's a clipping from The Birmingham Post, that I am passing on to you this week. I think it is good:

The Home Town Paper

"The more we read the newspapers published in the smaller cities and rural communities of Alabama, the more convinced we are that they deserve the support not only of the citizens of their own vicinity, but the support of their former readers who have left for larger cities.

"The pages of the country newspapers are like letters from home, interesting, refreshing and vitally important to those who have cut home ties.

"Their editorials alone are worth the price of subscription. The fact that the editor in the smaller town and city is more intimately in contact with his readers brings forth editorials far more pertinent to the topic of the day than most of those vapid diatribes published in metropolitan dailies.

"The citizen who refuses to subscribe for his community newspaper in Alabama brings to our mind the picture of the ostrich burying its head in the sand because it would rather hide from the facts in life than face them courageously."

Letters To The Editor

A LETTER FROM SECRETARY OF STATE

Editor Chilton County News,
Clanton, Ala.

When informing Mr. Feagin of my reasons for declining the services of the flying squadron I asked him to advise why he declined to appoint the competent clerks I requested, preferring to substitute therefor ladies who, however competent they may be, had no knowledge whatever of this office, one of whom I had not met. I also asked him how he arrived at the conclusion that I needed fewer clerks than requested without any investigation whatever. In replying he ignored these requests, and merely informed me that the two clerks of his selection were still available for duty in my office.

There is no more economy in sending me these ladies who are entirely unfamiliar with my office instead of those I requested who had long served therein, than there was in tying up checks I hold estimated to total $150,000, interest on which would have paid the salaries of all necessary clerks, while the State borrows money at 4½% and the City of Birmingham pays 2.95%.

I have more than a hundred unanswered letters, which are quite critical of Governor Miller and Mr. Feagin. I believe the people of Alabama will back my contention that replies to these letters should not be dictated to a lady loyal only to them, and that she should not handle money for which I am under bond. Not that I have any objection whatever to these gentlemen knowing my opinion of them, which is, I think becoming rather general, but before I would participate in such a base betrayal of my friends, their critics, I would permit the severance of my right arm.

Mr. Feagin and Governor Miller, in attempting to destroy this office because I happened to have been elected to it, undoubtedly overlook the fact that it does not belong to me personally. While it is more nearly mine than theirs, it belongs to the people of Alabama, who have merely said that I should run it for four years. It is the people of Alabama who are suffering from their determination that I not be permitted to properly do so. Nor do I believe that the members of the Legislature will shirk the duty resting squarely on their shoulders to permit the functioning of this office for the people. They know it can not do so with the clerical force provided in 1907, as admitted by Feagin in offering me clerks of his selection. In insisting that it be permitted to function while I hold it, I, therefore, feel that I am doing so in the name of the people of this State on whose side I will always be found in any public question. As between Democracy and Autocracy I unalterably take my stand for the former. We have labored under this handicap during more than one-sixteenth of my term already and our only hope for a "square deal" is in legislative relief. The great majority of our citizens believe in fair play, and I request all those who agree with my position that they are entitled to service, whether the Feagin-Miller administration likes the Secretary of State or not, to insistently communicate their desires to their Senators and Legislators during the next few weeks.

ABOUT THE GOODSON TRIAL

Editor, Chilton County News,
Clanton, Ala.,
Dear Editor:

I wish to correct an error in the report of the trial of Collier Goodson on April 22.

When the boy's mother, Mrs. Ezekiel Goodson, Sr., was on the stand and was near collapse, Huddleston asked her if the boy had at any time become violent and fought her. She informed him that he had at one time pulled her hair. Later he asked her if Collier had written to her while he was away from home. She told him that he had frequently done so and she attempted to tell that he had recently written to her that he had made up his mind to live a better life and wanted her to pray for him. Before she finished what she intended to say, Huddleston, finished it for her. He "framed up" the entire speech, something like this, "Yes, the young man was a bad, ugly boy, would at times pull his mother's hair. Then he came up here to live and wrote to her, asking her to forgive him for being such a bad ugly boy, that he was sorry and would try to live a better life." He also tried to make the impression that Collier left home in a rage of temper. This positively is not true. When he first came to this community about three and one-half years ago, he came to our home to live, because father was in need of an employee and asked him to come.

It is a fact that he often wrote to his mother but not to ask for forgiveness for anything.

When he was a child he and a brother were engaged in a fight and when mother interefered he pulled her hair, but that mother didn't wait until he was a grown young man to forgive him. As for his being a mean, rough boy, since he has grown up there is not a word of it true. He had uttermost respect for that mother and his character was notable, until this crime he recently committed.

Thanks for this space.

Soy Beans Will Make Hay This Year

By County Agent Stapp

It will soon be time to plant soybeans for hay. A large number of farmers over the county made splendid yields of hay from soybeans last year.

Mr. L. G. Posey, west of Jemison, reports that on 12 acres last year he baled 165 bales of oat hay, averaging about 100 pounds to the bale, and that he followed his oats with soy beans and put up 214 bales of soy bean hay that averaged 65 pounds to the bale. Mr. Posey plants about one peck of soy beans to the acre and has bought four bushels of soy beans to plant this year. Mr. G. A. Plier of the Mineral Springs Community, planted one gallon of O-Too-Tan soy beans for hay last year and saved three good, two-horse wagon loads of hay from them. He says his mules quit eating corn to eat the soy bean hay.

One of the club boys last year reported 14 large two-horse wagon loads of hay saved from two acres of soybeans

Mr. O. R. Robinson, east of Clanton, says that he has never had any land to turn out as high quality hay as he got from a piece of land planted to soy beans last year.

The Experiment Station recommends O-Too-Tan and Laredo soybeans for hay and Mammoth Yellow soybeans for grazing with hogs. Let's make an effort this year to grow plenty of hay for every head of livestock in the County

IN MEMORY OF OUR DARLING CHILD, OLLIEDELLE PENTON

The first link in our sweet little home was taken when the good Lord came and got little Olliedelle, the 24th of March, 1931. She was three years and nine months old. She was sick almost two weeks. We tried to keep her, but could not. She had to leave us and go to a better world where there won't be any pain nor sorrow any more. We sure did hate to give her up. But God needed her to sing for Him. She left mamma and daddy and sister with a broken heart forever. Oh! how we did hate to give our darling child up, but I know where to go to find her, for she is in Heaven singing praises to God. Oh! Lord, how can we live without her. Her little chair and plate and everything sits vacant. She can't ever call daddy any more.

She was so sweet and pretty for her little hair reached her shoulders and had a perfect doll face. She weighed 38 pounds and did talk so sweet. She could sing and keep time to music so pretty. She often told me what would I do without her. She said she was company to me while Willodean went to school. She would always tell us good night and kiss us before retiring. Now I can't hear her little voice, never any more. She loved us so good and she can't ever ask mamma for something to eat anymore. Oh! Lord, how can I live without her. Little Willodean is so lonesome without her too.

We sure do thank all of our good friends for their kindness and help. May God bless me and my little family. I pray that we can meet our darling child in Heaven some time, and won't that be a happy meeting. May God bless my dear old father and mother and our sisters and brothers and good friends. I pray that they will be blessed too.

She would often talk about dying. She said she would have to leave me. I didn't think it was so near the time. Now, Oh! God forgive me for everything that wasn't pleasing to You that I may live right and meet my sweet child sometime. May the Lord bless me in my weak bad health.

Hear my prayer, O Lord, and let me cry, come unto Thee, hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble. Incline Thine ear unto me in the day when I call. Answer me speedily, I pray, I may walk the right way and meet Thy shining face sometime.

I close with a sad heart, from its father and mother and sister.

JEMISON HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Department of Vocational Agriculture

The Vocational students have gathered 20,000 big stem potato plants off of the two flue-heated beds at the school house. Also several thousand tomato plants. These beds were built to serve as a model in this community. They have proved highly successful. Numbers of farmers have visited them. If the big stem jersey potato enterprise proves successful this season there will no doubt be a number of flue heated beds built next year.

The boys in Horticulture have sprayed a number of orchards lately. More emphasis is being laid each year to the teaching of the control of insects and fungous disease of the orchard, garden and truck crops. The interest in spraying fruit trees is growing in this section. The department of vocational agriculture keeps on hand a supply of spray materials for the convenience of the farmers.

The vocational boys have just finished making twelve screen windows for the home economics department. These screens extend the entire distance of the windows and are hinged at the top.

The boys taking field crops have just completed their four year project outlines. The desire of the vocational teacher is that each boy plan to have continuation projects as much so as possible. The field crop boys are now sharpening scooter plows and scrapes in the shop. The sharpening of scooter plows and scrapes is not so difficult but the setting of a scrape is difficult and they have not yet mastered that practice.

The students in vocational agriculture have had some very practical experience lately in working on the bus body building that has just been constructed on the campus. It would be fortunate if the vocational boys had an opportunity every year to do carpentry work on some frame building.

The purpose of the department of vocational agriculture is to teach a practical course in agriculture. Any constructive suggestions from parents or interested individuals will be appreciated by the teacher.

MR. AND MRS. LUTHER LITTLE MOVED TO KIMBERLY, ALA.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Little, who have been residing in Maplesville, left this week for Kimberly, Ala., where they will make their home for several weeks before returning to Birmingham where Mr. Little will enter Howard College and Mrs. Little will enter Birmingham-Southern College to do advanced work. Mr. Little was principal of the Stanton Junior High School and later went to Maplesville to take charge of the high school there. While in Clanton Saturday, Mr. Little had the News sent to him and Mrs. Little, and to have The Rockford Chronicle sent also, while they are away from home.

ORDER FOR PUBLICATION TO NON-RESIDENT

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Circuit Court In Equity. No. 908.
Buna Wallace Fowler, Complainant, vs.
Charlie Fowler, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of G. C. Walker that the Defendant is a non-resident, and that his place of residence and post-office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort; and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is of the age of twenty-one years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring him, the said Charlie Fowler, to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 28 day of May, 1931, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against him.

Done at office in Clanton, this 25th day of April, 1931.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

I was in a community not long since where a man had passed through. He spent several days in that community fixing cook stoves. He charged for his work and then collected for all broken parts saying that he would order them from some Hardware firm. He was able to get from five to fifteen dollars cash out of farmers where the cook stove was in bad repair. That was months ago, and that man has never been heard of since. No one ever received the parts that he claimed to order. He was one among many of the rascals who feed on the trusting public. When will we ever learn not to trust Tom, Dick and Harry as they go around with high sounding promises? They make fair promises and we cash in.

"My brother started to Sunday school but he went back home," said a young fellow to me not many Sundays ago. I asked if his brother would come on later. "Yea boy," replied the little fellow. "If he does not, he will get a whipping." I bowed my head and thanked God that there were yet a few parents who had a conviction on the question of having their children in Sunday school. There are too many parents in Chilton county who do not seem to care if their children never attended a Sunday school. They let them rove about the house when they should be on their way to God's house. If your child does not want to go to Sunday school, it becomes your duty to see that he is made to go. A little Hickory oil and a touch of elbow grease, should double the attendance at Sunday school in the most of our churches. But, let all parents first lead out by attending themselves.

While attending the graduating exercises of a nearby school I found something new under the sun. The principal of the school called upon the historian, the poet, the prophet of the class and then he called for the "grumbler." The young man arose and he let his pent up feelings grumble. For years the class had found many things to grumble about, but they dared not say a word. Now they were going out from that school and they let their grumbles grumble. The "Grumbler" is not only found in the graduating students of a Junior High School, but they are found everywhere. They are in the church, they are in the school, they are in the home, they are in the store, they are in the lodge. Old man Grumbler is on hand all the time. He grumbles about the weather, he grumbles about the hard times, he grumbles about the streets, the highway, the preacher, the school teacher. It must feel good to be a grumbler.

One day I saw a mother making a fuss over her baby. The little trick was a beauty and the mother had a right to be foolish about it. Soon after that mother had made such a fuss over her little baby, that mother's great big baby came walking in. That mother made no fuss over him. He had brought mud into the room on his shoes. He had failed to bring in wood enough to do until his return. He had left the gate open and the calf and the cow had gotten together. That mother's big baby got a scolding from start to finish. Had it ever occurred to you that many a divorce has had its beginning when a mother made a fuss over the little baby, and administered a rebuke to the big baby. It is good advice for a mother when she is instructed not to neglect that big baby in her home. If there are children in your home, do not forget to make a fuss over the father of those children.

Before coming to Clanton I saw a thing that made my blood run cold. There was a fine young man in my church. He loved the church, and he was anxious to attend Sunday school every Sunday. He wanted to attend prayer meeting on Wednesday night, but, alas, that man had married a young woman who cared but little about the church. She wanted to attend parties, she wanted to glide around on polished floors to the echo of jazz music, and she led this splendid youg fellow away from the ideals of his childhood. Soon he started to drinking. At the bar of God the blood of that young man's life will be on the hands of that giddy girl who led him astray. There is no more heart breaking condition than when a young wife holds her husband back in his spiritual life. They are like the soldiers who drove the spikes through the hands of Jesus, "They know not what they do," and they will live to sorrow over their act.

A new apparatus has just been received at Brooks Field, Texas, which materially accelerates the starting of planes not equipped with electric start-

A PETITION TO MR. HOOVER

O, mighty Hoover, who are in Washington when not fishing on the Rapidan, thy name is Hants. Thy will and the will of thy campaign contributors be done in the rest of the country as it is done in Washington.

Give us this day or daily bread—and a bowl of free soup—for our turnip greens, and when sweet potato vines are almost gone. Forgive us our debts, and if you can't forgive them, for the love of Mike help us get a job so we can pay them.

Thou knowest, O mighty Hoover, that thy subjects are a dumb bunch, so dumb that we believed your campaign promises. If we had not been so dumb, you would not be President. And since you know how dumb we are, have mercy on us, for our pockets are empty with a great emptiness—also our stomachs. Some of us voted for you in belief that you would continue our great prosperity, and behold, our prosperity has gone to the favored fellows of Smoot and Grundy. Some of us voted for you because thy handmaiden, Mabel, told the preachers and the preachers told us we would go to h— if we voted for Al Smith. So we voted for you, and the country has been in a h— of a mess ever since.

We thank thee, O mighty Hoover,, for the relief thou hast given the farmers, for thou hast relieved them of all they had except their debts and a few old clothes. We thank thee for the relief thou hast given the laboring man, for thou hast relieved him of the necessity of rising early to get to his job. We thank thee that thou hast relieved us of the annoyance of factory whistles for no factory whistles are blowing and no wheels are turning (except those in the heads of those who voted for thee).

We thank thee, O mighty Hoover, that under thy watchful care the "noble experiment" of prohibition has been made effective, for if Mrs. Willebrandt and the holy farm board were not peddling their fermentable grape juice for two bits a barrel, we couldn't buy a drink.

Thou makest us to lie down in green pastures—and eat grass with the sheep Thou leadest us by the still waters of Muscle Shoals where no wheels are turning to make a noise. Thou anointest our heads with oil—stolen from government oil lands—and we can't buy soap to wash it off because of the holy tariff.

We know, O mighty Hoover, that we are but forms of the dust and are as nothing in thy sight, for we had no money to contribute to thy campaign fund or to gamble on Wall Street. We are but dogs which eat of the crumbs that fall from our master's table. When they fall, we wag our tails; when they fall faster, we wag faster; when they don't fall at all, we wag slow until they do.

Lead us not into the temptation of high living, lest we be taken to the hospital to be coured of gout like one of thy famous supporters.

Yea, though we walk through the valley of hard times and the shadow of starvation, we wil lfear no evil, for thou art with us and hath appointed many commissions to watch over us. Thy taxgatherers pester us and thy snoopers spy upon us.

Surely the landlord and the sheriff shall follow us al lthe days of our life, and the poorhouse hath not one vacant room wherein we may die in peace.

Hear and answer us, and may the squirrels nest in our hats if we are ever fool enough to follow another Jack-o' Lantern labeled "Republican Prosperity."

So tendeth this prayer, and thank goodness "Hoover Prosperity' 'is gone and we are on the road to better times. —Southern Democrat.

Dr. Bradford Knapp To Deliver Baccalaureate Address At Chilton County High School

Clanton and surrounding community should esteem it a distinct honor to have Dr. Knapp, President of Alabama Polytechnic Institute deliver the graduating address to the Senior Class of Chilton County High School, Monday night, May 25. Dr. Knapp is known throughout the South for his broadness and depth of knowledge. He is ripe in experience, and never fails to draw packed houses wherever he speaks.

Graduating Class Of 1931

The student-body and faculty of the Chilton County High School are now beginning to make preparations for the 1931 Commencement. Much interest and enthusiasm is being manifested by everybody and we are looking forward to making this an instructive occasion for all concerned. The chief concern centers around those who on May 25 will have conferred upon them the greatest honor offered by the institution. This group is commonly termed the "Senior Class." The personnel of our present class is made up of young ladies and young gentlemen who show much promise of worth, and of whom the school will be proud.

Mrs. Stapp Presents Pictures for Highest Attendance in County

The entire student-body welcomed Mrs. Stapp to our assembly period last Friday when she presented the school with two very appropriate pictures won for the highest attendance in the County for March. We thank Mr. Moore of Moore's Cafe, Hill's Grocery Company, for donating the pictures, and Mrs. Stapp for her untiring interest and enthusiasm in making Chilton County Schools what they ought to be.

Who's Who In Junior One Class

Most dignified, Ruth Gowan; most friendly, Eloise Rasberry; most popular boy, Milton Diefenderfer; most popular girl, Celia Gerald; wittiest, Dan Sanford; best all-round, Bill Armstrong; biggest booster, Louise Boockholdt; most dependable, Mae Vinson; most beautiful girl, Margaret Connell; most handsome boy, Charles Wilson; most intellectual, Joe Hall Johnson.

Who's Who In Junior Two Class

Most intellectual, Helen Roberts; most dignified, Roselle Gentry; most friendly, Earl Gray; most popular girl, Grace Plyler; most popular boy, Phillip Nelson; wittiest, Mary Edith Jones; best all-round, Alice Petty; most beautiful girl, Roberta Marcus; most handsome boy, George Popwell; most dependable, Dixie Johnson; biggest booster, Velnor Heath.

Welcome Given To Newly Transferred Students

Our school welcomes the following new students who entered last week: From Thomas Junior High, Gertie Wilson, Myrtice Smith, Kathleen Parrish, and Osmond Glenn; from Mount Pleasant Junior High, Julia Edwards; from Concord Junior High, Howard Wyatt. All the above have already passed the County Junior High Examination, and will be admitted to senior high school next September. In the meantime, they are reviewing junior three work.

We are glad to have the following from Maplesville Junior and Senior High School: Margaret Nix, Jesse Hayes, Annie Laurie and Mary Dee Potts. These students spent last summer at Livingston State Teachers College, and are to graduate from high school this year. Work was completed through the eleventh grade at Maplesville this year.

Senior Class Play And Memorial

The annual senior play is always looked upon as a part of the commencement season. It means more than was formerly thought of. It is really the spirit of the occasion rather than the form of it.

Another side of the custom of the senior play is the volunteer movement on the part of the seniors who graduate each year to leave a memorial of some type that will be dedicated to the school by them. This year, the class plans to leave a system of lights on the two brick columns first started by the class of 1930. This will add a great deal to the attractiveness of the campus at night when it is lighted up. The class hopes also to leave an art square and some rugs for the stage.

The above expenditures will come out of the proceeds of the play. The class very urgently requests that a full house greet them on next Thursday night, May 8. This play is not only entertaining, but some good amateur talent will be seen that night. Miss Bernice Williams is coaching the play.

Junior-Senior Picnic

By Ethel Mae Jones

On last Friday night the Juniors entertained the Seniors at a delightful picnic at Log Cabin Beach. Several of the teachers were present, and the majority of the two classes.

After arriving at the place of destination large camp fires were built, and everyone gathered around them. Later on an enjoyable picnic lunch of sandwiches and drinks was served. Among the features enjoyed was a stump speech by Coach Walker. Despite the inclement weather, everyone seemed to have a most enjoyable time.

Biology And Chemistry Classes Present Program

Last Wednesday the biology and chemistry classes under the direction of Mr. Varnell, presented a combined program at the chapel hour. The first scene showed the life of Luther Burbank. This part was aptly played by James Tiffin, who was interviewed by Margaret Jones, a reporter for the New York Times. The stage was decorated with flowers and other plants to typify Mr. Burbank's famous garden.

The other scenes depicted the lives of the following famous biologists and chemists: Antonius Van Leevenhock (Clarence Fiquette), Charles Darwin (Durward Robinson), Lewis Pasteur (Warren Riggins). The entire story of each was told in the first person. A chemical experiment, that of the preparation of the valuable nitrogen gas from the air was successfully completed by Herman Harris and Homer Carroll. This program was greatly enjoyed, and was educational as well as interesting.

POISON
in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to people of all ages. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstores sell.

News from Thorsby

Miss FRANCES WILSON, Correspondent

A Russian Operetta, "Sonia" was given Saturday night by members of the Helen Keller Literary Society of the Thorsby Institute. Miss Thoroman, Music teacher at the Institute, directed the Operetta. It was one of the finest productions that have been given at the Institute. Over sixty took part in it. Katherin Foss as "Sonia" and Fred Boyd as "Pat Dunn" had the leading parts.

The Quarterly meeting of the Chilton County Associational W. M. U. was held at Sardis Church the 23rd with good attendance. Miss Wilmer Bucy, State Corresponding Secretary was present and delivered several helpful messages. The following women of Thorsby attended: Mesdames Donald Merchant, G. F. Harper, S. J. Davenport, M. E. Willis, T. L. Robinson, W. H. Raybon, J. W. Jones, Ella Hall, Leonard Lowery, and J. W. Jones. They reported a good day and brought back the attendance banner.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Jones spent the week end with Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Jones.

A Sunday School Teacher Training Class was held last week at the Baptist Church.

Miss Vivian Roebuck and Miss Mildred Lankford of Birmingham were the attractive week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gray.

It would be difficult to find a more delightful comedy than "New Brooms," the successful play written by Frank Craven and played in by him for several seasons, that will be presented here on Friday, May 8, at 7:45 o'clock by the well known Bergmann Players of New York City. The production is under the auspices of the Thorsby Institute, Lyceum Course.

"New Broom," a comedy in four acts, written and acted by Frank Craven, ran on Broadway a full season, with the reputation of being the best of the clean plays produced that year.

Father Tests Old Saw

In the story of the play there is a lovable but irascible old father whose son, just graduated from college, criticises in the management of his factory that manufactures brooms. The son advocates what he calls more up-to-date methods and quotes the old saw about a new broom speewing cleaner.

The father, really wishing his son to have a clear field and a chance to prove his theories will work out in practice, arranged with him to retire from the management of the factory, leaving the son in full charge. The father is to remain away from business for a year and during that time he is to have an allowance equal to the amount he had sent his son during his last year in college.

Enter The Girl

This arrangement is no more than completed when the daughter of an old friend of the father comes asking him to help her find employment. The father engages her as housekeeper and then the fun begins. Complications follow complications, humorous situations more funny than the last follow each other in rapid succession. Things don't go so wel lat the factory and everybody takes advantage of the young man's good nature until facing failure, he finds it necessary to adopt the strict disciplinary methods he had so strongly criticised in his father. Of course, it all ends happily and the young man finds out that new brooms won't sweep cleaner unless good common sense is used in handling them.

Admission will be by season ticket or 50c for adults: 35c for students and teachers.

May Queen To Be Crowned In Clanton Tomorrow P.M.

ald in the person of Guy Alred, who announces the arrival of the Queen. He will have as his assistants Norman Harris and Jimmie Wyatt. The heralds will be followed by the float carrying the contestants who will be dressed for the occasion. They will have as escorts, walking beside their float, the ten little girls who came in second place as candidates. James Carl Martin will carry the May Queen Crown on a satin pillow in one of the floats. In another float the high school orchestra will appear, followed by the entire group of grammar school pupils.

The parade will terminate at the courthouse where the climax of the day will be reached, the crowning of the May Queen of the grammar school. At the count up to Tuesday, this week the following candidates were in the lead: First grade, Sarah Nell Sessions; Second grade, Lillian Smith; Third grade, Anne Cordelia Smith; Fourth grade, Nell Rockett; Fifth grade, Thelma White; Sixth grade, Jane Pitts.

Concord-Billingsley

We regret to say that health is still not very good in this community this week.

A small group of Sunday School workers met and had school Sunday morning at ten o'clock. We had a very interesting subject to study, "What is True Prayer?" Our superintendent and two of the teachers were absent, but we hope to have them, and others with us next Sunday morning.

Also the Christian Endeavor program was very commendable, although there is room for improvement. We would like very much to have a larger attendance.

Miss Myrl Buzbee of Clanton Route 3 visited Miss Doris Waites during the past week end.

Mrs. W. A. Shaw and daughter, Lena Pearl, and Mrs. O. Y. Sims visited Mrs. C. D. Foshee Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fonza Williams and family Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Cowart and little daughter were the Saturday night guests of Mrs. Cowart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shaw.

Mrs. W. W. Williams spent the latter part of the past week with her daughter, Mrs. J. F. Sheppard, of Clanton.

There will be a singing here next Sunday afternoon about two o'clock. We are going to use the Stamps-Baxter books (Cheerful Chimes). All singers and listeners are invited to come and be with us.

ALABAMA THIRD IN COTTON PRODUCTION

By producing 1,472,992 bales of cotton in 1930 Alabama took third position in the list of states in the amount of cotton produced for that year, reports the Department of Agriculture and Industries. Alabama was surpassed by Texas which produced 4,029,141 bales and Georgia which produced 1,592,319 bales. Mississippi with a production of 1,464,247 bales, took fourth place.

Switzerland sends more children's shoes to the United States than does any other foreign country.

IMPROVEMENT MADE IN GRADE AND STAPLE

Of 13,730,600 bales of American upland cotton ginned during the past season, 87.1 per cent was estimated to be white in color, compared with 84.3 per cent ginned last year; 69.3 per cent was white, middling and better compared with 63.3 per cent; cotton other than white and extra white was 9.3 per cent, compared with 12.5 per cent last year, reports the United States Department of Agriculture.

From the standpoint of tenderability in settlement of contracts made subject to the U. S. cotton futures act, and analysis of the figures indicates a total of 11,621,100 bales, or 84.6 per cent tenderable, compared with 75.7 per cent tenderability in the case of cotton ginned last year. Of tenderable cotton, 10,221,100 bales or 74.4 per cent of total upland, ranged in staple from 7-8 inch to 1 1-32 inches, inclusive, and 1,400,000 bales were over 1 1-32 inches in staple.

DR. V. J. GRAGG USES LOCALLY SOLD FEED FOR FINE POULTRY

Besides being one of our most prominent physicians and surgeons, Dr. V. J. Gragg has recently become one of our most progressive poultrymen. It is real interesting to visit his place and see several different breeds of chickens and four breeds of pheasants. He has some breeds of chickens that are not found elsewhere in this section, among these are some of the finest White Giants in the South.

Dr. Gragg has some of the latest poultry equipment on the market which consists of a battery brooder of 3,200 baby chick capacity. He has grown chicks of various breeds this season that weighed 1 pound and thirteen ounces at seven weeks of age, and some White Giants that weighed 2 1-4 lbs.

Dr. and Mrs. Gragg always welcome visitors and are glad to give prices and particulars regarding any of their poultry and equipment.

Any poultryman will find it much easier and less expensive to brood chicks in one of these machines and the cost is very reasonable when chicks are fed and managed properly.

Purina Chows are fed exclusively in this brooder and are sold by J. L. Ruffin in Clanton, Ala.

CHEVROLET CO. PRESIDENT IS VISITOR HERE

W. K. Knudsen Pays Visit To Polk Bros. Motor Co., Local Chevrolet Dealers

Polk Brothers Motor Company, local Chevrolet dealers, played host to perhaps two of the most distinguished visitors Clanton has had in sometime, when W. K. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Company, and B. E. Ralston, assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Company, visited here last Sunday night.

These two men were accompanied by P. Sever, zone sales manager of Birmingham, and were traveling through the country from Detroit, Mich. The party was traveling in one of General Motors most modern automobiles, a Cadillac of the latest type.

They arrived in Clanton about seven o'clock Sunday night, stopping at Polk Brothers Motor Company for sometime, where they asked George C. Polk, W. M. Polk, and assistants questions concerning the reception the new Chevrolet car is receiving in this section. Mr. Knudsen was very much interested in knowing of any suggestions or criticisms on the new Chevrolet car, stating that they were ever on the alert to give the people a car to suit them.

They were shown through the plant of the Polk Brothers Motor Company and commented very favorably on it.

VERBENA SERVICE STATION TO ERECT GARAGE IN NEAR FUTURE

Chas. Gulledge, proprietor of the popular Verbena Service Station, at Verbena, Ala., stated this week that work is to start right away on a modern repair shop at his place.

This garage will be in connection with his service station known in all parts of the state for its excellent service and courteous treatment to customers.

Just when the garage will be completed was not stated but it is believed that it will be ready for occupancy within a few weeks. It will occupy a vacant lot, adjoining the Verbena Service Station, on the south side. Mr. Gulledge also stated that other improvements will be made as fast as possible, in order that their service will not be lacking in a single item. The Verbena Service Station is also headquarters for the bus running from Verbena to Montgomery by way of Mt. Creek, Marbury, Elmore, etc., on the old high-

Julius Reynolds Died At Home Here Sunday

Julius Reynolds, age 29, died at the home of his parents in Clanton, last Sunday morning, May 3, about four o'clock, following a serious attack of pneumonia. He became ill while at his duty at Reynolds Mill, south of Montgomery, and was brought to Clanton, being ill only for a few days.

The deceased was well known thruout the state, especially in South Alabama where he had scores of friends. Funeral services were held last Monday morning at ten o'clock at the home with Dr. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the Clanton Methodist church officiating, assisted by Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the local Baptist church. Interment followed in the Clanton cemetery with Martin & Sons in charge. Surviving is the widow, Alice Stanfield Reynolds and two children. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Reynolds, four sisters, Mrs. Lessie Hammack of Childersburg, Mrs. Annie Roberts, Mrs. Percy M. Pitts of Clanton and Mrs. Willodean Box of Birmingham. Two brothers, Reuben Reynolds of Atlanta and Hoyt of Clanton and a number of other relatives.

The deceased is a nephew of Judge L. H. Reynolds of Clanton. He attended the local high school, and Marion Institute.

His popularity among the people who knew him was shown by the large number present to pay last rites at the funeral. These people came from all sections of the state.

Pallbearers were Otto Jones, Crutcher Ross, James Wade, Julius Burnett, Barney Burnett, Mallie Armstrong.

CLAUDE CALLOWAY OF FLORIDA VISITING BROTHER IN CLANTON

Special Mother's Day Service At M.E. Church

Dr. Haskew, pastor of the Clanton Methodist Church, has announced a special Mother's Day Service at his church next Sunday at 11 A.M. The public is most cordially invited to be present. The subject of the sermon delivered is "Mothers of Men." The occasion will not be a time of shedding tears, but a time of grateful appreciation of mother and her influence.

Each member of the church has been asked to bring as many pennies, or cents, as is the age of his mother. This special donation to be given as an expression of gratitude for the mother. This amount will be applied on the Conference assessments for the church, and it is thought that a neat sum will be given. It is Dr. Haskew's opinion that love without sacrifice loses its sweetness, and he is calling for this sum as an expression of appreciation of Mother and her influence.

LITTLE LILLIAN SMITH CROWNED MAY QEEN OF LOCAL SCHOOL

At the close of the intensely interesting May Queen contest sponsored by the Clanton Grammar School, little Miss Lillian Smith, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. J. Lee Smith, was crowned as the May Queen, winning over nine other contestants.

The crowning of the May Queen climaxed a program which included a large parade with gaily decorated floats, put on by pupils and teachers of the school. The money derived from this contest was to go to a fund to be used for the extension of the grammar school term, and quite a neat sum was realized from the sale of votes.

The May Queen was crowned at the courthouse where the parade terminated. Mayor J. Lee Smith, officially crowned the Queen, before a large crowd.

W.O.W. FIELD DAY PLANS NEARING COMPLETION, EVANS SAYS

E. C. Evans, local district manager of the Woodmen of the World, stated this week that the plans for the gala field day of the organization which is to be held in Clanton soon, are nearing completion.

Mr. Evans stated that the outlook for a successful district meeting is very promising. Uniform degree teams from Tuscaloosa, Birmingham, Montgomery, Greenville, Phoenix City and four newly organized teams of this county will be present on that day to participate in the exercises. The ladies circle auxialliary to the W. O. W., will have two teams from Birmingham and Montgomery here to give a demonstration of their work. Further plans and details of the program will be published later Mr. Evans stated.

MISS LOIS MILLER BECOMES BRIDE OF CLYDIE CLECKLER

The marriage of Miss Lois Miller to Mr. Clydie Cleckler took place Sunday morning, April 26th, at the home of the Rev. T. J. Deason, the latter performing the ceremony.

Mrs. Cleckler is the attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Miller, who reside in the Friendship Community near Clanton, and was a student in the Chilton County High School. The groom is one of Clanton's promising young business men, and is at present connected with the Calloway Drug Company. They are making their home in the Gowan Addition.

Inzer-McSwain Wedding Is Solemnized

A marriage that came as a complete surprise to the people of Clanton took place last Sunday night when Miss Louise McSwain became the bride of Burt Marshal Inzer. The ceremony was performed at the Methodist church in Clanton by the Rev. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the church, in the presence of friends of the couple.

Mrs. Inzer is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. McSwain of Clanton. She is a graduate of the Chilton County High School, and a popular member of the younger social group of Clanton.

Mr. Inzer is the eldest son of the Rev. and Mrs. I. W. Inzer, of Leeds. Rev. Inzer is pastor of the Baptist church in Leeds. The groom is also a nephew of the pastor of the First Baptist church of Montgomery. He is a graduate of the Leeds High School, later attending the Alverson Business College, where he also received his diploma. He has been employed by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company for several years, working during summer vacations from school, and now is connected with the A & P Store in Clanton.

CHICAGO SALES CO. NO. 2 HAS BEEN MOVED TO CLANTON

Reedie Taylor, manager of the Chicago Sales Company, has announced this week that the Chicago Sales Company No. 2, located at Jemison, Ala., has been moved to Clanton, the entire stock of goods of that store having been placed in the stock of the Chicago Sales Company of Clanton.

Mr. W. A. Kemp, who has had charge of the Jemison store will in the future be connected with the Clanton store. be connected with the Clanton store, Mr. Taylor stated. Mr. Kemp has been with the Chicago Sales Company for sometime, and his addition to the Clanton store will add to the already efficient corps of clerks there in a large way. He stated that he wanted his friends and customers of the Jemison territory to come down to Clanton to see him at his new location, where they will be assured of the same buying satisfaction they received at the Jemison store.

SEN. HUGO BLACK SPEAKS TO LOCAL AMERICAN LEG. POST

Senator Hugo L. Black addressed a large audience at the courthouse last Monday night, at the regular meeting of the Chilton County Post of the American Legion. Mr. Grant, the Senator's secretary accompanied him to Clanton from Birmingham.

This county should feel very fortunate for the opportunity to hear this distinguished speaker at this time. Sen Black's talk was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present judging from comments from those who were at the meeting. Plans for the fish fry of the local post of the Legion were also discussed. This will be held on Friday, May 22. Further plans will be announced later, according to Joe N. Calloway, Commander.

MEMBER OF "MELODY PALS" VISITING IN THORSBY, ALA.

They were visitors to Clanton Tuesday enroute to Montgomery where they appeared on the program of Station WSFA, Tuesday night.

SENIOR CLASS WILL PRESENT ANNUAL PLAY HERE TONIGHT

The Annual Senior Play which will be staged at the high school tonight bids fair to excell any attraction offered here in a long time. Miss Bernice Williams, who has coached quite a number of entertainments that were pleasantly received in Clanton, states that she feels that this type of amusement will appeal to anyone desiring to attend a good clean show. Then, too, some real acting of their parts well, will be observed if you will follow closely the general trend of the plot of the play.

Homer Carroll, a young ministerial student, and an outstanding individual in every way in school, plays a leading part in the role of characters. You must not miss seeing him as "Mr. Brentwood, the worried real estate man." Frank McMurray plays the part of the great "Ramjah," the Hindoo Mystic, who sells horoscopes for a fee. He and his college friends, Jack Burks and John Ponder Lawrence, assist in raising money to put over a big deal.

Mary Heard, as "Doris Bentwood," dances under an assumed name, and thereby aids her father financially.

Janice Danforth and Berniece Williams also have prominent parts in the play.

Clotilde Johnson plays the part of "Mrs. Brentwood," and Alvinn Davis as "Fosdick," Mr. Brentwood's salesman, is interestingly portrayed thruout the program.

Don't fail to come and see this show because this is your talent made possible by the seniors who have been lighting their candles at dear old C. C. H. S. for the last four years, and who are leaving it to take up further work along life's pathway.

M. L. WARE RESTING WELL IN BIRMINGHAM HOSPITAL

Reports from the Birmingham hospital where M. L. "Matt" Ware, operator, of the popular Matt's Lunch Shoppe of Clanton, is confined stated that he is resting well. Mr. Ware underwent three operations last week, and has been greatly missed from his place of business and from Clanton since he has been away. The last reports received by the News concerning Mr. Ware's condition were received Tuesday night.

MRS. T. C. McSWAIN RECOVERING FROM AN OPERATION

The many friends of Mrs. T. C. McSwain will be glad to learn that she is recovering rapidly from an appendicitis operation at the Memorial Hospital in Montgomery. It is expected she will be able to return to her home here in a very short time.

EARTH TREMORS FELT SLIGHTLY LAST TUESDAY

Residents of Clanton and This Entire Section Receive Slight Shakings

An occurence that caused old timers to recall something of an earthquake many years ago in Clanton, causing dishes and pans to rattle on the shelves, and houses to seem to rise for a moment from their foundations, occurred here last Tuesday morning early when slight earth tremors were felt thruout this section.

The exact time of the occurence was not determined. Some say it was a little after six o'clock Tuesday morning, while others say about six-thirty o'clock. The slight trembling of the earth caused houses to shake, and sounded like a low slow rumbling of heavy thunder.

Tracers sent out by this newspaper brought in reports that it seemed to be general in this, the central part of the state. Whether it was a slight earthquake or not, has not yet been determined.

Mrs. T. P. Parrish Died Here Wednesday, 29th

Mrs. Louisa Elizabeth Parrish, age 62, died at her home in Clanton on Wednesday, April 29th, following a lingering illness. She was the wife of Tom P. Parrish, one of this county's prominent farmers.

She was born May 22, 1868, in Coosa County, the daughter of Louisa Wyatt and J. W. E. Gulledge. The latter is one of the most prominent and oldest citizens of Chilton County, being known not only throughout the county but in many sections of the state as well, and a member of one of the county's most prominent families.

Funeral services were conducted at the Samaria Church, near Clanton by the Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor, and Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Clanton Baptist church. Interment followed in the Samaria cemetery with Martin & Sons of Clanton in charge.

At the impressive services Mrs. L. C. Ross and Mrs. W. A. Willis rendered songs, with Miss Kathryn Hayes at the piano. The large number of floral wreaths and designs that decorated the grave, and the large number present at these last rites attested to the love for this fine woman. She was a member of the Samaria church. She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Leonard Farley and Miss Tommye Parrish, of Birmingham. Three sons, Jim, of Clanton, Willie, of Mitchell Dam, and Grady Parrish, of Birmingham, and her father, General J. W. E. Gulledge.

TWO PERSON TO BE SENT TO INSANE ASYLUM FROM HERE

Information given a representative of the News stated that two persons are to be committed to the insane asylum from this county soon. One is a negro woman, Claudie Jett, who has already been carried to Mt. Vernon. The other is Jimmie Dykes, an aged white man, who has been carried to Montgomery where he will be confined until proper papers are prepared for his removal to Bryce Hospital in Tuscaloosa.

MERCHANTS ARE OPPOSING THE FARM BUREAUS

Farmers Protest Bill Against County Agents and Cooperative Organizations

Various merchants of Alabama, including wholesale feed and supply dealers are ready to put up a fight against the operation of stores by the Alabama Farm Bureau Mutual Supply Association.

On April 23rd, a mass meeting of merchants was held at the Jefferson Davis Hotel in Montgomery, who asserted their rights in this question. Many of the something like three hundred merchants in attendance, stated that the corporation stores of the farm bureau were being operated without paying license or taxes and were doing a rather extensive mercantile business, being managed by county agents who are state paid teachers. A bill was scheduled to be introduced in the Alabama Legislature on May 5th, by the organization of Alabama Merchants and supply dealers, to prevent the further operation of the farm bureau stores.

On April 23rd certain interests were represented in a meeting in Montgomery at which bills were prepared that if passed by the Legislature would practically eliminate the services of county agents, vocational teachers and specialists from Auburn from aiding farmers and their various associations in any of their marketing problems.

According to the proposed bill it will be unlawful for county agents, vocational teachers or specialists to aid in the forming of associations for the marketing of farm produce or even aid in the placing of any farm product a farmer may have for sale, or aid any farmer in the purchase of any seed or any other materials he may need.

The proposed bill provides that when it becomes a law, a penalty of one hundred dollars and six months hard labor for any agent or vocational teacher or specialist guilty of violation of said law.

A meeting of some two hundred farmers and other interested citizens of Chilton County met at the Courthouse in Clanton Saturday, May 2, in protest of the proposed bill prepared by the group who met in Montgomery on April 23rd.

The following resolutions were drawn and approved some two hundred signed a petition to the Governor and Legislature to consider the resolutions.

To the Honorable B. M. Miller, Governor of Alabama, and To The Members of The Alabama Legislature:

Gentlemen:

In view of the fact that certain interests met in Montgomery April 23rd, and prepared certain bills to be presented to the Legislature, practically eliminating a much needed service of county and home agents, vocational teachers and other educational interests working directly with the farmers of the State, and prohibiting the cooperative buying and selling of materials that go into production of farm crops and livestock and sale of farm crops and livestock, and whereas,

We, of Chilton County, have been and now are benefitting from cooperative sale of such farm products as Heavy Work for the Staff.

During the first two months in France the work imposed upon the few staff officers who had accompanied me was very heavy. After urgent and repeated requests I was fortunate in having at my disposal later in the summer a small group of men which included some of the most brilliant and highly educated officers in the army.

In addition to those already with me, the officers included in the following cable I regarded as especially fitted for the duties for which they were desired:

"Request Robert C. Davis, adjutant general, be sent these headquarters earliest date. Request Frank Moorman or J. O. Mauborgne be sent these headquarters earliest date for duty as code expert. Request Samuel T. Hubbard, Jr., signal corps, now here, be called to active service and ordered to report to me. Request ten of following named officers be sent to report to me by second convoy for general staff duty: Frank R. McCoy, George Van Horn Moseley, Malin Craig, Alfred W. Bjornstadt, H. B. Fiske, Allen J. Grear, Paul B. Malone, Edgar T. Collins, Samuel R. Gleaves, Laurence Halstead, Nicholas W. Campanole, A. R. Moreno, Preston Brown, LeRoy R. Eltinge, W. B. Burtt, Frank T. Hines, Edward L. King, J. P. McAdams, W. C. Sweeney, J. B. Barnes, Kerr T. Riggs, W. H. Winters, Wait C. Johnson, Stuart Heintzelman, Upton Birnie Kirby Walker, Berkeley Enochs. . . ."

ERICAN RED CRO CANTEEN

Red Cross Canteen Girls.

Having this nucleus and selecting the best features of the French and British systems, a general staff organization was created, which efficiently met every demand made upon it throughout the war and which remains today as a model for present and future guidance.

Source of Guns a Problem.

The question of artillery procurement caused me much concern. The almost negligible amount on hand when we went to war consisted mostly of field guns of the tree-inch type, then largely in the hands of troops in the Philippine islands and elsewhere and unavailable for issue. Moreover, for calibers heavier than the three-inch type our ordnance department had adopted nothing which was really up to date.

The enormous proportion of both light and heavy guns used by both sides, the knowledge of our deficiency and the realization of the length of time that must elapse before we could manufacture and deliver them made it imperative that we seek other sources than our own to help equip our armies.

Following up an intimation it was learned definitely that, although not fully supplied themselves, the French could increase the output of their factories provided they could get steel from the United States. As it seemed probable that we should operate in proximity to their armies we adopted the French types for the usual calibers and sought their assistance in obtaining the guns needed, at least for the first two years. We secured an agreement that our troops as they came along would be provided with French guns and ammunition, including not only the 75s and 155s but 37 mm. guns and 58 mm. trench mortars as well.

It was most fortunate that we were able to get these guns from the French, as up to the end of the war no guns of American manufacture of the types used, except twenty-four 8-inch mortars and six 14-inch naval guns, were fired in battle.

Trench guns of the three-inch and six-inch mortar types, with ammunition, were purchased from the British, as they were considered superior to those used by the French.

Progress of Red Cross.

The Red Cross reported excellent progress at this time, especially in its first effort to assist the French as agreed upon with General Petain. Its organization by Maj. Grayson M. P. Murphy for war work with our own armies was now about completed. The establishment of canteens and huts at the ports and other important points had already begun and the numbers increased as fast as needed.

These centers of service later maintained dispensaries and provided beds and bathing facilities for men traveling under orders or on leave. When the necessity arose the Red Cross actively co-operated with the medical corps in the field, contributing large quantities of supplies and often additional nurses. The work of the society, directed from a central office in Paris, eventually embraced practically every endeavor touching the health of the armies.

CHAPTER IX

I left Paris July 20, 1917, for a visit with Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, the British commander in chief, whose headquarters were in an old chateau half hidden away in a magnificent grove at Beldiques. I was accompanied by Colonels Harbord and Alvord and Captain Patton of my staff.

At dinner the subject of conversation naturally turned on the military situation of the allied armies, our own in particular. They were keen to know about our army, its organization and size, and the prospects of our putting troops in the field. As our active participation depended on many factors, such as training, equipment and shipping, my replies, of course, were indefinite and no doubt disappointing.

In turn we asked many questions, and it was especially interesting to hear the importance of artillery emphasized by its chief, Major General Birch, who spoke of the difficulties they had experienced in supplying themselves with guns that matched the enemy's.

Referring to their lack of artillery in the beginning, General Birch said there was reason to believe that they had finally attained a superiority over the Germans.

Real Teamwork Lacking.

Sir Douglas told me some of the details of Nivelle's unsuccessful attack in the spring, how it was known far and wide, beforehand and spoke particularly of the consequent serious disaffection among the French troops. Although he had placed himself under Nivelle's command for these operations, he had, he said, little confidence in the outcome from the start. He also commented on the failure of the French to co-operate fully on various occasions. His remarks entirely confirmed the belief that I had long since held that real teamwork between the two armies was almost totally absent.

Scarcely anything more strikingly impressed upon me our unpreparedness than what I saw during a few hours spent with General Trenchard at the British flying field, where we witnessed flyers doing every imaginable stunt, and saw planes of all classes, bombing, pursuit and observation, motors of different types and the thoroughly equipped repair shops.

The outstanding thing, however, which it was gratifying to note later on in our own aviation personnel, was the incomparable spirit and alertness of the young officers and the enlisted personnel. Every man seemed to be disappointed when a flight of planes departed for the front without him.

This visit to British headquarters was most instructive, as every opportunity was given us to study intimately the details of their wartime organization. After similar studies of the French system we selected from each those features best suited to perfect a well-balanced staff for our own army.

The cordial relations and good understanding established between Sir Douglas Haig and myself and between the corresponding members of our staffs and with a number of the leading British officers with whom we were later to have official dealings proved very advantageous. In London, long after the armistice, Sir Douglas, in an after-dinner speech, referred to this visit, which happened during a period of depression, and said that our timely appearance at his headquarters had aroused in them a strong feeling of hopefulness for the future.

Meets Other Leaders.

My diary at this time notes the following:

> Paris, Thursday, July 26, 1917.—Had breakfast yesterday at the Crillon with Lloyd George. He is alert and energetic and has a clear conception of allied problems. Took lunch with Mr. Balfour, who thinks we have reason to feel easier regarding submarines. Representatives of the various allies met for conference on general situation. In the evening M. Ribot, the prime minister, gave a state dinner to officials attending conference.
> Today attended luncheon to allied representatives given by the President and Mme. Poincare at the Elysee palace.
> In conference this afternoon with Petain, Cadorna, Robertson and Foch at latter's office. Discussed military plans, talked about tonnage possibilities and shortage of personnel. All pessimistic and reserved.
> James Stillman, just returned from a tour of France, confirms reports of serious depression.

Situation Not Hopeful.

The meeting of the allied military leaders July 26, which was my first, brought out little that was hopeful. The political relations of the allies were touched upon in a general way, but only so far as they might affect the military situation. The most significant recent event, of course, had been the crisis in Russia.

With reference to American assistance, I gave in detail the situation as to our man power, immediate and prospect, especially in the light of the latest plans of the department, and laid particular emphasis on the necessity of additional shipping. A cablegram had just been received in response to mine of July 6 in which I had requested that at least a million men reach France by the following spring.

This message, indicating that the War department foresaw small chance of securing the necessary tonnage, was read to the conference in part as follows:

"By using all shipping which is now in sight for the purpose and which will be available after month of November, the plan proposes to transport to France by June 15, 1918, twenty-one divisions, comprising about 420,000 men, together with auxiliary troops and replacement troops, line of communication troops, and others, amounting to 214,970 men, making a total of 634,975 men."

More Tonnage Needed.

Although short of my recommendations, even this schedule could be carried out only by a very large increase of tonnage. The other members of the conference were of the opinion that if new adjustments could be made there might be shipping for nine or ten of our divisions before spring. So for the moment there did not seem to be the slightest chance of transporting a million men to France by the following June.

After canvassing the whole situation, the conference expressed the unanimous opinion that a defensive role should be adopted on all secondary fronts. The British and French representatives hoped that the surplus troops resulting from this course might be available to strengthen their armies in France and General Cadorna, of course, thought the Italian armies should have their share.

CHAPTER X

About this time (July, 1917) disturbing reports were submitted to me confidentially by one of our naval officers sent by Admiral Sims from London. Calculations based upon tonnage losses for May, June and July seemed to confirm the conclusions of a month previous that there would soon be insufficient allied shipping left to bring over an American army of required strength, and that the allies would find it difficult to keep up their food supply from overseas.

The data presented by the naval officer proved that if this rate of destruction could not be reduced the war would be lost before we could fire a shot.

This report was certainly most pessimistic, but it did not dispel my confidence in the success of the plan that had been tested and was about to be inaugurated of sending ships over in convoys under the protection of naval vessels. Additional destroyers requested by Admiral Sims had by this time largely increased such craft in European waters, and as a result the activities of submarines had been somewhat diminished for July as compared with April.

Need of Speed Evident.

Yet for the time being ship construction in British yards continued below losses and our shipping board at home had scarcely stopped wrangling over materials and types. All these facts caused everybody to realize the extreme urgency of speed, and that in turn gave some hope that the prospects might soon become brighter.

It was my belief, even in the face of the heavy losses, that with complete co-operation under expert management and distribution, the shipping would be ample for all purposes. This would require, of course, that it be placed under some central authority, but the governments, especially the British, that controlled most of it, while apparently desirous of helping, did not seem inclined to think they could make any concessions. They had entered into arrangements to assist each other with shipping for foodstuffs, but there was no such thing as pooling of allied tonnage for general purposes.

However, the discouraging reports on the situation did make such an impression on the military leaders that they suggested the possibility of pooling all available shipping and accordingly recommended a commission to consider the question, with especial reference to the transportation of the American army.

MUSCLE SHOALS GRANT COMPLETED TO STATE

The completion of the Government's grant of 400,000 acres to Alabama for the improvement of the Tennessee River at Muscle Shoals has finally been secured by the State Commission of Forestry. The grant was finally authorized by Congress over a hundred years ago, but failure of the State to take advantage of its provisions prevented the acquisition of the entire amount until recently. The Commission of Forestry has just been advised of the issuance of the final patent in the case.

Most of the land authorized for title through the grant was selected many years ago, but a shortage of several thousand acres was permitted to stand until the State Commission of Forestry was directed by the State Land Act of 1927 to act for the State in securing the completion of all Federal grants. The Commission was chosen as the agency for this purpose for the reason that its technical staff contains trained surveyors, timber experts, and classifiers and valuation engineers.

For about a century a balance of approximately 9,679 acres remained be selected and patented. The term of the grant required that the lands b chosen from the counties of Madiso Morgan, Limestone, Lawrence, Frank lin and Lauderdale. It was a matte of some difficulty to find a sufficien amount of unpatented Government lan in these counties to satisfy the gran However, this was finally accomplishe Of the balance due the State 8,579 a res were patented in 1929, the remain er being suspended pending the term nation of certain adverse claims. The were decided in favor of the State, an the remaining balance of 1,118 acr has now been patented, closing th grant. While the original grant wa for 400,000 acres, the total area paten ed to the State amounts to 400,018 being the amount of available land com puted to the nearest forty acre trac

May Day Festival Is Gala Event

By GUY H. de SHAZO

The May Day Festival and meeting of the Alumni Association of Womans College at Montgomery, events which are held annually on the first Saturday in May, were held on the campus of that institution on last Saturday, May 2. In connection with the regular events connected with the meeting of the Alumni and the staging of the regular court of the Queen o' the May, there was held also field day exercises for girl athletic teams from several of the high schools of the state. There were approximately two hundred of these girls present and taking part in the field day activities.

During the morning hours and while the Field Day trials were being held on the Campus, the Alumni Association held its business sessions in The Hut. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested at this meeting and a wholehearted support of the school and its drive for a million dollar endowment fund was pledged by the members of the association who were present. At the conclusion of the field trials and the Alumni meet, a picnic luncheon was served to all the visiting high school girls on the south side of Julia Pratt Hall. The Alumni association, the members of tht class of 1931 and their friends and members of their families were served an elaborate family style luncheon in the main dining room of Pratt Hall. The luncheon menu included fruit cocktail, fried chicken, stewed potatoes in cream, asparagus tips, pickled peaches, frozen fruit salad, hot rolls and butter, strawberry shortcake and coffee, salted and roasted almonds. The writer has attended a number of similar luncheons and we feel safe in saying that this luncheon was the best we have ever had the pleasure of attending.

During the course of the luncheon, which by the way, lasted about two hours, a specialty program was put on by the entertainment committee. This program was in the nature of what those in charge were pleased to call a radio broadcast, in which some unique features were introduced, including an experiment in "visible broadcasting" which proved a decided success. A number of short talks were made by various members of the faculty, notable among whom were Dr. Walter D. Agnew, president of the college and Miss Stone. Owing to the hub-dub in the dining room, it was impossible for the writer to get all the names of those who made short talks.

The May Day Festival was staged in the natural amphitheatre just to the south of Flowers Hall. Adequate seating arrangements were provided for the crowd of more than 2.000 friends of the college who witnessed the crowning of Miss Mary Pruitt as Queen o' the May.

The festival was opened with the Inaugural procession which included the members of the class of 1931, the incoming and outgoing executive boards of the student council, the retiring and incoming presidents of the student body, and Dr. Agnew. The inaugural tradition was given by Miss Fannie Corbitt, the retiring student president, who returned the gavel of authority to Dr. Agnew who in turn gave the gavel to Miss Montine Lisenby administering the oath of office as president of the student body for 1931-32.

Next came the presentation of gifts and tokens of love and fidelity by each class of the school. At the conclusion of these activities the Primrose Festival was held.

The entire story of the May Festival and the fair Princess who must on that day choose a husband, was pantomined. Practically the entire student body took part in this huge and colorful carnival which was staged for the amusement of Her Highness. There were ten beautifully costumed dances which included jesters and fools, gypsies and jugglers, marionettes, hoops and balloons, suitors, gnomes, clouds, fairies, drama and priests. The transfiguration of the dwarfed prince into a spry and lovely suitor took place during the dance of the Clouds and won the love of the fair Princess, the twain being wedded by the High Priest during the Dance of the Priests and legend has it that they lived happily ever after.

The Inaugural reception was then held in "The Hut" to which every friend of the College was invited. In the receiving line were Miss Corbitt, the retiring student president, Miss Lisenby, the incumbent with her father; Dr. and Mrs. Agnew and their Royal Highnesses, the King and the Queen, Saidee Crook and Mary Pruitt, respectively.

Aside from the activities of the day, the writer was impressed with the cordiality of each and every member of the faculty and student body with whom he had the pleasure to come in contact. No effort was spared to make the day one of pleasure and comfort for every visitor. Being single, the writer of course was interested in the girls more or less, and we would say here that a fellow certainly could find one to his liking no matter how hard he might be to please! There are short girls, long girls, blond girls, brunette girls, thin girls, older girls, younger girls, fat girls and—Jap girls! Walk right up fellows and take your pick!

Personally, the writer wishes to take this occasion to publicly thank Dr. Agnew and his able faculty and the entire student body for one of the most enjoyable days we have spent in many a moon.

SLEDGE HAMMER BLOWS

Would you hit your automobile with a sledge hammer? It sounds like a ridiculous question, yet that is the effect on your car when it strikes a depression in the road, even when traveling at slow speed. Only the resiliency of tires, springs and shock absorbers tends to save it.

Every time a road or street is dug up, the fill is bound to settle, making a depression, and, as one writer expresses it, "an unseen giant rests beneath the road ready to strike your tires and nerves with his sledge hammer as you drive by—and the faster you drive the harder he strikes."

The way to prevent the activities of this giant is to avoid excavations under the streets by placing a main on each side. This is cheaper in the long run, safer from a fire standpoint where water is concerned, and in the case of wide streets actually uses less pipe than when a single main is used.

Progressive communities are now placing their gas and water mains behind the curb. This avoids the bad appearance, danger and noise of torn-up streets, saves wear and tear on cars and nerves, and is real economy from every standpoint It is a modern and sensible plan which should be adopted generally. Certainly everyone who operates a motor vehicle of any kind would vote for its adoption, in the interest of smooth streets and highways.

PAINS QUIT COMING

"When I was a girl, I suffered periodically with terrible pains in my back and sides. Often I would bend almost double with the intense pain. This would last for hours and I could get no relief.

FORD BRAKES ARE UNUSUALLY EFFECTIVE

Reliability and safety due to simple design and careful construction

ONE OF the first things you will notice when you drive the Ford is the quick, effective action of its four-wheel brakes.

They are unusually safe and reliable because they are mechanical, internal expanding, with all braking surfaces fully enclosed. This prevents mud, water, sand, etc., from getting between the band and drum and interfering with brake action.

Other outstanding features of the Ford are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, torque-tube drive, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, Rustless Steel, reliability, economy, and long life.

You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

Our MOTHERS

Sunday, May 10th, is Mothers' Day the day set aside for special honor to all Mothers. It is the day when Mothers will come first in everything all over the world.

To some it is perhaps queer that only one day in each year should be designated as the day when special honor is paid to Mothers, when Mothers should receive special honor every day in the year. "Honor thy Father and Mothers" rings in the mind and heart of every true man and woman, boy and girl every day But we use the word special, when we say honor to the Mother on Mothers' Day.

What a splendid sight it would be if every Mother living now and able, could be seen at church next Sunday morning, escorted by some one of her children or near relative Modern Mothers may be rouged and powdered. They may play bridge and golf. They may do less cooing over their babies, but the tenderness of Motherhood is theirs as it was their own Mothers'. A few women in every generation may have been callous and indifferent to their maternal duties and pleasures, in this time as in all others, a Mother is the most influential factor in a child's life.

Mothers may be somewhat forgotten when things are rosy, but who is first to receive a thought when trouble and misfortune stalk one's path? It is Mother. It is Mother who always understands and believes, when others fail to understand and lose confidence in times of need. It is Mother who is always at home to receive you. It is Mother who brought you into this world and sacrificed many of her pleasures that you would be happy and comfortable. It is Mother who would gladly give up her life to save yours.

All honor to Mother, the one who gives and asks little in return.

So let's pile her lap high with gifts and let's sing songs of praise to her on Mothers' Day. Her unselfishness and sacrificial spirit have made her worthy of all we can do and give, and her love will follow us around the world, the one proof of an abiding faith and a constant affection

What About Our Almshouse?

A letter comes to the attention of this newspaper this week concerning the almshouse of Chilton County. The letter is being published. It states that there is a lacking in the food being given the inmates of the farm. No investigation of the conditions of the county almshouse has been made by this newspaper up to now, but some thought was given the letter that comes here this week.

"The practice of selling the poor to the lowest bidder who will feed and clothe them the cheapest is a vicious and wicked custom, and has no place in the heart or mind of a man of compassion, and is without authority of law," are some of the words used in the letter addressed to this newspaper.

There is possibly some grounds for this statement, and this newspaper wonders if there is really anything worthwhile looking into the conditions at the county almshouse. Has the government made any attempt to investigate the conditions there? It is true that although a person does become old and unable to earn his daily bread, he is certainly entitled to life, although not a luxurious one. But just because one is poor and unable to work for himself, and with no relatives to care for him, is certainly no reason why he should be mistreated, if he has been placed in a county almshouse.

Chilton County should not allow anything in this line to mar its record, if this is true.

Can Politics Teach Farming?

Politics, undiscouraged by many failures, is still trying to tell the farmers how to run their business. A growing group of legislators have suddenly turned their attention to prohibiting the organization of farm corporations, apparently in the belief that corporation farming is a deadly peril requiring an immediate scotching.

The Kansas legislature, for instance, has just passed a law which absolutely prohibits the organization of any new farm corporations in that State. Senator Capper agitated in favor of the law before its passage, and lustly approved its enactment.

But the real truth, according to Thomas E. Cathcart, the eminently practical and plain-spoken editor of the Country Home, is that corporation farming is not now an important practical question in this country. The overwhelming majority of farms are run by owners or renters. The corporate-owned farms are at present insignificant in number and output.

"Still, anti-corporation agitation always makes good political talk," comments Mr. Cathcart. "But a real danger lies in its spread to other states than Kansas. Corporation have always been the objects of prejudice. Some have been good, some bad. But if American farmers find that they are happier, more prosperous and freer by managing their affairs through corporations, they will establish corporations. The decision will be made by farmers and not by legislators. Farmers will be governed by their own interests and nothing else. If farmers want corporation farms they will find ways of repealing or circumventing the laws. The entire economic history of our country proves this.

"Propaganda against corporate farming is as unnecessary today as Big Bill Thompson's campaign in Chicago against King George V. There are enough real agricultural problems in this country to call forth all the intelligence and good will which farmers and all other classes possess. When a politician begins to stir up the embers of ancient prejudice, he merely attempts to divert attention from issues which actually affect the lives and welfare of the people he pretends to serve. It is political humbuggery."

Yes, a wise old bird is the owl. He sits and sits and sits, saying very little, doing very little. Looks like he just sits and thinks. And I wonder why the owl is usually referred to as being wise.

* * * *

When I start to wondering things, so do others start to wondering. I wondered about a lot of things last week, and good gosh, how some other people started to wondering about the same things. I've got some more wondering to do shortly.

Politics and Persons

To have politics we must have persons. When we have persons then we will have politics. Perfectly clear, that. Way back when folks were running around campaigning for B. M. Miller for governor, they told all about the way he was going to decrease the expenses of the State, and how he would not increase the taxes. Great campaign stuff, if you ask me, but what's the use of making such promises in a big way as that? Especially if they are not to be lived up to. Why, here we are facing trouble already, and there is a lot of talk of increasing the taxes in the state.

It is true that Governor Miller went on a firing rage shortly after taking office, and just fired employees of the State on every hand. Nope, not on every hand. I understand that in one place where there was a man drawing $12,000 a year, now there are two drawing about the same as that. What is the idea of firing the man who has a family and receives about $100 or $150 per month for his services, and really needs the work, and at the same time hiring another man at an enormous salary? Does that seem like cutting expenses. I should frown and say no. Sometimes I wonder just what would be happening if Mr. Davis or Mr. Watt Brown had been elected. I got confidence in some men, but not others.

* * * *

Was just thinking the other day how great it would be to win about $25,000 of that money the Camel cigarette folks are going to give away. I just thought over the things I would do if I had that much cash handed to me gratis. Here's some of the things—go step on a certain man's pet corn—sleep late enough to combine my breakfast with my lunch—buy some automobile salesmen a good farm and move them out there—go see what Lande, Stapp, Martin and Wyatt are doing in Miami, or Cuba—resign my office in the pen-pushers association—tear down certain old wooden buildings in Clanton and erect new brick buildings in their place—give some rather popular young social lions in Clanton some keen competition with certain young ladies—go home and take a good nap—tell the ed that this would be the last of the Round Town column—put a "Welcome Sign" up at each end of the paved highway into Clanton—pave the road from here to Selma, and the one to Piper—give a certain little red-head a present—try to persuade her that I'm a changed man—give our Mayor an or atorical prize—buy a horse—spend two weeks in Birmingham—spend two days in Montgomery—pay all my bills—including my board bill—ride all over Chilton County for one time—and put the balance left in the Peoples Savings Bank and the First National Bank to buy gum drops with.

* * * *

What is the younger generation coming to? Instead of being mother's darling daughter, somebody suggests that we punch out the L in darling. Have been reading of some rather distinguished writers concerning this idea and I find that the majority of people are of the opinion that our forefathers and mothers were just about as bad as the younger generation now. They were just not as open with it as at present, and anyway we find that the discussions of various subjects pertaining to life are being done more freely by the younger generation. When a boy becomes rather frank in his opinion of things, in the presence of a young lady, he does not get his face slapped, but the young lady usually joins in the conversation giving her ideas on the subject, with no humiliation whatever. I don't know but if that isn't best after all. It is really not leading up to the place where men will have little respect for a woman. However, it is possible that the women are being shown less respect by men in these days than they were years ago. But at the same time the men are not to blame for that. But for a man to keep his respect for the women of today, he has to be a darn good man.

ABOUT THE CHILTON COUNTY ALMSHOUSE

Editor Chilton County News:

It is most regretable that there has been little or no improvement in conditions at our county almshouse, especiall in regard to food—(that first essential). A pretense on the part of State authorities to the contrary notwithstanding, and the humane citizens of Chilton County have cause to bow their heads in shame.

This institution should not be commercialized for high profit, nor its use ever be permitted for political aggrandizement.

The practice of selling the poor to the lowest bidder, who will feed and clothe them the cheapest, is a vicious and wicked custom, and has no place in the heart or mind of a man of compassion, and is without authority of law.

If a county is unable to provide a Worthy and Proper Guardianship to administer this unrestricted and delicate trust and its indifferent and intimidated citizens are unmoved that county has reached Bottom.

To Whom It May Concern:

A legal notice appeared in this paper, last issue, of complaint by State of Alabama against one Chevrolet Coach, owned by E. M. McKee, and that he did transport prohibited liquors and beverages.

These charges were brought against me, but they are absolutely untrue. I have never transported any kind of beverages in any County or State.

The writer was not shown any courtesy when arrested. They would not allow me to use the phone to send a message to my home, neither would they allow friends to see me. And a number of friends who were willing, also O. K. were not permitted to make my bond, in fact, my opinion is, that I was regarded more of a criminal than a citizen, who was born and raised in Chilton County, a citizen who was unfortunately placed in a set of unavoidable circumstances. Understand, I didn't expect any more courtesy than a prisoner should be shown even tho' I am a respectable citizen.

I came clean with the truth to the sheriff and officers and I am coming clean with my friends in Clanton and Chilton County, also Autauga County, where I reside, that I have never transported any liquors, and will never do so.

Thank you.

Verbena, Ala., Rt. 1, May 5, 1931.

Editor Chilton County News:

Will you permit me space to say a few words of warning to the people through your paper?

There has been some book agents going over Chilton County selling books and leaving literature, when they could not get the cash they took eggs, chickens, turnip greens or a piece of cake and left the books. Their aim was to leave some books in every home. They are fighting all the churches and teaching dangerous doctrines. Those books are not fit for young people or children to read and will not do older ones any good to read them. Don't be deceived and buy those books and if you have already bought some of them burn them as some have done. Jesus spoke a parable and said a man sowed good seed in his fied, but while men slept the enemy came and sowed tares, Matt. 13:25.

Are the ministers going to sleep and let the enemy sow his field full of tares? Why not wake up? When you ask those agents where their home is, they answer we have no home. They say that they do not belong to any church. Why not spend your money with people who have a place they call home, and who you know something about the lives they are living. If you want good books get them from some reliable book store or from someone that you know something about their life and what they stand for. Take a stand for Christ and the church.

Yours for Christ and the church.

IS THIS FREE AMERICA?

Editor Chilton County News,
Clanton, Ala.

Mr. Editor:—Some articles have appeared in your paper recently suggesting that the people should not read the books written by J. F. Rutherford. I wonder if the reading, thinking public likes to be told what to read and what not to read. Are we still living in the dark ages when it was customary to burn Bibles to keep the dear common people from reading it? Or are we removed far enough from it to think for ourselves? Do we need dictators, priests or preachers to think for us?

Mr. Rutherford is known as one of the best Bible students in the world today, whose publications have reached the circulation of 93½ million, and are published in 48 languages, and whose voice is heard each week over more than 200 broadcasting stations. He has been referred to by the President of the Church Federation of America as the best authority on some Bible subjects. Who are the narrow-minded little 2x4 men who presume to tell the Chilton County people to not use their own good judgment about what they should read.

The truths in these books are not man's truths, but God's. One book of 360 pages cites and quotes 2110 Scriptures. We are responsible for the way we handle the word of God. Those who do not wish to read are at perfect liberty to leave it alone. But they should beware lest they come under the condemnation pronounced by Jesus in Luke 11:52 where He accuses them of not entering into the knowledge of the gospel, themselves and hindering others who would do so if let alone. They call the Rutherford books dangerous and they truly are dangerous to hypocrites and to all selfish interests. The old saying that "the hit dog always howls" shows the reason for the aforementioned articles that have appeared.

Many people are sick and tired of the collection plate or hat being shoved under their noses every time they enter a church house. "Pay, pay, pay," continually as one contributor suggests, and what do they get in return? Husks and that which does not satisfy. Isaiah 56:10-11 very fitly describes some of the religious leaders and D. D.s. Jeremiah 50:6 also tells the effect upon the people of the bad advice of these false shepherds.

Jesus is the Good Shepherd and He tells in John 10:12-13 about the hirelings who ask always for money and more money. Columbus once said that the earth is round. People then said "Rot," and put him in prison. When the automobile was first invented many people said, "Rot," a horseless carriage is impossible." When Jesus preached His message of the Kingdom, the religious leaders said, "Away with Him." Now in this enlightened twentieth century in "Good Christian America," Judge Rutherford is proclaiming that same message of God's Kingdom on earth, and narrow-minded people cry "Rot." Many, however, rejoice in the truths contained in these books.

If all men would take the advice of Gamaliel to the religious fanatics who were opposing Peter and John (Acts 5:38-39) to let them alone lest they should be found fighting against God, they would save themselves much trouble and sorrow.

"Truth is mighty and shall prevail."

A PSALM OF COTTON

Cotton, thou art my shepherd and I am in want;

Thou hast caused me to feed in a dry pasture, thou has destroyed my credit; thou hast led me into the paths of poverty, liens, lawsuits and near nakedness;

Thou hast destroyed my soul and my happiness.

Thou hast caused me to go to a banker with my hat under my arm and mortgage the muscle and produce of my farm;

Thou hast caused me to live in a rented house in full view of the moon, while stars come twinkling thru the cracks;

Thou preparest a naked back and an empty stomach for me in the presence of my friends;

Thou aniontest my head with ignorance, superstition, poverty and unpaid account—how can I trust thee?

Thou hast kept my children out of school, church and society, thereby robbing them of that which is good and noble, elevating and refining;

Thou hast caused me to go to the barn and bring out the old fertilizer sacks and ask my wife to make me a shirt;

Now, behold, as I stand amidst my friends in my new shirt with these inscriptions in full view: "Eighteen per cent acid phosphate" on the breast and "12-4-4" on the tail.

Raspberries, like other small fruits, are dependent on an ample supply of moisture in the soil. The soil should be tilled and should be supplied with humus not only during the growing and ripening of the fruit but also while the canes are developing. Some gardeners mulch their raspberries to a depth of several inches with straw, leaves, or green hay.

Poultry manure is a good fertilizer for the farm garden, but it is so rich in nitrogen that it may burn the roots of shrubbery, trees, flowers, or vegetables if placed in direct contact with the roots or spread on the surface in considerable quantities. Don't apply more than 8 or 10 pounds to 100 square feet.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

Periodical Examinations

I am 100% in favor of health examinations at regular intervals. It is my purpose in this letter, to persuade you into the same view, if possible.

If you were setting out on a long journey in your automobile, now wouldn't you have an expert look the car over, to see that it is in first-class order, that the trip might be made with maximum ease and comfort? You certainly would, if you used the plainest variety of common sense.

I know of no more important trip than this journey that we call human life; we are all on the highway; and, a happy, successful journey is what of all things we most want.

A contemporary tells us that the doctor is by your side when you are born —and he will probably be there when you pass into the great beyond. And, during your active years, you do your best to keep away from him: you use every nostrum that you can hear of for your ailments that are sure to come—and you send for the doctor only when you are "all shot to pieces," and fear you are going to die!

This seems to me, the most inexcusable form of short-sightedness that a sensible man or woman can exercise. Do you wait till your automobile is reduced to a pile of junk, before going to the expert repair man? Is your body of less importance than the car? Think about it.

It is every man and woman's privilege and DUTY to go to their family physician at stated intervals and be carefully looked over; here is the moment above all others that "a stitch in time saves nine." I am sure nine cases of sickness out of ten would be eliminated, if the rule of periodical examinations were faithfully observed. Wouldn't that be a pay proposition?

A dangerous rise in blood pressure may be nipped in the bud; a serious kidney disorder may be recognized at the easiest stage for cure. I could instance many more; see if you can't.

We can show you why—

Commercial fertilizers won't give satisfactory results in the garden unless the soil is well supplied with humus and moisture. Turning under green crops or coarse manure will furnish humus and increase the moisture-holding power of the soil.

Cutting too much pulpwood without an assured market is risky for the farmers, according to the Virginia extension forester. If the wood is not sold, it will be only a few months until decay sets in, and much work and wood will be wasted.

—o—

Most farmers judge the effect of green manureing by the quantity and quality of the succeeding crops, but failure to produce an increase in crop yield can not always be blamed to green manuring, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Both temperature and moisture of the soil greatly influence the decomposition of green manure. Lack of moisture, as well as temperatures lower than about 65 degrees F. retard growth of the bacteria. Experiments have shown that under the best conditions succulent green manure was nearly all decomposed in 7 days, but at low temperatures more than 14 days were needed.

Vast Nitrate Fields Once Floor of Ocean

Entire Region Now Barren Desert High Above Sea Level

Piece by piece, scientific discoveries have been put together to reveal the story of one of the great mysteries of nature, the origin of the nitrate fields in South America.

According to geological history, the vast, barren desert of Northern Chile in which the nitrate deposits are found was once the bottom of the Pacific Ocean. Millions of years—no one knows the number—have probably passed since Nature buried this treasure in that desolate plateau thousands of feet above the Pacific.

Authorities who have studied the deposits believe that, either as a result of a sudden upheaval or the gradual rising of the continent, great bodies of waters from the Pacific were completely enclosed by rising land. A beating sun, pouring down upon the inland lakes in this new region, gradually dried up the salt water, destroying plant and animal life. Then followed slow oxidation which, with other natural processes, produced almost by magic an entirely new substance—Chilean nitrate of soda, as it is called today. The nitrate, with other minerals, is now found in beds in an area covering 75,000 square miles, where it has been baked and seasoned for centuries.

It is generally thought that the natural origin of Chilean nitrate accounts for its unusual record of service to farmers of the world. It contains, besides nitrogen, a number of other important elements—potassium, calcium, magnesium, iodine, and boron. All of these are essential for the growth and health of plants. It is because of the presence of these elements that Chilean nitrate is frequently called "nitrogen plus." It is more than a source of nitrogen.

The commercial exploitation of the nitrate deposits commenced in 1830. The fertilizer has been used ever since, and it is now recognized as the oldest of the commercial fertilizing materials. In this country about three quarters of a million tons are used annually. According to conservative estimates, the supply is adequate to meet the need of the world for several centuries, even if the rate of consumption is materially increased.

BETTER STAPLE HELD AS VITAL NEED OF STATE KNAPP SAYS

Alabama Must Improve Quality Of Cotton To Regain Lost Position, View

Alabama cotton growers must improve the quality of their cotton if they are to hold their place against competition with the rest of the world, President Bradford Knapp, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, said in Birmingham at the annual meeting of the Railway Development Association of the Southeast.

Increasing the length of the staple, he said, was of prime importance, although that had faced the cotton grower since the advent of the boll weevil.

The production of a good quality of any product is one of the important elements in maintaining a position in a world market, Dr. Knapp declared. If America is to maintain her position in the cotton world we must give attention to quality cotton produced in this country. Before the boll weevil came there was a time when we maintained our position and boasted of a monopoly of cotton production because we produced cotton of excellent quality almost unchallenged by any other country. We had not only quantity equal to more than two-thirds of all the cotton produced in the world, but we had the best quality cotton produced. Our large supply of white upland cotton of seven-eighths to an inch in length of staple was not matched anywhere in the world.

Weevil Caused Change

The advent of the boll weevil brought a different situation. The question was not the quality of the cotton produced, but whether we could produce any cotton whatever. The amount of cotton which we were able to produce in spite of the boll weevil was a struggle for many years. In that struggle we began to think more of early maturity and percentage of lint rather than length of staple and character of cotton. Seed breeders began to talk about cotton with 40 and 42 per cent lint and then came half and half and an almost utter disregard of the length of staple or the quality and character of the cotton.

In the meantime there is another challenge. Rayon was invented. Silk began to be used for more purposes. And then the quality of foreign grown cotton began to improve. Our varieties have been taken to foreign countries. Generally they have been our best varieties and in these foreign countries with virtual dictatorship they have done the things that we have advised, but they have done them better. Their communities under orders produced the same variety. Their gins under orders do everything to preserve pure seed. Their plant breeders concentrated upon a few specialized highly valuable varieties. In our country we have let the economy program be based upon large yields and high lint turnout.

More recently the textile industry began to advance rapidly in the South and certain fundamental changes have taken place in textile machinery. The manufacturing industry began to understand the great importance of evenness, length, quality and character of the staple in the manufacture of yarn and cloth. There is no industry in the world advancing any more rapidly than the cotton textile industry and there are yet new discoveries to be made.

We cannot maintain our position in cotton production when more than 40 per cent of the crop is non-tenderable. That very fact has a serious effect upon the price of cotton in Alabama. Of all the states in this country apparently, from the reports of the Department of Agriculture, Alabama stands at the bottom. It is, therefore, high time that we took pains to change our reputation.

Since 1926-27, when American cotton was at its highest consumption on foreign markets, there has been a steady decline in the use of American cotton and a distinct increase in the use of Egyptian, Indian and sundries cotton. There was a 2,000,000-bale reduction in the world consumption of American cotton during 1929-30, probably due almost entirely to business depression in America and in European countries. However, there was some turning to foreign grown cotton in foreign consuming countries, because they are cheaper in comparison with American cotton.

This acceleration in the use of foreign cotton at a time when the use of American cotton was declining ought to be significant enough to make any thoughtful man regard this condition as startling.

Work To Bring Results

Apparently if we are to hold our place or win back our prestige in the markets of the world for American cotton we must produce a quality that will attract and hold the buyers of the world. In other words if anybody else in any country can raise a better cotton at a lower price than we can in this country our problem is a pretty serious one. I do not mean to overlook the ability of our cotton spinning industry to convert our cotton into finished products of high value and great attractiveness, but even they cannot compete unless we put into their hands cotton of the type and quality which will produce thread and cloth to put them at least even with the foreign manufacturers.

I do not believe we need to be alarmed unless we are disposed to give up and quit. The important thing for us to do is to use what America is supposed to have a good supply of, namely, brains and skill and ingenuity, things which are natural to our American people. There is plenty of evidence in every experiment station in the South that cotton of good quality and good staple can be produced under boll weevil conditions with as high yields and as good lint turnout as the inferior quality of which we produce so much at the present time.

What we need to do is to get for farmers a fair consideration of the real comparative value of his variety of cotton. Supposing apple growers in Virginia were to sell their product "hog around." How long would they remain on the market as apple growers? It takes a better cotton to spin a 60 thread or higher than it does the coarser and lower grades. The finest thread is needed for the firmer and more expensive cloth, to make the broadcloth, the shirtings, and these other things which stimulate the use of cotton and it seems to be a perfectly natural thing for this movement toward discrimination in buying to come forward as it has. Another thing, new machinery is being invented for more accurate testing of length and strength of the staple. Today cotton is sold as seven-eighths inch cotton in which there may be 30 or 40 per cent of the individual lint in the sample much below seven-eighths. I aprehend that a sample of cotton with 80 per cent fairly and fully up to the staple length ascretained would be more valuable than another one with only 60 percent. Breeding and control measures must take these facts into account.

In Alabama we are attempting to set up machinery for dealing with this sort of a situation. The Alabama Farm Bureau, the extension service of our institution, the state experiment station, the Alabama Industrial Development Board, hundreds of farmers and even the governor and the whole state administration are interested in this enterprise. Through this organization we will attempt and are attempting to organize communities where uniformly acceptable varieties will be grown and the seed carefully handled and sold back to farmers. The same thing may be done on many state farms. There will be this Fall certain gin days in many parts of the state when only the seed cotton from certain varieties is handled and the seed carefully preserved. Our institution proposes to test varieties and to develop new ones, to help in the supervision of the work. I think there might be two or more communities in the state ultimately where thousands of acres are planted in the same variety and where through the county agents and experiment station workers we would get the seed controlled with care, sacked and sold back to farmers at a slight advance over ordinary seed and thus gradually redeem the name of the state in the quality of its cotton.

YOU know the fine crops many farmers around here get year after year with Chilean Nitrate of Soda. They side dress with Chilean and it pays them well. This year with Chilean selling at the lowest price in years, there's no sense in thinking you can economize with unproved fertilizers. Use plenty of Chilean and you'll get a good profitable crop.

Your Fertilizer Dealer

AND when you order, be sure to specify "Chilean". It contains rare elements in addition to Nitrogen that make it the super-nitrate. It is Nitrogen PLUS, for it contains iodine, boron, magnesium, plant foods in themselves. Remember that Chilean is the proved fertilizer. Side dress your crops with it. At the new low price and in the new 100 lb. bag, it is a better buy than ever before. Remember the two kinds—Original Chilean (Crystalline) and Champion Brand (Granulated) both natural nitrate.

WOMEN: watch your BOWELS

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all drug stores keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

Our singing which was held here last Sunday afternoon was enjoyed by everyone present, although the crowd was small, but the Lord said where two or three are gathered in His name He would be in their midst.

After the opening song, prayer was offered by Mr. T. L. Williams. Mr. Hudson Williams was elected chairman of this singing society. The directors were as fololws: Olin, Hudson, R. P., Charlie and Horace Wililams. Misses Virginia Little, Bessie Williams, and Mrs. Girtie Mae Little. The organists were Messrs. Olin, Hudson Wililams and Mrs. Girtie Mae Little.

Two quartets were sung, "Sitting at the Feet of Jesus," by Messrs. Olin, Hudson, R. P. and Horace Williams. "Prayer Is The Key," by Messrs. Olin, and Hudson Wililams, Miss Virginia and Mrs. Mrs. Girtie Mae Little.

We hope that it will be convenient for us to arrange a quartet band for each singing afternoon.

We didn't have many visitors with us but everybody will learn about our regular singing afternoon, which is every first Sunday afternoon, and come every time possible, especially the singers.

Health in this community seems to be improving some. The flu is dying down we are glad to say, and we hope the C. E. and Sunday School attendance will be better now.

A CRITIC'S ERROR

That minor personal habits have no important bearing upon one's ability is illustrated by a little joke that the late General Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal, was fond of telling on himself.

Long before the now obiquitous "coffin nails" became popular, or even respectable; the general became an inveterate cigarette smoker. He also parted his hair in the middle.

When Goethals, then a major, was assigned the difficult task of building the canal in 1907, after other eminent engineers had failed, a Washington newspaper editor commented unfavorably on his selection for the job. After recounting the failures of others to accomplish the task, the newspaper said: "And what in heaven's name can we expect of a man who parts his hair in the middle and smokes cigarettes?"

Yet Goethals did build the canal, although he continued to part his hair in the middle and smoke cigarettes as long as he lived.

FOR COMFORT AT SEA

Seasickness and other discomforts of ocean travel in stormy weather will be eliminated when the new gyro-stabilizer comes into general use, according to Science Service.

This stabilizer, which is really a huge top made to spin at high speed, has been developed to a practical stage, and several hundred have been ordered for installation in new vesesls. The largest so far made weighs 120 tons and its rotor is capable of being spun at the rate of 930 revolutions per minutes by means of a 200-horsepower motor. It takes an hour to get the rotor up to full speed, and it will continue to spin for two hours after the power is shut off.

Engineers say that a stabilizer of this size will prevent a 450-foot ship from rolling more than two degrees in a heavy storm.

A new 45,000 ton Italian liner now being built will have three huge gyro-stabilizers, it is understood, and it is expected that this device will be adopted for use generally in the finest ocean passenger ships of the future. Stabilizers have been successfully used for some time on yachts and other small craft, and it is believed that they will be equally effective on the largest ships.

If expectations are realized, ocean passengers of the future may be able, regardless of the weather, to eat their meals in comfort, and, best of all, retain them after they are eaten.

A Secret of Vegetable Cookery

By FREDERIC FRANCOIS GUILLOT
Chef, Hotel Astor, New York City

IN wise seasoning often lies the sole difference between a flat and tasteless vegetable dish, and one that presents an irresistible appeal to the most fastidious appetite. Salt and pepper have their supremely important parts to play, but in addition there is a third vegetable seasoner that deserves to stand on an equal footing.

Chef Guillot

This third fundamental seasoner is sugar, used not as a sweetener, but to point up the original flavor which the vegetable possessed when in the garden, but which it always loses to a greater or less degree before reaching the table. The proper proportions are an equal amount of sugar and salt for most of the green vegetables.

Carrots Dauphine — Cook until tender one quart thinly sliced carrots in boiling water to which has been added one teaspoon salt and one teaspoon sugar. Chop fine two medium-size onions and saute in three tablespoons butter until a light brown. Stir in four tablespoons flour. Cook until completely blended and smooth. Add gradually two cups meat stock; then one-fourth teaspoon paprika, dash of cayenne and one teaspoon lemon juice. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly. Drain carrots, re-heating if necessary. Arrange on strips of hot, buttered toast in serving dish. Pour over them the sauce, and serve very hot.

Squash Turrene — Mash three pints steamed squash and add one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar, one-fourth teaspoon ginger, three tablespoons butter, and three tablespoons thick cream. Beat until very light. Pile lightly on hot serving dish, re-heat if squash has cooled, and serve.

THE PARABLE OF THE POUNDS

Luke 19:11-26

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

A good story with a real point is effective in its teachings. Jesus often made use of a parable to drive home the truth. A parable can be defined as "An earthly story with a heavenly meaning." This time it is about a man of means who went away to receive an additional inheritance. Before leaving he handed over a pound, about $17 in value, to each of ten servants, and told them to make use of the money until he returned. It was mutually understood that there would be an accounting at that time. A pound then represented pay for 100 days of unskilled labor, and was an amount to command real attention.

We may idle time away or be busy meanwhile, but at last the hour comes when we must face the auditor. When the nobleman returned from the far country he asked for an accounting from the ten who had been tested by their use of the revolving fund. All do not have the same ability and equal results ought not to be expected. A bit of understanding and sympathy would help the plodder who may be equally faithful as the one who can produce the larger result. The first man presents ten pounds as the result of his trading and is heartily commended for his ability. The next man declares that his stewardship resulted in a gain of five additional pounds, and he too is praised.

The last man to meet the auditor comes with excuses only as he returns the original pound without any increment. Fear is the reason that he gives for the failure to even attempt to accomplish anything. His lack of energy shows that he is unworthy of any advancement and he is further distressed by utter condemnation.

Auburn Workers State Farm Rule

Instead of being a self-sustaining business as it was in the main a half century ago, successful farming today requires the production of food, feed, and other products plus the production of sufficient products for sale to bring an income commensurate with family needs.

This was declared by workers in agriculture of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn in connection with the suggestion that Alabama farmers return to the old practice of log-rollings, corn-shuckings, rail-splittings, house-raisings, and other such things of this nature.

"Such things," said the statement, were essential in the pioneer days when land was being cleared and homes built. In those pioneer days farmers needed only a very small income because they did very little buying. They made most of their tools and implements, instead of buying wire they made rails for fencing, they produced their own food and feed supply, and they even made or bought very little household equipment. Most of their clothes were made at home. Hence, very few things were bought. Consequently, there were few merchants because there was little demand for them.

"Under present conditions the successful farmer provides (1) for living at home and (2) for an income in order to have for himself and his family the numerous things which they need but can have only by buying with money.

"It is suggested that farmers provide for living at home and also for producing as much as they can for sale. All costs should be reduced to the minimum in order that the net income may be large, because the net income determines the extent of the farmer's purchasing power."

THE INDIAN PROBLEM

There has been an Indian problem in the United States ever since its earliest settlement, but that problem is being solved by the gradual absorption of the Red Man into our general population, according to Secretary Wilbur of the Department of the Interior.

We have about 350,000 persons of Indian blood in the entire country, of whom about one-third are in Oklahoma. The rest are widely scattered among 26 states, but even the reservation Indians are intermarrying with the white population and are rapidly assuming the white man's manner of living. A notable exception to this general trend is seen among the Navajos of Arizona, who have a reservation as large as the state of New Jersey and still hold aloof from the paleface.

It is the policy of the government to encourage the remaining Indians to obtain education and training with a view to their giving up reservation life and taking their places among the independent citizenship of the country. There are maintained 203 day and boarding schools for Indian pupils, where instruction, food, lodging and clothing are furnished free by Uncle Sam. These are privileges granted to no other element of our population.

Secretary Wilbur declares that it has become obvious that the Red Man eventually must lose his identity and become as the rest us us, and adds: "From a sentimental standpoint there is much to regret in this fact, but it is none the less inevitable."

Chilton County Abstract Co.
M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

J. T. ROCKETT HAS SECURED SHELL AGENCY

Succeeds Mack Wyatt As The Wholesale Distributor In This Section

J. T. (Tom) Rockett is now the wholesale distributor in Clanton of the Shell Petroleum Products, according to information given out several days ago.

Mr. Rockett succeeds Mack Wyatt as such distributor, who was the first to hold this place in Clanton when the Shell Petroleum Corporation opened here. The Shell gasoline and oil has become well known throughout the county since it entered here with Mr. Wyatt as distributor and its further advancement is assured with Mr. Rockett. Mr. Rockett stated to a representative of the News that he has as his assistant and truck driver, M. Z. Atchison. Mr. Atchison is also well known thruout this section, having had quite a bit of experience in the wholesale gasoline business. He was at one time connected with the wholesale distributor in Clanton of the Gulf products. Mr. Rockett also stated that in the very near future they hoped to have open a modern service station in Clanton dispensing the Shell products, but no definite announcement was made this week.

AFTER A PERIOD OF 50 YEARS S. E. BRUCE VISITS OLD HOME

After a lapse of something like fifty years, S. E. Bruce of near Clanton paid his old home place a visit. Mr. Bruce accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Duff, Mrs. G. D. Robinson and Miss Rexine Hines, of Birmingham, motored to Danville, Ala., in Lawrence County last Sunday where they attended a Memorial Day service at the Friendship church, near Danville.

Mr. Bruce appeared to have been rather invigorated over seeing his old home community again. He is one of this county's progressive farmers and well known throughout this section. He said he had a grand time seeing the men up there who he used to go to school with, and get into all kinds of mischief in his boyhood days. The old church at Friendship is still there, although some modern work has been done on it.

On the trip, Mr. Bruce stated that he saw very little land that was not under cultivation, and everybody in that section seemed to be in optimistic spirits and very busy at their farming, but not too busy to take Sunday off for a grand time together at the old Friendship church.

Travel Songs—

Whether they realize it or not, the organ music and the playing of a radio in the big Pennsylvania station that the jostling crowds hear are part of an experiment to speed the moving of passenger traffic.

The railroad has installed a full size organ of 35 stops and a combination radio and phonograph to find out if music will clear the building quickly by getting people to move faster.

It Hath Charms—

Right now, everyone is a bit puzzled as to the effectiveness of the project.

While it is true that music places travelers in a pleasanter frame of mind, it doesn't work so well when it comes to clearing the station. Last fall, Princeton alumni joined in the singing of their school song—then coming over the radio—so enthusiastically that the radio had to be shut off to get the rooters on the train.

What type of music shall be played on the organ is a problem. On religious holidays, church music alone is suitable; at the death of notables, funeral marches should be performed. Now the question is, does slow, mournful music pep up the passengers' actions, or the reverse? Then again, the music can't be too peppy, for they don't want the negro "red caps" to go into a Dixie jig when they play those down South tunes.

Mechanical Market—

The latest step to speed us into a put-a-coin-in-the-slot existence is the automatic grocery store right in your own apartment building.

A New York apartment has installed this device—called the Delemat—which responds to the click of a coin by disgorging a can of beans, a lamb chop, a bottle of milk or anything that can be bought at a regular grocery. The Delamat consists of a series of chambers with glass doors in which are displayed packages of food which rest on holders fastened to an endless belt. At the insertion of the proper coin and a turn of a handle, the belt lowers the package to an open compartment. The customer reaches in and takes out the package. The entire operation takes but five seconds.

Food requiring refrigeration is dispensed by the same mechanism from an electrically operated refrigerator.

Help Wanted—

There's one person, a hardware dealer, who doesn't believe all these stories about unemployment any more. Twenty-five young men answered his "Help Wanted" advertisement, but when they heard that the job was selling electric light bulbs, 24 of them firmly declined.

The one who did take it came rushing back in an hour with a fistful of orders that earned him $7.80 commission. Needing more salesmen, the dealer took the successful one to the city employment agency to tell the men what a lucrative job it was. Two out of 100 interviewed took the job. The others said they were "waiting for a salary job" or one that paid $50 a week.

The dealer went home, wondering how bad unemployment really was.

Big Chance—

On the other side of the picture we have the case of Mr. Kirchenberg, who advertised for a stenographer. When he arrived at his office, he found the entrance to the building blocked with literally hundreds of girls.

When he opened his door, a railing was torn down, tables were overturned and Mr. Kirchenberg was almost trampled underfoot.

Then one of the girls with a sporting idea yelled, "Let's all take a chance. Raffle the job off."

So they all pitched in and made up 500 numbers with duplicates. Then they drew. The lucky number was "42." Just to prove that they were all good sports, the other girls left the building cheering the winner.

Breeze From The Southland—

A southern music teacher blames New York for the ruin of public taste, saying that the "jazz music from the slums is impure, sentimental rot, a squawking, rasping, clanging jargon of instrumental noises."

Pass that corn-pone and let's have "St. Louis Blues" again.

party is composed of Mr. and Mrs. M. Lande, Cohen E. Stapp, Mell Martin and W. Mack Wyatt, who are representing Clanton at the convention.

The fellowship period lasted fifteen minutes, during which time every club on the North American Continent conducted an identical program with one carried out at the International Convention. There was a fellowship moment of silence, singing of "America" and "God Save the King" and a message from Raymond M. Crossman, of Omaha, Nebraska, president of Kiwanis International, was read.

In Miami the four local Kiwanis delegates Monday attended the opening business sessions. They heard outstanding Kiwanis officials and attended administrative conferences.

Various kinds of sandwiches, cake, chicken, iced tea and cold drinks, and other items made up the menu for the meeting of the local club last Monday night. Members brought guests to participate in this program, which took the place of the regular weekly luncheon held on Thursdays, and there will be no luncheon today at the regular meeting place.

The rural elementary schools are facing an emergency, be it resolved, that:

1. We deplore the fight of certain interests headed by Mr. J. C. Hodges of the Cosby-Hodges Milling Company, Birmingham, Alabama, manufacturers of Jazz feeds, and by Mr. Tom Kidd of the Farmers' and Ginners Oil Company, Birmingham, and their associates, placing such restrictions on the operation of the farmers' cooperative organization in Chilton County, and the other counties in Alabama, as will interfere with the service of this organization to the farmers.

2. We endorse cooperative buying of materials as go into economical production, which includes: fertilizers, feeds, seeds, spray materials, strawberry crates, plants, and etc.

3. We endorse the activities of the Federal Farm Board in aiding in cooperative selling of cotton, eggs, pecans, and other products the Board may be able to give us assistance in marketing.

4. We endorse cooperative selling of poultry, strawberries, watermelons, eggs, pecans, cattle, hogs, and other farm products that we may think to our advantage to market cooperatively.

5. We endorse and pledge active support of the bill sponsored by Dr. A. F. Harmon and the County Superintendents of Education for an increase of two million dollars for the public rural schools of Alabama.

6. We express our appreciation for Auburn and its Experiment Station and Extension Service, and their complete confidence in the work of these, our agencies, set up for our instruction, leadership and benefit.

CHAMBER GIVES SUGGESTION ON STATE FINANCE

Resolution Presented To Gov. Offering Cooperative Suggestion On Problem

Gov. B. M. Miller was presented on last Friday, May 8th, with a resolution adopted by the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, offering a cooperative suggestion for working out the state's financial program.

Among those comprising the committee who went to Montgomery from Birmingham, were some of the outstanding men in the business world of the state, who are recognizing the joint responsibility with the governor and the legislature of Alabama in their effort in solving the financial problems of Alabama.

The resolution as presented to Governor is as follows:

Resolution

Whereas, the business men of the State and certainly those represented by the membership of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, recognizing the joint responsibility with Governor B. M. Miller and the Legislature of Alabama, in an effort to provide funds for the difficult task the Administration faces in solving the financial and economic problems of the State of Alabama, and,

Whereas, the State of Alabama occupies a very unusual and favorable position in the Southern States with reference to its financial affairs by compari[illegible] and,

FINDS LARGE SNAKE IN STORE LAST SATURDAY MORNING

When Grady Taylor went to his store in West End to open up for business last Saturday morning, he was confronted at the outset with a large snake laying in the floor.

The snake was dead, and approximately three feet long, called by some a King snake. The building was searched for a possible place for the snake to have crawled in, but no place could be found. It is believed that it became entangled with an electric motor and became sufficiently injured to die.

"Our Band" Expresses Thanks To People

The group of string musicians known throughout the county and in other sections as "Our Band" sends a letter to the News expressing their thanks for the cooperation from the people in a recent contest conducted by Station WAPI in Birmingham. Following is the letter:

Editor Chilton County News,
Clanton, Ala.,

Dear Sir:

Please allow me a space in your paper to express our appreciation to our friends who were kind enough to send us their votes in the contest recently conducted by Radio Station WAPI. We also wish to thank The [illegible] and the Chilton County News for the help they have given us

We only won second place in this contest but we appreciate your votes just the same as we would have if we had won first place. We wish also to thank our friends for the numbers that they have requested that we play and we will play these numbers as soon as possible. We will also be pleased to hear from our friends in regard to how our program is coming in, as we are always glad to receive letters commenting on our program, as well as the requests.

Very truly yours,
OUR BAND, By Alton Culp.

Quakers—

The Religious Society of Friends, whose members are usually called "Quakers," has just amended its book of discipline, removing some of the restrictions on the dress and speech of its members. It still adheres to its fundamental tenet, which is simplicity in external things, as well as in spiritual things.

President Hoover, the most distinguished member of the Society of Friends, habitually wears the plainest and simplest clothes that any President has ever worn, the dark Quaker grey being his favorite color. But Quaker girls are no longer forbidden to dress modishly, although they are still warned against the extremes of fashion.

The vitality of the Quaker sect has been remarkable. Its moral influence has always been very powerful. And I have never heard of a Quaker in need of charity.

Sunlight—

Every scientist knows that the energy of the light rays from the sun, striking the earth, amounts to many million times the amount of energy developed by all the power plants in the world. Means of capturing this solar energy has long been discussed. Now Dr. Bruno Lange, of Berlin, has found a method of converting this sun energy into mechanical power. Sunlight striking a new type of photoelectric cell sets up an electric current which will turn a motor.

All that remains to be done to make the sun run all of the world's machines is to find a way of doing it cheaply enough. At present the cost of the apparatus is about two hundred and fifty times as much per unit of power generated as a modern steam or hydro-electric plant, but some day it will be cheaper than water power.

Ford—

To me the most interesting thing about Henry Ford is his inquiring mind. No other individual, and few institutions, spend so much time and money in the effort to find basic remedies for social and economic evils as Mr. Ford does. When he has an idea that he thinks will work he doesn't have to ask anybody else to finance it, but goes ahead and tries the experiment on a full-sized scale.

His latest plan to insure continuous employment to his workers is to shut down his plants for the annual inventory in summer instead of in winter, and to give all of those laid off a chance to work on his own and other farms, thus increasing agricultural production and maintaining the workers' incomes.

Mr. Ford has long believed that sixty days' work in the year is all that is really needed to produce most food crops. It will be interesting to see how his experiment works out.

534—

The City of New York has begun to dig away part of the shores of Manhattan Island in order to provide dock space for the new Cunard Liner, which will be 1,018 feet long—the first ship to exceed the thousand-foot length.

This giant of the seas is still known merely as number "534." It will probably be named the Britannia. She will cost thirty million dollars, and displace seventy-three thousand tons of water. She is expected to be not only the world's largest ship, but the fastest large ship.

When the airship replaces the water-borne ship for fast passenger service, as it certainly will, the Britannia and her like will still be useful cargo carriers.

Authors—

Arnold Bennett, the English novelist who recently died, left an estate of $500,000. That is not much for a successful novelist to accumulate in these days. Mary Roberts Rinehart has earned more than two million dollars with her pen. Sinclair Lewis can count on at least $100,000 profit from every novel he writes.

There are more people reading books in America today than ever before, and even obscure authors are earning more money than most bankers and business men ever get.

I know one newspaper man who wrote a book that was published a month ago, and which has already sold 13,000 copies. He gets twenty-five cents for each copy sold, and it took him six weeks to write the book, which makes its first month's earnings high pay for a newspaper man.

A recipe for riches: Write a book, but be sure it is an interesting book that people will want to read.

Union Springs

(JACOBS CHAPEL)

I'm very grateful that my last week's letter missed the waste basket. So, I'll take leave for another chat.

Farmers here are very busy this week working in their crops, but my, the cold weather lasts so long until crops in this section of the county are not growing much.

We are glad to know that Mr. Olen Crumpton is improving. Mr. S. N. Waldrop is up and going about now. Health in general here is good.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Chapman are the proud parents of a fine baby girl, who came to their home Friday night. The mother and baby are getting along nicely. Also Mr. and Mrs. Houston Pate have a fine baby boy, weighing 12 pounds, who came to their home Sunday afternoon.

Our Teacher Training Class will finish the first book of the Sunday School manual next Sunday and will have the examination the same evening.

We are to have a special service at Union Springs church next Sunday night, beginning at seven-thirty o'clock. A special sermon is to be delivered on "Consecration." We cordially invite everybody to come and worship with us.

Several of our people went to the singing at Macedonia last Sunday and reported a very nice time, also several went to Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Robinson and sister spent the day in Clanton Tuesday, also Mr. Joe Waldrop was with them. He was taking a treatment from the eye specialist. Hope that he soon gets all right.

Mr. and Mrs. Newt Erwin spent last Saturday and Sunday in Bessemer.

Rev. W. W. Dyer spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Robbie Crumpton.

News is scarce, so I'll stop.

Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskow, Pastor

If you care to hear a pastor in Clanton who believes in "Peace," then come to the Methodist church next Sunday at 11 a.m. There will be a terrific indictment of war in this message.

We have a full program for next Sunday. Sunday school at 9:45, an object lesson for the children at 10:30, preaching at 11 a.m. Preaching at Isabella at 3 p.m. Leagues at 7:15, and and preaching at 8 p.m. Please note that we have changed our night services from 7:30 to 8 o'clock.

We had a good day last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Marcus united with our church. They reside at Lay Dam. The pastor preaches at Lay Dam every Tuesday night at seven o'clock.

When you come to church with us, if you are a stranger, pause long enough for us to speak to you. We want to be friendly. Help us and we will be happy.

Spies Get Sailing Dates.

The success of submarine warfare had been largely dependent upon advance knowledge concerning movements of vessels. As there was no doubt that the sailing dates of much of our shipping reached Germany through spies, one way to reduce the danger would be to close such sources of information.

In the beginning the practice by our War department of transmitting secret information was extremely loose. The data regarding sailing was, of course, sent to my headquarters, but at the same time, or often before. It was also given to both French and British military and naval attaches and missions in Washington. They immediately transmitted the information by cable to their respective governments, with the result that it usually became almost common knowledge.

But there were other sources of information possessed by the enemy. One message intercepted by the French, sent from some wireless station in Spain to the German general staff, announced the arrival of several American vessels at Nantes and of 10,000 American soldiers at St. Nazaire, and also gave the routes taken by our transports.

Another, evidently intended for submarines, reported the departure of a convoy of transports from New York. These and similar facts were cabled at once to Admiral Sims and to Washington.

Leadership Big Problem.

Probably the most important factor in building up an aggressive army is the selection of leaders. Without sufficient leadership the finest of troops may suffer defeat by inferior forces skillfully led.

The following was my recommendation to Secretary of War Baker:

"My observation of British and French armies and most exacting arduous service conditions at the front fully convince me that only officers in full mental and physical vigor should be sent here. Contrary course means certain inefficiency in our service and possible later humiliation of officers concerned. General officers must undergo extreme effort in personal supervision of operations in trenches. Very few British or French division commanders over forty-five or brigadiers over forty.

"We have too much at stake to risk inefficiency through mental or physical defects. Strongly recommend conditions be fully considered in making high appointments and suggest that no officer of whatever rank be sent here for active service who is not strong and robust in every particular. Officers selected for appointment general officer of line should be those with experience in actively commanding troops. Officers not fulfilling above conditions can be usefully employed at home training troops."

Little Effort at Selection.

These recommendations were not altogether followed at home. In fact very little effort seems to have been made at selection, so that some officers without ambition or initiative, whose inefficiency should have been well known, and others whose age and physical condition were such as to disqualify them for strenuous service, were given important assignments.

Most of them were known to me and not a few who, under the rule of seniority, were commanders of regiments and departments, had lacked the energy even to train their commands or themselves in battle exercises, here favorable opportunity had been offered.

The policy of the War department from beginning to end seemed to be to appoint officers to the higher grade, according to seniority, with the intention of weeding out the inefficient later on. This appears to have been the department's idea of selection and the result was practically no selection at all. After the appointment of such officers it was a slow process to eliminate them.

In the Training Area.

The First division was now well settled in its training area in the region of Gondrecourt, south of Bar-le-Duc. The troops of the division had already established friendly relations with the French peasantry and had quickly adapted themselves to their new mode of life.

As the natural consequence of the financial condition of the frugal French provincial, he was wont to profit by the presence of the British and ourselves, and the open-handed payday habits of the Americans served to give some encouragement to this inclination. As a result some coolness grew up later between our men and their early friends.

In all history I do not believe there has ever been an army on foreign soil so considerate and observant of the rights and interests of the people. The peasant class made a strong appeal to every man in the army. Their simplicity, their love of the soil and the long hours of work in the fields by the old men and women and young boys and girls remained the constant admiration of our soldiers.

I am inclined to think, however, that the excellent behavior of the men in the first contingent, their rather unmilitary appearance in ill-fitting uniforms and their apparent lack of formal discipline created the impression in the minds of the French officials that they were too kind-hearted to become aggressive fighting troops.

At the conclusion of my inspection of various places Chaumont was selected as the best site for our general headquarters. It was on our line of communications to the front and centrally placed as to probable sectors of our operations. The fine stone regimental barracks became our headquarters and we were able to obtain ample billeting accommodations in houses for all except the enlisted men, who were provided with temporary barracks.

CHAPTER XI

In the organization of our armies for the World war it was evident that if any considerable numbers were to be sent abroad an additional force would be needed over and above the regular army and the National Guard.

The War department therefore established what was called the national army, to be composed principally of men who were to come into service through the draft. Most of the divisions of the national army were organized in August and September, 1917.

As the time approached to begin the training of the smaller units it was found that after equipping the special troops urgently needed in France there was little equipment left even for the additional men required to fill up the National Guard.

Yanks Learning to Use the Bayonet.

Unfortunately, this made it necessary to delay calling out men for the units of the national army. However, considerable numbers were called into service and proceeded with preliminary instruction, but the lack of equipment seriously delayed their progress.

Visiting Billeting Areas.

My diary notes the following:

Paris, Tuesday, August 21, 1917. —Visited billeting areas of Forty-seventh French and our First division with General Petain on Sunday.

Inspected St. Dizier regulating station and witnessed attack near Verdun yesterday. Visited French hospital at Souilly.

Returned this morning with M. Painleve, minister of war, on his train.

As I had accepted General Petain's invitation to see the French offensive that was to take place August 20, I motored to French general headquarters on the 18th, accompanied by Colonel Palmer and Captain Boyd, and after dinner left with General Petain and two or three members of his staff on his train for an inspection of French and American troops the following day. We reached Gondrecourt the next morning and began the day with a review of the French Forty-seventh infantry division, which was paraded on a prominent plateau near Houdelaincourt.

This division had been in every serious engagement of the war and its losses had been very heavy, as could be easily surmised from the youthful appearance of the officers, most of whom had risen from the ranks to replace casualties among their seniors. General Petain told them that because of its fine record the division had been given the special honor of assisting in the instruction of the American First division.

Visit Our Troops in Training.

Accompanied by Brigadier General Bundy, Colonel Cruikshank and others, I took General Petain to see some of our troops being trained in throwing grenades and in the use of the French automatic rifle. An amusing story was told us in connection with grenade instruction. One of the men insisted on throwing his grenade immediately after setting the fuse instead of waiting till he slowly counted seven, which was necessary so the explosion would occur as the grenade reached its destination.

After being cautioned several times by his officer the man said: "Captain, I just can't hold these grenades any longer because I can feel them swelling in my hand."

We visited several villages occupied by French and American troops. As we passed through our billets and inspected the kitchens, Petain particularly inquired about the components of our ration and the manner of cooking and serving meals. The French soldiers were furnished wine in place of coffee provided for our men and the allowances differed in other respects, ours containing a larger meat component. But when it came to cooking the French were ahead of us, although our men preferred our own food to either the French or British ration.

Wounded Nurse Decorated.

Motoring to Souilly, the headquarters of the French Second army, we met Major General Fayolle, commanding the group of armies of the center, and Major General Guillaumat, commander of the Second army, whose chief of staff explained in detail the plan of the battle that was to take place next day. We had luncheon with General Fayolle, whom later I came to regard as one of the ablest of the French generals. In appearance he was rather frail, no longer young, but active and alert.

On our visit to the military hospital at Souilly General Petain decorated Mdlle. de Baye, a nurse, with the croix de guerre, as she lay on a cot suffering from a severe wound inflicted by a piece of shell two days before. When he told her who I was she said: "I am glad you are here, general, to see how a French woman can suffer for her country." She was so happy, however, that I am sure that for the moment she had entirely forgotten her pain.

Sees French Attack.

The attack of the Second French army, although made astride the Meuse river, was directed principally against Hill Mort Homme and Hill 304, both famous in the struggle of 1916. To destroy the wire entanglements and demolish trenches, as a precaution against heavy losses, the infantry assault was preceded by four days' continuous bombardment, and relatively the amount of artillery ammunition expended exceeded that of any previous engagement, its value being, as I remember it, some $75,000,000.

The proportion of the artillery force as compared to the infantry in this battle was as eleven to ten. The firing attained such precision and volume that the German troops in the forward positions were submerged and the attacking infantry reached most of its objectives by nightfall the first day, making an advance of five kilometers and capturing 6,000 prisoners.

The sector where the French attack took place was to have a peculiar interest for me before the end of the war. My headquarters as commander of the first army one year later occupied the building in Souilly, then used by Major General Guillaumat, and the line reached by Corvisart's troops in the battle became our jump-off line in the Meuse-Argonne battle. In fact, every foot of the ground covered in this inspection with General Petain became associated later with America's greatest effort in the war.

Petain's Contact Valuable.

After visiting the French installations and the manifold activities carried on behind this front with the shifting masses of combat troops and the thousands engaged in the services of supply and transportation, it seemed quite improbable that we should be able to marshal a sufficient army in time to replace the French on this front before 1919.

I found it most agreeable as well as instructive to be with Petain in this intimate way and have an opportunity to hear something of his experience. His discussion of the defense of Verdun, in which he played an important part, being second in command, was especially entertaining. As we drove about he spoke of the courage of his troops and of the tremendous losses they had sustained. He pointed out the vast amount of road work, including the Voie Sacree from Bar-le-Duc to Verdun, rebuilt under his direction for the constant movements of large bodies of troops and supplies necessary to maintain the defense.

In lighter vein his comments on French politicians during this trip were amusing, if not always complimentary, and he congratulated me many times on being so far removed from political interference. One afternoon the conversation drifted to painting and he asked me how many times I had sat for my portrait. "Several times already," I said. "The last one, which was very good, was done by a distinguished artist by the name of Jonas (English Jonah) for l'Illustration."

Immediately he said: "Don't let them publish it! Don't do it! Every officer whose portrait by Jonas has appeared in that journal has been relieved from his command."

Not that I am superstitious, quite the contrary, but I immediately forbade the publication of the portrait and to this day it has never appeared Builds Up French Morale.

From the time of Nivelle's failure in April the depression in the French armies had been so great that Petain, who succeeded him, had been content simply to hold the trenches, and no French offensive operation of consequence had been attempted until this one. From the moment of his assignment Petain began to build up the shattered morale of his armies and probably no other officer in France could have performed the task so well.

Petain's immense success in the defense of Verdun had won for him the confidence of the army and the country, and yet he remained the same modest, unassuming character, consistent and conservative. He, perhaps better than any other, understood the temperament of the French soldier, whom he handled with infinite patience and tact.

CHAPTER XII

In view of the gravity of our tonnage situation, it was highly important that it be brought forcibly to the attention of the allies. Apropos the approaching inter-allied conference on shipping, I cabled Washington August 23, 1917, in part as follows: " . . . The British and, especially, the French have reached absolute limit of man power and any augmentation their military force cannot be expected. Imperative hasten our organization and training so that we will have the troops contemplated your project in Europe for active service by May or June.

"Military activities of allies on land should be strongly reinforced by combined navies and destruction U-boat bases accomplished if possible. High British army officers confidentially condemn waiting policy British admiralty. . . . In view of gravity of shipping question recommend our government insist upon aggressive policy by combined British and American navies.

" . . . Our position in this war very strong. . . . Allies now fully recognize dependence upon our co-operation and we need not hesitate demand both aggressive naval policy and full share commercial shipping. Recommend American representative shipping conference be instructed accordingly."

Numbers of officers of all armies felt very strongly that to check the losses by submarines the two navies should take some risk and attempt to destroy the bases from which these boats operated. It is not known whether any steps were ever taken to convey this suggestion to the combined navies.

"I ought to be able to sell my stuff as soon as it's ready. Well—I'm doing that now. I take my butterfat, eggs and poultry to the nearest Swift & Company produce plant.

"And I ought to have ready cash just as soon as I make delivery. I get that too. Swift & Company pays me for all they take, as they take it, at the full market price.

"I ought to patronize my own community, and deal with other people who do. Yes—that's true. Well, Swift & Company has 55,000 employes in over 500 towns and they all work for the company in their own home towns and spend their money there too. They pack and distribute the Swift brands right where they live. Many of them are our own townsfolk, helping this town to grow, helping to support our schools, stores and banks.

"It seems to me that I'm getting a good, square deal now. And it gives me a real feeling of security to know that I'm part of an organization of 55,000 employes and 48,000 shareholders; that it is able to make a reasonable return on their investment and operate successfully on an average profit from all sources of only a small fraction of a cent per pound."

"Saving The Railroads"

Writing in Collier's Weekly, John T. Flynn, associate editor of that magazine, says that saving the railroads is a major national problem. "It is a problem," he states, "which affects the investments of a million people, the jobs of a million and a half men and women directly and as many more indirectly, and the servicing of countless industries which cannot otherwise exist. . . "

Mr. Flynn points out that railroad net earnings increased between 1921 and 1929, at a time when gross earnings were steadily declining. This was accomplished by decreasing expenses. A tremendous drive against inefficiency and waste was carried out, with the result that the lines established an amazing record for service per dollar received. The railroads have managed to haul about 20 per cent more traffic with 20 per cent less operating expense

But the time has been reached, according to rail executives, when it is impossible to further cut operating expense. Further savings can be effected only at the expense of service. And thus the problem of "saving the railroads" arises.

The main question, of course, is how? Mr. Flynn says that there are only two ways—by getting more business or higher rates? There are great obstacles in the path of either course. The best thought of the nation is now needed to save one of the most essential of all industries from disaster.

This Business Of Talking

Since the World War eleven Armistice Days have been observed and always there are repenting speeches and mournful reflections. For the past five years there has been held annually a session of the so-called World Disarmament Conference. But those members attending, after leaving the Armistice Day ceremonies evince a sudden change of mentality when they step into the assembly room of the Disarmament Conference. They immediately begin to struggle and vie with each other for supremacy of armed strength. The result is usually another conference. This procedure costs nations much money.

Such business of talking and doing nothing does not confine itself to disarmament conferences. It is spread over other such meetings even down to consul meetings of small municipalities.

If the leaders of world powers were really interested in the welfare of the people, and take that under consideration, they would easily win the support of the people. The same will apply to smaller conferences of men in power. But what can such men expect from their people, when the idea is obvious that they expect to rule or ruin? Conditions are such now that the people want something to run smoothly in their government. They place a man in office as president, governor, judge, or mayor, hoping and trusting that he is the man for the job, basing their hopes on speeches and statements made by the candidate before election. But when he is elected and allows outsiders to influence him in his actions, and tries to seek revenge after being elected, to rule or ruin, then the government, although it be only a small town, is usually corrupt. Maybe there is too much talking and not enough doing, not only in national affairs, but in state and city affairs.

Governmental Waste

It is a sad commentary on the efficiency of governmental methods that practically every state and municipality in the country is faced with a financial crisis, as a result of mismanagement or worse, while the Federal government exhibits a mounting deficit.

Still, our countless departments, bureaus and other agencies for the spending—and often squandering—of tax money clamor for more and more funds. Bureaucrats lie awake nights, it would seem, thinking up new ways of spending the public revenues, while legislators also lose sleep trying to discover how to impose new tax burdens. Through the operation of this vicious circle the cost of government in the United States has increased to more than four times what it was in 1913.

An increase of governmental expenses from year to year is to be expected, owing to the growth of population and wealth, but the rapidity of increase in recent years is entirely out of proportion to that growth, even making liberal allowance for the improved public facilities which have been provided.

Too much of the public money is devoted to purposes foreign to the legitimate functions of government. For example, hundreds of millions of dollars are appropriated for the purpose of bringing more farm land under cultivation through irrigation, while other hundreds of millions are appropriated in an effort to aid in disposing of the surplus farm crops that are raised on the land under cultivation already. The mania for investigations is costing the taxpayers many millions, with practically no resulting benefit to anyone. Still other millions are expended in the attempted enforcement of a multitude of laws and regulations of doubtful advantage to the public.

All this governmental waste will continue until taxpayers themselves are aroused to the point of calling a halt, through relegating to private life the legislators and other officials who are responsible for it.

of people with nothing to do and plenty of time to do it in."

Have just been reading up on this Robot business. To those who are not so well posted on Robots I will tell that Robots are these mechanical men. Mechanical beings with limbs and trunks of steel, photo-electric brains, nerves of copper, and go to sleep by the thermometer and are awakened by the same.

Robots pump water, keep tab on the filling of reservoirs, do unheard of mathematical problems that the human brain would ponder over for months. The Robot does it in a few minutes. The Robot answers the telephone, sweeps the floor, washes your clothes, and will maybe mind the baby if properly coaxed. The Robot does your cooking, washes dishes, dispenses soft drinks.

Now all that kind of worries me when I give it a lot of thought. Suppose Clanton should have something of an epidemic of "Robots" so to speak. Then Albert Davis, Bob Alred, Happy, Sunshine and all the soda jerkers here would be out of a job, because all a customer would have to do would be to drop a coin in the slot and get his drink. All our cafe waitresses would be out of work. Our negro washer-women would strike it hard. The wives could just sit around and play bridge, go swimming, etc. We would just have nothing to do and plenty of time to do it in. After all that don't worry me so much. I suppose if science and inventions keep on, we wouldn't even have much need for the old Stork and his deliveries.

* * * *

Spruce Up, company's coming. Clanton has in store for it several events. Some of these events will bring hundreds possibly from other towns and cities. Of course we want to look our best, as if our girl-friend was going to call on us, or maybe her parents will make a call. So, let's spruce up, because company is coming.

* * * *

And we'll do it almost every time. When things are beginning to look up, and we've got a little money on hand, we will almost every time grasp at the least little thing that we think, or have been told will aid in increasing business. Better watch our step, there are a lot of sharpers out now with good times tales—just to get your money.

* * * *

We still have a few extremely modest girls round town so I've found. Went to a fire the other morning and left before many arrived on the scene. Just as I was leaving I passed some girls, two of whom happened to recall they had on no hose, and hesitated for a moment before going any farther. Be modern, little girls, and you will be noticed.

* * * *

Dignity is all right, but walking around like a cathedral, as some folks do, arouses a desire to pray rather than to purchase.

* * * *

Who said opposites attract? Perhaps they do. But I know of one incident where opposites didn't attract. It was the other day when I was coming out of a certain cafe out-of-town, and ran head-on into one of the daintiest little girls with hair almost the color of mine. The impact was so sudden and hard that our heads butted together. Naturally that called for apologies, etc., and then you know one thing sometimes leads on to another and another ,ad infinitum, and I was late coming home.

* * * *

I wonder whose idea that was to put that banner with the words, "Old Economy Himself" down in the gutter here the other day.

* * * *

Found out something rather good about a certain filling station operator here the other day. Hadn't been stopping there at all, until I got caught short of gas and had to stop there, but I'll be dropping round every now and then hereafter, because he is certainly friendly. More so than I had expected.

* * * *

Maplesville strikes me as a rather friendly sort of town to visit. There is a fine bunch of business men there, but I wonder why they haven't created a market over there for their farmers' products. Not a bad idea, you people of Maplesville, and farmers over in that section ought to be raising a lot of strawberries, too.

* * * *

I've been trying to keep up with all that is going on in the state and nation, and by George, it's a job to try to keep straight on who's who round these parts. And I been wondering who is keeping all this down so our great-great-great-grandchildren can read about it in their history books.

* * * *

I'll bet that mock trial at the courthouse tonight is gonna be a wow. I'm gonna see it, if possible. I think i am going to bet on Otto, but then again, I think maybe to win. I'd bettes bet on Miss Orr.

* * * *

Folks, I am afraid I am going to have some bad news for you soon. I'm not sure but there is a possibility of me bidding you adieu, within a very short time. But it will be only for a short time. I got to go off to school for awhile and learn a thing or two maybe, and then I'll be back. I know the ed will miss me, and I hate to think of you readers missing me. But fret not, because I'll only be away for a week or so. I need a rest, and maybe you do too.

* * * *

I wonder if the stores here are gonna close up for Thursday afternoons during the shmmer. Does anybody know yet?

* * * *

I extend heartfelt sympathy this week to the family and relatives of Mrs. W. T. Darnell of Vincent, Ala., who died last Friday night in a Talladega infirmary. Mrs. Darnell is the mother of Mrs. J. B. Atkinson of Clanton.

Sympathy is also extended to Mr. and Mrs. Willie Jones and family on the death of their beloved daughter, Ruth.

HOW MUCH DEFICIT?

Editor Chilton County News:

Having been the "Daddy" of the Chilton County News, it affords me great pleasure to observe the constant strides it is making up the tortuous hill of success.

It was born Sept. 15, 1921, and will soon be ten years of age, and I hope you will give it a birthday blowout on its next birthday that will be fitting to its wonderful progress and improvement during the management and guidance of its present force. I tender you my sincere congratulations, Billy, for having put the Chilton County News at the very top of the ladder that Alabama weekly newspapers must climb.

Had you thought much about the Revenue Bill that Gov. Miller is trying to put over? Talk about sublime gall, that bill is the limit. How he can face a single voter in Alabama, after all of the great and glorious economy he promised us on the stump during the campaign, passes my comprehension. If I was in his shoes I would feel just like I was branded. All of the members of the legislature who support the wild and undemocratic Revenue Bill submitted by Miller, Feagin & Co., may fold up their habiliments of official attire and return forever into darkest pits of oblivion. Never again will the voters permit them to even smell of the feed trough. They can all write "d.d.d." very appropriately after their signatures, so far as political recognition is concerned forever afterwards.

So far as a bond issue is concerned, the calling of an election to vote on that subject is a willful waste of time and money. That question is already settled for a long time. With taxes already so high that the state is robbing thousands of good citizens of their homes, it is worse than folly to suppose that these very victims of the waste and profligacy of the political crooks who are pretending to manage the affairs of the State, will "stand and deliver" any more right soon.

How about this "Great State Deficit," we hear so much about? Only a fraction over $3,000,000 behind on January 19, 1931 and now they claim the amount is somewhere "between 12 and 20 millions" already. Why don't they get some high school boy to go down there and figure the exact amount up and tell the people precisely how we stand. The experts down there have had over three months to find out this very thing, and yet, they tell us it is "about so and so." They evidently can not frame the story up so it will hold water.

There are two very palpable reasons for this "Deficit" story. One of them is they want more money to "play with" and the other is they hope to scare the voters up and make them cough up a few more millions to satisfy their greed.

The voters have been an easy mark in years gone by for these crude stories that the tricksters frame up, but that good day has gone forever and hereafter they are going to see and know what they are buying before they pay for it.

Your $45,000,000 Bond issues and your income tax law to be left to the people are already dead and it's up to the legislature to announce the date of the funeral.

I thought a good many times during the Miller campaign that a person who had lived 28 years in a town that was properly electrified and when the citizens used electric lights in their homes and still burned lamps for illumination was too far behind the times to be a suitable man for governor, and I have seen no cause to change my mind yet. It would be a graceful thing for him to tender his resignation.

MORE ABOUT THE ALMSHOUSE

Chilton County Newspaper:

There appeared in your paper on Thursday May 7th, 1931, an article by W. T. Hand, of Jemison, Alabama, which was relative to the County Poor House and as I am the Keeper of the Poor House I think in justice to myself and to the County as a whole that this article should be answered and some facts be given to the people. I do not know Mr. Hand's purpose in writing this article other than about one year ago he came to the poor house and asked me to show him around the place which I did, and Mr. Hand stated there that he was very much surprised at the way the poor of the County were being treated and that they were being treated much better than he expected to find. He came back on two or three occasions and in the meantime I learned that he was causing quite a bit of dissension and trouble and was criticizing to the inmates and was causing trouble in general among them. This information I received from the inmates at the poor house and the people outside. Upon one occasion when Mr. Hand came there I approached him concerning this and told him what I was doing and it resulted in a more or less personal difficulty between Mr. Hand and myself. Mr. Hand has never been back to the poor house since and I might say here that Mr. Hand has never seen a single meal served at the poor house. The next thing I knew was when three investigators from the Governor's office, as I understand, came to the poor house and stayed some two or three days and left. The next thing I knew Mrs. Davis and a man came out of the State inspector's office, Dr. Andrews, and stayed about five days and I might say that neither of them have ever filed any report against the poor house, and that no report of anything wrong was filed with the Commissioners court, and so far as I have ever learned or that was ever filed, no criticism was made by them of the poor house.

I might state also that the Grand Jury in March of this year made no criticism against the poor house, but on the contrary commended the conduct of the poor house and several members of the Grand Jury told me personally while making this investigation that they were well pleased with conditions and that they did not see how it was handled and kept as clean and nice as it was.

I might also state that at various times and immediately after Mr. Hand was there the county commissioners made a thorough investigation in the absence of Mr. Bean, and found the conditions to be properly handled and had no criticism to make.

Mr. Hand mentions in his letter of selling the poor to the lowest bidder, and in reply I would like to state that he is either ignorant of the fact or else has willfully mis-stated the situation, for the commissioners court does not award the contract to the lowest bidder and this has never been the practice.

I would like to state here that Mr. Hand often goes to see Oliver Smith, who once had the poor house and who has been prejudiced against most everyone of the Keepers since he was Keeper, and Mr. Smith is personally unfriendly with me and these two have seen fit to stir up all trouble possible at the poor house.

I would like also to take this opportunity to invite any citizen at any time to visit the poor house and to investigate the clothing, the food and general surroundings and I am sure that he will be convinced that these poor people are being treated and cared for in a manner far above the average person of the county and without exception in a far better condition then they were ever accustomed to. The county has just erected a new building which is modern and cleanly kept, with provision for fresh air and sunshine and is properly screened and with every provision made for the comfort of these old people. I do not ask you to take my word but simply invite you to come and see for yourself.

I think any citizen has a right to criticize the poor house if sincerely made and I think any citizen has the right to see and know the conditions of the poor, and I blame no man for criticizing the conditions but on the other hand, I think when a man of W. T. Hand's type and his past record attempts to harm me in criticizing the poor house for things that he knows are absolutely untrue that I fear they are injustice to the county and to myself, that I should also have a right to give my views. It has been the practice of W. T. Hand for the past ten years to stir up strife and trouble wherever possible and through personal grievances, it is well known by the people that he has been left some money, and has nothing to do but to cause trouble and dissension where-ever he could. I believe tho' I am truthful in saying that during all of this time that he has failed in every point he has attempted. Mr. Hand was the one who secured the State Officials to investigate the poor house and now because they would not perjure them-selves to give a false report he has turned against them. It is clear that Mr. Hand is not seeking the truth but is seeking to harm and hurt some one for his own personal grudge.

I think that the people of the County by this time know Mr. Hand, but I deemed it my duty to protect Chilton County from the slurs thrown at it by Tom Hand when in fact and truth his criticisms are wholly unfounded as shown by the various investigations made.

I invite you to come and see for yourself and let you be the judge as to the conditions and as to Tom Hand.

A DEBATE ON RELIGION

Editor Chilton County News:

You will find somewhere in this paper the announcement of a debate to be held in the courthouse Monday evening, May the 18th, 8:00 p.m., between W. L. Bowen and the writer. You may recall an article in last week's issue headed, "Is This Free America," by Mr. Bowen. I want to say this much to the public concerning this debate.

I consider it a matter of great importance to every Christian and all who love and appreciate the Bible an believe it, as a whole. I have neve thought much of debates between denominations and would not enter int such a debate, but here is a compan of people who belong to nothing an who make bold to say that all of ou denominations are organizations of th Devil and all ministers are Satan's representatives and they are selling thei literature by the rankest kind of deciet. Therefore, knowing them as I do and knowing the rottenness of thei literature I have consented to this debate in order that the people of thi county and surrounding country migh know the truth.

I hope the people will come. Your for the whole Book.

It Only Hurts The Hypocrites!

One writer in last week's paper accuses Rutherford of fighting th churches. His fight is against the Devil, and Devil religion. He is 100% fo true Christianity. There is only on true church; but tradition of the elder spoken of in Matt. 15:2,3 has cause hundreds of so called churches. Th particular blind guide described i Matt. 15:14 says we should not patronize these people because they have n home. If he had read Matt. 8:20 h would have found that Jesus had "no where to lay his head."

Another critic who has Reverend i front of his name is warning agains the Rutherford literature. Does he no know the Bible says to reverence Go and His son Jesus Christ; and then only? Some religious leaders have D. D. on their names. How many peopl know that "Doctor of Divinity" is no a scriptural term but "Dumb Dogs" is! Read Isa. 56:10, 11 and see if it don' fit the D. D.s. It calls them shepherds and watchmen. Read it! It is in th dear Old Bible. If it is too hot ge after old Isaiah. He don't care wha you think!

The Devil and all his hosts can't sto the truth now. We have tried hundreds of denominations for years. W have tried politics, prohibition, leagu of nations, and the sick old world i getting worse fast.

Lets try God's way once. He says we must have a brand new world "ne heaven and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Pet. 3:13. That i what Rutherford says is the only hope Dangerous to Hypocrites. Yours fo truth.

Verbena High Announces Commencement Exercise

Happened in Hollywood," a three-ac comedy, by Katherine Kavanaugh, is a royalty play also, and is produced by special arrangements with the Dramatic Publishing Company, of Chicago This play is built around the theme o a young man breaking into the movie by impersonating a prince. This theme is developed in a much more pleasing way than is usual, in most plays, situations full of humor arising, and much comedy resulting. This play is directed by Mrs. W. E. G. Sutton.

Verbena High School assures the general public that these plays are good they measure in quality with the best that have been presented, and the acting is on the high standard usual with plays presented at Verbena. Prices will be, for the plays, 15 cents for children and 25 cents for adults.

Friday night, May 22nd, graduating exercises will be held for the Senior III Class. Ten students are candidates for diplomas: Mary Frances Boyd, Rachel Messer, Queenie Pinson, Ad[illegible] Sue Sharp, Mabelle Stange, Justin Dupree, Lloyd Pinson, Milton Sharp, Archie Stroud and G. C. Weldon. V[illegible]ma Patterson, Class of '27, is also a member of the class doing special study

The commencement address will be delivered by Dr. W. L. Spencer, head of division of secondary-education of the state. Dr. Spencer is a forceful speaker who knows more of the high schools of Alabama, possibly, than any other man. He is a hard worker, a very earnest and forceful speaker, direct and pleasing. This who will come to hear him are assured of food for thought.

ROBERTA CURRY WILL SOON MOVE TO CHICAGO FROM N.Y.

Mrs. William T. Darnell, who is known to countless Clanton friends as Miss Roberta Curry before her marriage, daughter of Mrs. Clara B. Curry, will soon go to Chicago, where she will make her home. Mr. Darnell, who is a geologist, has recently received a promotion in his work and sent to Chicago from New York, where they have been for some time.

At present Mrs. Darnell, in company with Dr. Mary Sue Mullins, daughter of Mrs. P. D. Wilson of Clanton, are spending some time vacationing and visiting friends at Castle-on-The-Hudson, in New York.

M. L. WARE'S CONDITION MUCH IMPROVED IN BIRMINGHAM

Reports from the South Highland Infirmary in Birmingham last Tuesday concerning the condition of M. L. (Matt) Ware, stated that he is resting well, following recent operations.

Mr. Ware, operator of the popular Matt's Lunch Shoppe of Clanton, has been confined in the Birmingham Infirmary for over two weeks. His condition was not so good the middle of last week, but he is improving now, and appears to be on the road to recovery. Mr. Ware has been greatly missed from his daily haunts and his familiar place in his lunch shop here, and his many friends sincerely wish for him a very speedy recovery.

LOCAL CHAPTER O. E. S. RESOLUTION OF RESPECT FOR MRS. G. C. HARRIS

The local Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star passed the following resolution on the death of Mrs. G. C. Harris:

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call from our midst unto Himself our beloved and faithful sister, Bessie Belle Harris, therefore be it resolved by The Julia Beauchamp Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star of Alabama:

First, That our order has sustained an irreparable loss in influence and beauty in life and spirit in the departure of the deceased.

Second, That we miss her presence, her wise counsel, and her spirit of devotion to the higher virtues of our order.

Third, That we humbly submit to His will and love, trusting in Him whose wisdom never makes a mistake.

Fourth, Be it further resolved that we extend to the family our deepest sympathy; that a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes and that a copy be sent to the family as an expression of our love for her and them.

—J. Z. Mims, Mrs. P. T. Hinkle, Lula Arant. Committee.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolutions on the death of Mrs. Bessie Harris were adopted by the Faithful Workers Sunday school class of the Clanton Baptist church.

Whereas, on April 18, 1931, God removed from our midst Mrs. Bessie Harris, faithful and beloved member of the Faithful Workers Sunday School Class of the Clanton Baptist Church, therefore be it resolved. First, that we extend our deep sympathy to the bereaved family and especially to the husband, children and mother, and rejoice that though she be absent from the body yet is she present with the Lord.

Second, that we cherish her memory, influence and example, and may we be inspired to a greater devotion and larger service that we may attain unto the measure of the stature of Christ.

—Mrs. Watts Moore.
—Mrs. H. T. Pipes.

Poems Of The Week

By OUR READERS

"Our Railroads"

There would be quite a good bit more of this old world's goods to spare
If we'd praise the bridge which carries us across and help to keep it in repair.
Too soon we forget, I fear,
Our country's condition before the railroads were here.
When our forefathers on a journey did go
The mode of travel was extremely slow.
Just a short trip was a long way.
They had to get up before day—
And before the sun sank in the west
Camp was pitched, horses taken out to rest.
Then countless numbers of dollars were spent,
And relief through railroads everywhere was sent.
All over the whole creation, a railroad has meant civilization,
And now that the world is a network of track,
On such an organization,
Are we going to turn our back

"The Invitation"

By Mrs. Newton Cooper

Won't you give your life to Jesus,
And accept His love today?
He will give you peace and comfort,
Roll your burdens all away.

He will rescue you from danger,
Lift you over prison walls,
He is able, He is willing—
He will save both great and small.

On the cross His work was finished.
His blood was shed for you and me,
And through His we have redemption.
And from sin and death made free.

He alone is our Redeemer,
He alone can save our soul,
Only thru His grace and power
Can we walk the streets of gold.

Jesus is the Life from Heaven.
He raised Lazarus from the dead,
He raised the widow's son at Nain.
For death He gave them life instead.

Jesus is the Resurrection—
He won the victory at the grave—
He triumphed over death and Satan,
And thru His blood we may be saved.

O, yes, He is the Resurrection—
For us He left His Heavenly throne.

O, won't there be a great reunion
On the resurrection morn.

Friends, accept the invitation,
Come to Jesus while you may—
You might not live to see tomorrow,
Come to Jesus, come today.

This poem was written by Mrs. Newton Cooper of Mitchell Dam and sent to a friend who thought it so good that she desires to pass it on to others.

ASCENSION DAY

The last of the church year's festivals based upon incidents in the life of Christ is Ascension Day, or Holy Thursday, which is observed forty days after Easter. It falls on May 14, this year.

At Florence, Italy, a curious custom peculiar to that city is observed on Ascension Day, as the result of a legend that when Christ ascended to heaven a cricket was carried with him. Before the day arrives each person who takes part in the observance provides himself with a cricket, which can be bought on the street, confined in a little cage made of cane.

On Ascension Day after Mass the people gather with their crickets in parks along the River Arno, where amidst much feasting and merrymaking each releases his or her cricket. If it flies away it signifies a year of good luck, but if it remains on the ground it means bad luck. It is said that the superstition is so strong that lovers will often postpone their marriage a year if their crickets fail to fly away.

Eastview News

The services at church were not well attended Sunday and Sunday night. Many visitors met with us. We welcome them back again.

Mr. N. O. Griffith and family of Birmingham spent Saturday night with Rev. A. C. Nelson and family.

Miss Ida Bell Dobbs was the week end guest of Mrs. Cornelia Coggins.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Cramer of Birmingham spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mims.

The Ladies Aid will meet next Friday afternoon at the church. Come early. All members requested to attend if possible.

The church plans to begin a revival on Saturday before the second Sunday in July and run the following week.

We are planning on getting Rev. G. D. Hunt of Roanoke to help our pastor in the revival. Let us begin to pray now for the success of the revival.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmell Mims were the Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mims.

Mr. Albert Nixon and Mrs. Heath were the guests of Mrs. Jessie Taylor Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Moore and Mrs. Jewel Hurt of Thorsby visited Mr. and Mrs. Will Hunt of Floyd Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Glenn had for their Sunday dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Patterson, Mrs. Elsie Patterson and Mrs. Bettie Patterson.

Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Nelson, Mr. J. A. Dobbs, Mr. Charlie Mims and Mr. John Sorrell motored to Montgomery last Friday. While down there Mrs. Nelson consulted Dr. George Blue for treatment. We hope she will soon regain her health again.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Coggins and Mr. and Mrs. Eulos Courtney attended the singing at Walnut Creek Sunday.

Mr. J. F. Nelson was the Sunday dinner guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Nelson.

Mrs. Minnie Nelson visited Mr. and Mrs. Comer Nelson of Pine Flat Sunday. She reports that Mrs. Comer Nelson is very ill.

Mr. Jim Rushing and family had for their Sunday dinner guests Rev. and Mrs. A.C. Nelson, Mrs. Mollie Strength and Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Gulledge.

Misses Mary Sue and Emma Dean Smith were the all day guests of Misses Ida Bell and Edith Dobbs Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Lott of Sylacauga spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Nelson.

Misses Lillian and Evelyn Devaughn visited Misses Mae Sue and Emma D. Smith Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Moort of Thorsby spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Griffin.

Come to Sunday School next Sunday.

THOUGHTS OF MOTHER

The one who was so precious to ou hearts has gone, the voice we lov is still:
The place made vacant in our home can never more be filled.
Oh, Mother, thy gentle voice is hushed thy warm true heart is still,
And on thy pale and peaceful face resting death's cold chill.
Oh the hope, the hope is sweet,
That we soon in Heaven may meet
There was an angel band in Heav
that was not quite complete,
So God took our dear mother to f
the vacant seat.
Through all pains in life she'd smile
smile of Heavenly birth;
And when the angel called her hom
she smiled farewell to earth.
Peaceful be thy silent slumber
Thou no more our sorrows know
We miss thee from our home, dear,
miss thee from thy place;
A shadow o'er our life is cast, we mi
the sunshine of thy face.
We miss thy kind and willing hand thy fond and earnest care.
Our home is dark without thee, we mi thee everywhere.

A LENIENT WIFE

How much personal freedom a husband and wife should permit each other is a question that has been the subject of much discussion both in public and private. It is suspected that a good many husbands grant their wives as little liberty as possible, while taking all they can get for themselves. And in a good many cases the wife adopts a similar attitude.

The grand prize for leniency to a husband, if such is entitled to a prize, would seem to be due Mrs. Rhoda Hood of Louisville, who gave her husband, James E. Hood, a card signed by her reading as follows:

"This is to certify that I hereby permit my husband to go where he pleases, drink what he pleases, and furthermore to enjoy the company of any lady or ladies he sees fit, as I know he is a good judge. I want him to enjoy life while he can, as I know he is going to be dead a long, long time."

Whether Mrs. Hood's attitude was a wise one is open to question, but it probably saved a lot of argument. Her card of manumission came to light when it was found in Hood's pocket after he had been killed by an automobile, while walking alone and sober on a Baltimore street.

TILTING AT TRAINS

Don Quixote's tilting at windmills was hardly less foolish and much less disastrous than the habit of present day motorists who assault railroad trains.

Figures covering accidents at railroad crossings during a period of six months show that in 27 per cent of the cases the automobiles ran into trains, instead of trains running into the automobiles.

One railroad company reports that in a single year 500 of its crossing gates lowered to protect the public were run into and smashed by motorists. Another company checked the performance of 3,589 drivers while crossing its tracks. By actual observation it was found that of this number 2,907 failed to look either to the right or left before crossing, 602 looked in one direction only, while only 80 drivers looked both ways.

With such evidence of recklessness on the part of motorists before us, it is not difficult to understand why 32,000 persons were killed and 900,000 injured in automobile accidents last year.

STORRS WARNS FARMERS TO BEWARE OF BAD SEED

Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, Saturday issued a statement warning Alabama farmers against buying and planting bad cane seed and velvet beans.

Warning farmers to beware of the kind of cane seed they purchase, commissioner Storrs said: "Cane seed are being placed on the market by a certain concern whose seed are specifically marked: 'Forage Cane' Amber Type, or 'Forage Cane' Orange Type. Many farmers will buy these cane seed for sorghum and lose their crop, never knowing what they are doing. The forage type of cane seed is not suitable for syrup and does not yield sap for sorghum."

Commissioner Storrs also urged farmers to "be careful what you pay for velvet beans and be sure to find out how much they germinate. Good seed will show 90 per cent germination."

Skimming the CREAM!

THE OLD RELIABLE L&N LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE R.R.

The fundamental soundness of America's great rail transportation system is being threatened by the unregulated, unfairly-taxed competition of buses and trucks operating for hire over public highways.

The seriousness of this on the country's stability is emphasized by the fact that the United States railroads are valued at 26 billion dollars—employ 1⅓ million men and women, purchase 1½ billion dollars worth of equipment, materials and supplies, and pay 400 million dollars in taxes every year. The public owns nearly 21 billion dollars worth of railroad securities, distributed among one million shareholders and a similar number of bondholders. Life insurance companies, educational institutions, and thousands of trust estates hold heavy investments in these securities.

The railroads are not fighting any form of transportation. They are simply asking for fairness, to the end that buses, trucks, and other forms of transportation shall be operated under equal tax and regulatory conditions.

Consider one point: the railroads must transport all forms of freight offered by shippers, while the truck lines are permitted to "skim the cream"—take what they want and what is profitable and pass on to the railroads the less-profitable traffic.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

The problem which confronts the railroads today is your problem. Their impairment will be your loss. The railroads built this Nation—they must continue to be the backbone of its transportation system. They cannot do this unless they are fairly regulated, fairly taxed and liberally patronized and unless they are permitted to operate on a basis that gives them equal opportunity with their competitors.

Additional facts concerning the inequalities under which the railroads are now operating have been put into a little booklet by this Railroad, a copy of which will be gladly sent to anyone addressing the general offices of the Company at Louisville, Ky.

Chilton County Is Well Ahead In Activities

called at the News office were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bradford, of San Antonio, Texas, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred Howard in Thorsby for several days. Mr. Bradford stated that he observed carefully the farming lands and activities in this county during his trip and stay here, and stated that he has not seen such activities going on that speak of a more progressive class of people.

In their tour Mr. and Mrs. Bradford passed through Missouri, Louisiana, Mississippi and Iowa. It is very pleasing to hear such comments from so many out-of-town visitors to our town and county, and the people of Chilton County have all the right to be justly proud of their home county.

the refrigerators they carry in stock during this campaign which will continue for the next two months.

The Clanton Ice Company, owned by J. Q. Wade, with James Wade as manager, has served this section faithfully for a large number of years. It is at all times ever on the alert to improve its already modern manufacturing plant in Clanton. A tour of the plant will show one the efficiency and carefulness with which ice is manufactured in Clanton from filtered water. The fleet of trucks in service for the Clanton Ice Company cover the county delivering ice whereever it is wanted.

The Farmers Hardware Company, local furniture and hardware dealers, carry a most complete stock of refrigerators in their store here. Their line shows them in various colors and sizes, with low prices.

Another concern with attractive prices on refrigerators is the Clanton Building Supply Company, another local furniture and hardware dealer. This concern carries a line of refrigerators in attractive colors and sizes.

The Tiffin-Klinner Furniture Company, widely known furniture dealers of Clanton are also taking part in this campaign. Their large show rooms carry a full stock of refrigerators in various sizes and colors, and attractive prices.

Chamber Gives Suggestions On Finances of The State and commercial world by its emergence from this period of financial difficulties without imposing additional tax burdens other than for the current indebtedness which would be temporary and which we believe would bring to our State government the sympathetic interest and hearty cooperation from the public at large:

Therefore Be It Resolved that this body, on account of its interest and willingness to cooperate in establishing a basis of a solution for these financial difficulties, respectfully suggests that his Excellency, the Governor, consider the following proposals:

First, the early appointment of a firm of business engineers and certified public accountants of outstanding character, reputation and ability, to be selected by the Governor and members of the Legislature, to make a thorough survey of the activities of various branches and departments of the government, the income of the State and its unfunded obligations and to make such recommendations as seem pertinent to the demands of the State;

Second, that when this report is in the hands of the Governor and Legislators that consideration be given to the appointment by the Governor of a fiscal commission of five representative [illegible] and business men accustomed to dealing with financial and administrative problems—to study the survey and report and to recommend to the Governor and Legislature a program of raising the necessary amount of revenue as revealed by the audit and survey to operate the State government efficiently and to pay interest on and amortize any additional bond issues found to be necessary. The further purpose of this commission should be to attempt to formulate a plan that would least disrupt business and industry and complicate as little as possible the efforts of the State toward recovery from the present economic depression.

Third, that such action would inspire full confidence and that a fiscal commission would be able to formulate with the Governor and the Legislature a budget calling for a revenue plan that would gain the desired results without alarming or disturbing business or interfering with the resumption of employment.

Fourth, that the final report to the Governor and the Legislature from the fiscal commission could be submitted by the Governor to an adjourned or extraordinary session of the Legislature as might seem best to the Adiminstration, that all present proposals for constitutional amendments and increased taxation be held in abeyance, other than necessary measures for temporary relief.

That a copy of this resolution be submitted to the Governor, members of the Senate and House of Representatives and the Chambers of Commerce of the State of Alabama.

This resolution was unanimously adopted by the Board of Directors of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce Wednesday, May 6th, 1931 at 3:00 P. M. in regular session.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

Some men were sitting around a stove in a filling station where the Prattville road makes off from the Montgomery highway. I listened in on the topic of conversation, and found out that they were discussing how to get Negroes to pick strawberries on Sunday. One man said, "If you will give a cent more for each basket picked on Sunday, you can get all the help you want." I knew that the speaker was about right. If a man is getting a dollar and a half a day for work, he will not work on Sunday if you offer him that same amount, but if you will raise his Sunday wages to two dollars, he will trade with you. Some folks are mighty "Cheap" when it comes to breaking the Sabbath. I have known them to sit around a little joint all day on Sunday for the profit on a few bottles of soda water. When the devil is fishing for Sabbath desecration suckers he puts on an extra worm.

Suppose that you make a visit to the Kilby prison and see if you can find many empty wards. State officials are crying out over the crowded condition of the penitentiaries, and prison camps throughout the state. Did you know that there are 4883 State prisoners in Alabama, and that the counties have another 1043? Think, if you please, about 5886 men wearing stripes in our own state. Here is how the thing has been produced—when churches are poorly attended, the penitentiary is crowded, and when the churches are crowded, the penitentiary becomes almost vacant. There are five times as many people in Chilton County as can be housed at one time in the churches of our county, and yet our churches are rarely ever crowded. If you want to crowd your penitentiaries, just empty your churches.

One day a boy caught a small Trout in a creek near his home. He took that fish and hurried to his Dad's fish pond and threw it into the water. A few weeks after this the same boy was sitting on the banks of his Dad's fish pond and he was trying out his luck with a live minnow. Something gave his fishing line a vigorous pull, and he drew out the Trout that he had thrown into the pond weeks before. On taking the hook from the Trout's mouth the boy remarked, "At least I got out of this pond all I put into it." That is the kind of luck that we have in our church devotion. The church is one fish pond out of which we draw no more than we put into it. When you hear a fellow complaining about the poor luck that he has in attending church, you can just put it down that he is putting nothing into it. Put much into your church life and you will get much out of it.

—o—

I went to a street show to see what I could see. There was a white man there and two white men painted black. They put on their "Big Stunts" and they were nothing but two long drawn out yarns, with a vulgar background. When the story was "Cracked" and the foul vision came to view, the crowd Ha hawed. I was at the Kiwanis minstrel and enjoyed myself to the fullest. The actors were in order, and not one vulgar suggestion was given out by the entertainers. It goes to show that people can have decent things when they want them. The thing I can not understand is why people will flock in scores to get a whiff of a bad odor.

—o—

I heard a man say that he could not lounge around on the street corners Sunday morning during the Sunday school hour and the church hour. He said that he felt so ashamed of himself, that he would either go home, or else go to his church where he belonged. For a man or a woman, to be seen lounging around in town, while church services are in session at our churches, it is like a soldier lounging around a place of entertainment while the battle is being fought. It is nothing short of dishonor for us to be street loungers on the Holy Sabbath. Our place as good citizens is where good citizenship is being maintained, and that place is where God is worshipped. During church hours go to church where you belong.

—o—

The sun was going down and a mother who was out visiting was heard to say, "I have got to hurry home and tuck my little family into bed." At that home there were three little girls and two little boys. That mother could not be late at home for she had to tuck her children to bed. That had been her daily task since the day they were born. That mother would have enjoyed a longer visit, probably she would like to have remained out late, but her greatest task called for her to be at home. Listen to me folks, if you have "Little ones at home to be tucked into bed," you can not afford to be late in entering that home. If you have little ones to be tucked into bed, you can not afford to yield to temptation, you can not afford to be absent from Sunday school and church. If you have little ones to tuck into bed you must live straight before them and then teach them to shoot straight.

$5.00 In Gold To Be Given Student

—o—

A very kindly gentleman in Clanton who requests that his name be withheld stated to L. C. Warr, last September that he desired to give a $5.00 gold piece to the boy or girl in Chilton County High School who showed the greatest improvement every way in his school work during the school year of 1930-1931.

This is something new in the history of our school, and we feel that too much can not be said in commendation of the good citizen and substantial business man of our town who voluntary offers this most coveted prize. We approve most highly the spirit that prompted this praiseworthy movement to inspire and encourage a pupil to discover himself and develop his aptitudes, attitudes, and capacities revealed to him during the year.

The faculty finds it rather difficult to award the prize. The following points are to be considered: Scholarship, deportment, attitude, school spirit, and general conduct. Of course attendance is a vital part to be considered. This gift will be presented to the lucky student Class Night, Friday, May 22.

Mrs. W. T. Darnell of Vincent Buried Last Sunday years ago, during that time they have made for themselves countless friends who mourn the death of this beloved lady. Mrs. Darnell became a member of the Order of the Eastern Star approximately fifty years ago, and up to the time of her illness she was at all times active and interested in church affairs, being a member of the Baptist church since the age of twelve. Her affiliations with the church pressed upon her a character of strength, admired by all who knew her.

Impressive funeral services were conducted at the Baptist church in Vincent by the Rev. G. E. Franks, assisted by one of the oldest citizens of that section, the Rev. R. A. Kidd, who gave a brief outline of the Christian life of the deceased. The large gathering of friends of the deceased and her family present at these services, and the many beautiful floral offerings were evidence of her wide circle of friends and acquaintances who regret the loss of Mrs. Darnell. Interment followed in the Vincent cemetery, with Stanley & White, funeral directors of Anniston, in charge.

The deceased is survived by her husband, two daughters, Mrs. J. F. Bates, of Vincent and Mrs. J. B. Atkinson of Clanton. Six sons, W. W. Darnell of Atlanta; J. I. Darnell of Seattle, Wash., W. J. Darnell of Salt Lake City, Utah, S. T. Darnell and O. K. Darnell of Anniston, and Powell, J. Darnell, of Vincent, and other relatives.

Errors Found in Recount Of Senatorial Ballots

law. It said:

"Seals on Boxes—Eleven were not sealed; five boxes either broken or loose; four boxes were sealed but all three signatures securing the seal were in the same handwriting; three boxes properly sealed.

"Poll Lists—Two boxes did not contain poll lists. In eight boxes, instead of certificates being signed by three persons for each box, the handwriting indicates one person signed for all three; two boxes were not certified.

"List of Qualified Voters—Original list of qualified voters was certified by judge of probate but typewritten additions in each box were not so certified.

Unqualified Voters

"Unqualified Persons Voting—In this county a total of 514 persons who were not on the qualified list of voters were permitted to vote by the inspectors without compliance with challenged oath laws.

"Numbering of Ballots—In a number of precincts the ballots were not numbered; in seven precincts the ballots were numbered in pencil instead of ink.

"Initialed Stubs Detached—In seven boxes the stubs of the ballots were initialed but not detached from the ballots; in four boxes the stubs were neither initialed nor detached.

"Sealing of Certificates and Ballots—In 10 precincts the ballots were in envelopes properly sealed but the handwriting would indicate that all three names securing the seal were written by one person; two boxes, the envelope was sealed but contained no signatures.

Tally Sheets

"Tally Sheets—The condition of the tally sheets in this county indicates the ballots were not taken from the box one by one and tallied.

"Condition of Ballots in Box—In 12 boxes the ballots were apparently in original folds, indicating they had never been unfolded and tallied; in two boxes the ballots were 'scrambled' and wadded into the box; in the remainder of the boxes the ballots were flat.

"Certificate of Results—Five boxes did not contain certificates of result; the certificates in eight boxes appear to have been written by the same person for each box.

"A large number of votes, not on qualified lists, could not be rejected and deducted from the count, as they were not numbered and consequently could not be identified. The challenged oaths throughout this county were incomplete there being no supporting affidavits of identity."

When they concluded work for the week Saturday noon, it was apparent agents of the Senate sub-committee handling the Heflin-Bankhead senatorial contest are having difficulty in the Jackson County recount. The 25 boxes recounted gave official returns of 1,22 for Bankhead and 1,073 for Heflin. The recount gives 913 undisputed votes for Bankhead and 722 for Heflin, with 41 ballots void and 612 laid aside for future decision by the sub-committee. This is a net gain of 41 in Bankhead's majority in the county thus far. The number of ballots laid aside in Jackson indicates wide differences of opinion among the agents and representatives of the parties to the contest in the recount.

CRIPPLE CLINIC IN CLANTON ON FRIDAY JUNE 5

Examinations and Advice To Be Given Without Cost By Dr. John Sherrill

Through the work of the Alabama Crippled Children's Society and the County Child Welfare Department, another free clinic for crippled people will be held in Clanton on June 5th. This society has made it possible for every child in the state of Alabama to be within 50 miles of a free clinic where he may go each year for a free examination for any crippled or deformed condition of his limbs or body. Clanton was selected two years ago as a probable center and has had two very successful clinics and is preparing for its third.

Clanton and 50-mile radius is very fortunate in again having Dr. John D. Sherill of Birmingham,—one of the best known orthopedic specialists in Alabama and the South, to give these free examinations and diagnosis. As for the past two years, the clinic will be held at the Baptist Church and will open at 9 o'clock, and it is hoped that everyone knowing of any crippled child will make an effort to notify them of this clinic and make an effort to see that they come.

W. O. W. MONUMENT WILL BE UNVEILED TO FRANKLIN

Popular Play Will Be Given, Thorsby

The popular play, "Two Days to Marry" is to be staged at the Thorsby Grammar School auditorium on Friday night, May 22. Everyone is invited to see this play, and a large crowd is expected as it has been presented in the county before, meeting with hearty approval.

There are two good blackfaced characters taking part in it. This play is being given for the benefit of the Thorsby Baptist church. Admission will be fifteen and twenty-five cents.

PILOT CLUB IS ORGANIZED IN CLANTON

Business, Professional Women Form Club of International Organizations

Clanton has organized the ninth club of its kind, when business and professional women of the town met Wednesday night for the purpose of organizing a Pilot Club.

The Pilot Club is based along the same principles of the Kiwanis Club, being an international organization, with only eight other clubs existing, and is a women's civic luncheon club.

The Pilot Club is open to only the business and professional women of a town, and then, the requirements are very strict concerning membership, as one must be in excellent standing, before she is elegible to become a member.

The Clanton Pilot Club will be composed of approximately seventeen business and professional young women of Clanton, and will meet twice each month, it was stated.

MORE WORK IS ASSURED FOR MILL VILLAGE

Authorities Say Business Indicates Bright Prospect for More Good Orders

Information that no doubt will be received with a great deal of interest throughout this community was given out Monday from the Clanton unit of the Alabama Mills, when the announcement was made to the effect that orders received last Saturday by the mill will shove up working hours there.

Official information from the mill stated that with the orders that came in Saturday, the mill will run night and day for several weeks steady running.

This will enable those workers who are living in the mill village to put in more time for the next several weeks it was stated, as the weavers and loom-fixers will be needed steady time. The order was mostly for grey jeans

Authorities at the mill stated to the News that prospects for business in the very near future were very bright, and the information given out had a tinge of optimism throughout, while no great pick-up is expected right away, it is believed that workings will soon begin to show a gradual climb, it was stated.

Mad Dog Was Here Last Wednesday

Chief John Boockholdt reports to the News that he with a veterinary surgeon, Dr. W. L. Parrish, captured a mad dog in Clanton Wednesday of last week, after being notified that the dog was in town. He was located and with the assistance of W. M. Poole, of the city force, they managed to capture him, although Mr. Poole really did not intend to catch the dog as he did. It was something of a case where he wanted someone to help him turn the dog loose after he "accidentally" caught him by the neck.

The dog was seen to have had several passes at other dogs in town. He was carried to the farm of Dr. Parrish for observation, where he died Monday morning. His head was sent to the State Laboratories by Chief Boockholdt, and they reported positive for rabies. The dog was a Walker hound, white with brown spots, and officials here wish to get in touch with the owner to notify him. All stray dogs in town have been ordered killed, it was learned.

WOODMEN ARE TO STAGE BIG PROGRAM IN CLANTON MAY 28

Hundreds Of Visiting Woodmen Expected; Outstanding Speakers Are On Program; Huge Parade, Band Concert And Drills

Clanton has a treat in store for it for next Thursday, when the Field Day of this district of the Woodmen of The World will be held here.

This event will bring hundreds of visiting people to Clanton for that day, as one of the most interesting and entertaining programs ever presented in Clanton will take place, according to E. C. Evans, district manager, whose headquarters are in Clanton, and who has played a large part in bringing this event to the town.

The day's program will begin at ten o'clock next Thursday morning at the high school grounds, with the raising of the United States flag. Music is to be furnished throughout the day by the Monroe County High School Band. Among the outstanding speakers of the day will be W. M. Crawford, a prominent Woodman from Omaha, Nebraska, Congressman Lister Hill, and I. T. Quinn, Commissioner, and State Manager Holiway.

At noon, the lunch hour will be called, this to be followed by a competitive drill with ten uniform drill teams participating. This promises to be interesting, and takes place at two o'clock in the afternoon, followed by other items on the program.

At six o'clock there will be a band concert at the courthouse, which will be followed by a large and spectacular torchlight street parade, composed of several hundred Woodmen.

Mr. Evans stated that a cordial invitation is extended to the entire population of this section to witness these programs next Thursday, May 28th. Thursday night there will be a large class of new members initiated into the order with Col. F. A. Ellington of Montgomery, presiding.

Local Postmaster Praises Work Being Done Here By Local High And Grammar School

Following, the News publishes a letter from W. M. Bean, postmaster at Clanton, who brings out in a fine way the remarkable progress made by the Chilton County High School and the Clanton Grammar School:

For many years I have been much interested in schools. I feel that there is nothing that is nearly so important as the schools of our country. Too often it is I think that people in general think too lightly of schools. This should not be so. There are many good schools in our county yet, and everyone, it appears to me, should think of our schools more and try to assist to make them better and better

Since I have had occasion and opportunity to observe the workings in general of Chilton County High School for several years, I wish to say a few words about the school. I can recall something of the work of the school al-

HOWARD GARAGE, VERBENA DEALERS WELL KNOWN MAKE RADIO

Garage Also Has Fine Reputation For Its Automobile Repair Department; Operated By Members Of Widely Known Verbena Family

In this issue of the News there appears an ad from the Howard Garage, of Verbena, Alabama, in which they are announcing that they have become dealers in Verbena for the widely known Majestic radios and Majestic electric refrigerators.

This widely known automobile repair shop is now having erected in their building a special room for the purpose of showing and demonstrating the make of radio and refrigerators they handle, and they stated that by the latter part of this week they will be in position to show several models of the radio, and to demonstrate them.

Not only do they sell these items, but are equipped to do all kinds of radio repairing, their equipment containing some of the latest radio testing machines, and they extend an invitation to everyone to visit their shop.

The Howard Garage is owned and operated by T. N. Howard, O. L. Howard and John W. Howard, all being well known throughout this county. Their garage department enjoys a reputation that is commendable, having customers in many parts of the state. They do battery work, auto painting, using late methods, acetylene welding, and almost anything a well equipped and organized automobile repair shop can do. See their ad in this issue and watch for their ads which will appear in the future in the News, at regular intervals.

NEW OIL TRADE PROBLEM

A new problem in the oil trade, and one which will also attract the interest of the public is revealed in a complaint filed by producers of Pennsylvania grade crude oil, who allege unfair practices on the part of the big oil companies.

It is charged that the larger companies are corralling independent service stations through exclusive dealing arrangements which close the stations to products of most of the Pennsylvania association's members. This, they contend, not only deprives them of their outlets, but also prevents the public from obtaining the brands of oil desired.

The so-called Pennsylvania oil field, situated in Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York and West Virginia, was the cradle of the world's oil industry. For more than seventy years it has been a constant producer, and a world-wide demand for its superior lubricating oils has been built up. Now, it is asserted, this veteran field is threatened with loss of its markets through competitive tactics of the big oil companies.

The Federal Trade Commission is being asked to take steps to end the unfair competition complained of, which is declared to be in restraint of trade. Because of its possible far-reaching effect upon many types of business that are being subjected to increasing pressure from powerful competitors, this case will be watched with keen interest.

James R. Robinson, aged seventy-one, was almost instantly killed last Tuesday night while walking along the highway at Jemison, Alabama. He was struck by an automobile driven by a young man from Thorsby and died while en route to the hospital.

Miss Jewel Esther Martin and Mr. Marion S. Smith were married at the home of the bride in Thorsby last Sunday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend B. Lawrence of Clanton.

The Chilton County String Band which has been steadily gaining in popularity over the state, will broadcast again over Station WAPI next Saturday afternoon. The band is composed of Herman Lowery, Iron Howell, and Ben Scott.

There will be a baseball game here this afternoon between the fats and leans.

TEN TONS FOOD TO NORTH POLE

The Nautilus Receives Huge Grocery Order

New London, Conn., May 14.—Ten tons of food, which is to feed the 20 men aboard the submarine Nautilus, during its journey under the Artic ice to the North Pole this summer, were delivered today to Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins, leader of the Wilkins-Ellsworth Trans-Artic Expedition. Seven tons will be shipped to Bergen, Norway, where it will be picked up later by the Nautilus. Three tons are now being stored in the submarine to feed the crew on the first lap if its adventurous voyage - across the Atlantic to Bergen.

At the submarine base in New London where the Nautilus has been undergoing submerging tests, Sir Huberts men are busy tucking this huge grocery order into every nook and corner of their iron boat.

Packing enough food to feed 20 men for several months has never berfore been attemped in a submarine the size of the Nautilus, and the crew is using all the ingenuity at its command. The miniature gallery, or ships kitchen, must not only carry the bulk of the food,but it must provide bunk room for six men and accomodate a 250 - pound cook as well. The torpedo tubes of the former Navy sub, no longer in use, are being utilized as pantries, as are many odd-sized compartments alongside the batteries below the Control room. Even the walls of the vessel are being lined with tins of edibles held in place by galvanized racks.

Scientists of The Great Atlantic & Pacfic Tea Company, which is supplying the food studied the dietetic requrements of the Expedition from every angle before the food was finally selected. It was packed by A & P to meet the conditions of under-sea living, namely: conservation of space, water, and fuel, and protection against dampness. Among the supplies packed in hermetically-sealed containers are 1300 pounds of butter, 1200 pounds of evaporated milk, 700 pounds of coffee, 1400 pounds of sugar, 2600 pounds of flour, 1000 pounds of nut meats, 1000 pounds of rainsins, and 3000 pounds of meat and fish. Large quanities of canned and dried fruits and vegetables, cheese, sauces and spices, baked beans, powdered eggs and milk, are being taken aboard, together with such items as jams, pickles, relishes, and peanut butter—luxurious fare for explorers.

Much of the success of an Artic Expedition depends upon the food it eats and since the Nautilus will have to rely almost entirely upon what it carries, it is imperative that only the best food be provided.

WHEN FOOD SOURS

ABOUT two hours after eating, many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians prescribe to correct excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Farmers Harvest Big Crop Of Oats

Auburn, Ala., May 20.—One of the best oat crops in the history of Alabama is now being harvested. Early in May mowers and binders began clicking in the oat fields in the Gulf Coast section of the State and their activities are moving northward as the crop matures with the season.

Reports indicate that the yield per acre is above the average and many of the county agents report a substantial increase in acreage.

The crop is being harvested and turned into feed at a time when the feed supply is low and farmers are needing it. Some are mowing and saving as hay while others are using binders and shocking it to be fed in bundles.

And the county agents are starting now to stimulate planting oats next fall. Farmers who are harvesting this spring realize that they are an excellent feed crop and that they are able to produce two good crops of feed on the same land in one year by following oats with either soybeans or cowpeas.

In producing oats Alabama has two handicaps. One is inadequate machinery for planting and harvesting, and the other is the possibility that a severe freeze will kill them. To overcome the machinery handicap it is being suggested that farmers cooperate in buying machinery for planting and harvesting. The possibility of a severe freeze should not prevent planting because such freezes are exceptional. If, however, a freeze occurs the farmer who has planted oats in the fall loses only his seed and a little work. He can either plant the land to another oat crop in the spring or to some other crop.

GRANDMOTHER

Oh, Grandmother dear, she is no longer here.
She wore her little bonnet so neat.
She has gone on to Heaven to wear a bright crown—
Where she can rest at Jesus's feet.
Her dear loving voice I will never more hear
Nor her precious footsteps on the floor,
But when God sees fit to call me some day
I will meet her on yonder's bright shore.
Her dear loving smile when I was a child
Was such a great comfort to me.
Oh, how bright and happy the days would be
When I sat by my grandmother's knee.
Her dear wrinkled face all wreathed in smiles
Would cheer my heart when sad.
She would tell me of God and His great love.
And thank Him for all she had.
She would tell me of mother, when she was a child,
How she taught her to love one and all.
To honor old people and reverence them, too,
And be kind to both great and small.
On the day she was buried I shall never forget
The people were so good and so kind,
But none could comfort my poor aching heart
As could that dear old grandmother of mine.
Grandmother dear, I know she is not dead,
For just above my head, a bright shining angel one night appeared.
Dear children, what a comfort it is
To know that grandmother is not dead.
She's living on yonder's bright shore,
Yes, living with Jesus and those gone before
Where parting will be no more.

—By Mrs. Newton Cooper.

Hats Off To The Strawberries

Hats off, the Strawberry is passing by! The lowly berry, made up of a lot of water, a lot of work. But, however lowly, let us take off our hats to the strawberry this year. Strawberries here, strawberries there, strawberries everywhere. That is the way it seems to those passing through Clanton, Thorsby and Jemison during the past several weeks.

Other places have Cotton Queens, etc., and Chilton County should have a Strawberry Queen, and a great gathering for a celebartion in honor of the Strawberry. The strawberry has given to hundreds in Chilton County work that has netted them neat little sums of spending money, at the same time bringing to the farmer who raised them a rather satisfying return for his work. The strawberry comes as something of an in-between crop for the farmers in this county.

Jemison is rejoicing over a crop that has gone far beyond the last year's crop of berries. Thorsby has been rushed to the limit shipping carloads every day, loading up in the small hours of the mornings, and Clanton sees busy business men going to and fro—all about strawberries, and they are still shipping.

Thousands of dollars turned loose in Chilton County. Good old cash money for our farmers at a time when cash money on the barrel head looks exceedingly good. All on account of strawberries. Hats off to the Strawberry, and let's let cotton sit on the sideline looking on the Strawberry Parade for awhile, and let's have the parade made up of other such money crops.

The Latest Signs Of The Times

Recently a national business statistical organization collected reports from 98 lines of business, showing conditions by comparison of a year ago. The reports stated that the only lines in which business is really better, nationally speaking, is in the manufacture and retail trade of men's clothing. Business is said to be as good as it was a year ago in 25 different lines. That includes women's wear, shoes, men's underwear, bread, drugs and chemicals, groceries, fish and laundering. The report stated that the automobile business is somewhat poorer now than a year ago.

According to this report, the people are still eating as much of staple foodstuffs as they did a year ago. No doubt the increase in men's clothing this year is due to the fact that so many could not buy a new suit last year, and had to buy one this year, because the one carried over a season has worn out.

Bringing this report to bear on Chilton County, means that business is better here generally in all lines, with the exception of the automobile business, which according to the national report is off nationally, but that doesn't mean that it has to be off in this section. Our dry goods stores should rejoice over this report, and perhaps they have been.

Low-Cost Roads Important

Bernard E. Gray, Highway Engineer, has an interesting article on low-cost, farm-to-market roads, in a recent issue of the Manufacturers Record. He says:

"What a paradox! A country able to produce a surplus of all agricultural products, with prices at give-away levels, so that the farmer is in distress. and yet people in actual want in the cities. . . Inadequate facilities for distribution and bad roads are a very large factor in this situation.

"What are low-cost roads?" asks Mr. Gray. "They are roads surfaced with top soil, sand clay, shale, chert, cinders, gravel, crushed stone or similar materials so placed on properly graded and drained road beds as to give year-round service.

"During the past few years engineering research and science has developed inexpensive methods of treating these surfaces with asphalt so as to prevent dust and mud, reduce wear and roughness and, at the same time, give smooth, non-skid roadways . . . with low costs. As traffic increases, it is necessary to add only a small additional thickness. All preceding work is saved for further use. Employment is given to local labor in the preparation of materials."

The low-cost road problem is one which every community must consider.—Mobile News.

Fathoming Pessism

Try this on your next door neighbor: "I hear that every factory in the city will shut down on the first of the month, and 1500 men will be thrown out of work."

And your neighbor will say, "Isn't that awful. What will all those poor people do? It's just what I've been expecting though. It was bound to come. This depression is terrible."

Then run across to the other side of the house and relate this story to your other neighbor.

"Did you hear the big news. A new shirt factory will commence operation here on the first. It will give employment to 14 men."

And that neighbor will say: "Oh, that's just some wild rumor. There's too many shirt factories in the world already.

People are always ready to believe that someone is dead and the only reason why they believe in birth reports is that they think that babies are unplanned for, unhoped for, and a necessary calamity.

It is said that persistence wins. Then perhaps it won't be long until automobiles will be getting the best of railroad trains. That will be tough on the railroads just the same as the other way when a suit is brought against them for damage. The worm may turn, however.

Move Up Three Yards

By Scottie McKenzie Frasier In Alapressa

Once Knute Rockne was lecturing his team when he asked: "What would you do if the score were six to nine against you, last quarter, two minutes to play, the ball in your territory, your possession, second down, ten to go and you were three yards from the line?"

Each player had an answer explaining what he would do from a strategic standpoint; finally Frank Carideo, who up to that time, had done nothing particularly brilliant on the gridiron said: "I would move up three yards so I might have a better view!" Rockne, who was a great judge of men, recognized the laten talent in Carideo and from that moment he began developing him as a quarterback; and Frank Carideo became, under the molding of a master hand, one of the greatest quarterbacks of all time.

What we need today are leaders who can inspire men to move up three yards in every walk of life. We need leaders to turn politicians into unselfish statesmen, who will work for the good of society and not for their own selfish ends. We need leaders who will direct business from a broad and unselfish angle—we need financial leaders who will move up and look not at their own interests but at the best interests of the whole world. We need men with world vision, world consciousness, and a world conscience. We need leaders who will so direct business that only the financial good of the whole world will be considered—not the financial interests of a handful of Wall Street brokers or a handful of self-seekers of Kalamazoo or Dothan.

We need leaders of thought who will lead us out of a Main Street consciousness into a broad and understanding humanitarian vision.

We need spiritual leaders who will lead us to live up to the standards that we profess.

We need leaders who will move up to the line where there will be no bigotry, no intolerance, no hate, no criticism of any other religion.

We need educators who will lead you to a wise choice of life's values.

We need men like Knute Rockne, who will call the youth of America to move up three yards out of a lawless and cynical and self-indulgent era on to the line where Honor, Justice and Truth are regarded as the only worthwhile touchdown in Life's game.

We need writers who will inspire men to live life bravely and wholeheartedly and gloriously.

We need leaders who will call to the world to move up three yards out of selfishness, out of inefficiency, out of self-seeking, out of a struggle where only material things count—up to the line where they can see better and know that after all nothing in the world is worth so much as character, no price mark is good enough unless it stands for quality, that nothing in the world that is worth having can be gained except through fair and honorable means and that for everything we must render value received—that the gambler loses in the end and that the man who works and renders service to the world is the one who in the long run wins.

We need leaders who will lead us out of a drab, dull manner of living up to the line where one takes time to live life as acolorful and joyous adventure.

We need a voice to call and awaken in us an appreciation for the finer things of life, so that we, as Americans, may preserve the ideals on which a great nation was founded.

We need leaders in the social world who will lead us to appreciate and live the charm and graciousness that is only possible among those who live life as an art—who infuse into society the essence of beauty and culture and grace.

Some Things That An Editor Does Not Know

An editor is a man or woman who is supposed to know most everything, but in the course of a long experience in the newspaper business we have come to the conclusion that there are at least a dozen things (save one) that no editor knows or may ever know and they are the following:

1. No newspaper man or woman knows why it is that the worst enemy the paper has is the person who contributes nothing to its support.

2. Nor do we understand how it comes about that numbered among the paper's most constant and harshly critical readers is the man who never subscribes.

3. Nor how it is that the man who has failed at everything else he ever tried comes to the conclusion that he is a born editor, and that all the world needs to have it regulated properly is to have him "get busy" on a newspaper.

4. Nor why you may compliment a man a hundred times without his paying you a call to thank you, and then criticise him once and he immediately comes to see you and tries to put you out of business by stopping his paper.

5. Nor why it is that people will seemingly endeavor to hide from the editor or reporter all the details of an entertainment or marriage, and then feel awfully hurt if the affairs are not elaborately written up.

6. Nor why it is that a man or woman will declare to you that they abominate "newspaper notoriety," and then fall out with you for a failure to note in the public prints their incomings and outgoings.

7. Nor yet again, how it is that the editor bases the great majority of his news articles on reports furnished him by other people, and then gets the credit of being the most notorious prevaricator in the universe.

8. Nor do we know why the editor is expected to publish immoderately long obituaries free of charge, extolling the virtues, real or supposed, of some one who never in his life time contributed one cent to the paper's existence.

9. And it is far beyond our ken why it is that some business men will pay more money to one of these fellows who goes about getting up directories to stick in some hotel or depot than they spend with their home paper in a year.

10. Nor why it is that an editor is termed a "deadhead" at a local entertainment when the fact is he has given five dollars worth of free notices and gets in return a two-bit ticket.

11. Nor do we know how a man musters up a sufficiency of cheek to write the editor a note on stationery printed out of town enclosing a complimentary clipping in reference to himself or some member of his family, with a request to "please copy."—Greensboro Watchman.

Letters To The Editor

To the People of Chilton County:

As your Representative in the Legislature, as per my promise to the people of this county I have introduced two Local Bills affecting the County Board of Education and Election of the County Superintendent of Education by the direct vote of the people, instead of appointment by the County Board of Education, which I am thoroughly convinced that a large majority of the people of this county desire, regardless of their political faith. These two bills have been passed with a favorable report by the Committee on Education in the House of Representatives, and are now on the Calendar for passage in that House.

These measures are non-political, and both in my humble judgment will better the Educational system of our county in more ways than one. I have the indorsement of many of the leading Democrats of this county as well as Republicans for these two bills. These bills will be introduced in the Senate next week, after being passed in the House.

Senator J. G. Duncan, possibly is not aware of the great demand our people are making for this change in our Educational system in this county and I desire to call a meeting at the Court House in Clanton, Alabama, on next Saturday the 23rd. day of May at 2 p.m. to get the peoples ideas and attitude respecting this bill.

It is my wish and desire to represent the entire people of Chilton County, regardless of their political faith, and to enact such Local Legislation into law that will best serve and please the majority of the people, and knowing Senator Duncan, as I do, in my judgment he feels the same way.

As your Representative I will greatly appreciate your meeting with me at the Court House next Saturday at 2 P. M. to discuss these Local measures, and any other bills affecting our county and State.

Respectfully yours,
PERCY M. PITTS.

Editor Chilton County News:

Will you please give me space in your paper to reply to some statements by Mr. Jadie Bean, made against me in a letter that appeared in your paper of last week, relative to the poor house?

Mr. Bean states in this letter that Mr. W. T. Hand often goes to see Oliver Smith, who once had the poor house; and who has been prejudiced against most everyone of the keepers since he was keeper. And that Mr. Hand and myself have seen fit to stir up all trouble possible at the poor house.

Mr. Hand has visited my home only twice and the statement that Mr. Bean made that I had been prejudiced against most everyone of the keepers since I was keeper, and that W. T. Hand and myself have seen fit to stir up all trouble possible at the poor house is false.

It is not my purpose to get into a newspaper controversy, but since I live near the poor home and have been for fifteen years; and Mr. Bean has accused me falsely through both of the county newspapers I have a right to defend myself, and contend for humane treatment of our county's poor. If Mr. Bean is feeding the inmates at the poor house as he should why do some of them go out begging for something to eat and say they are starving for food? I have seen their supper carried to them time after time and they had nothing but a piece of cold corn bread about as large as my four fingers and a glass of milk.

I have seen Mr. Bean whip Gip McQueen and Gip told me Bean whipped him because he went out and got some bread to eat. I have also seen Mr. Bean's son, beat Gip and knock him down. Religious services have been denied the inmates by Mr. Bean.

Mr. Bean, in his letter said some mighty hard things about Mr. Hand, after Mr. Hand was kind enough to bring the inmates of the poor house three bushels of oranges, and also gave Mr. Bean a half bushel and gave me a peck. If anyone is interested just ask the inmates if they got the three bushels of oranges that Mr. Hand brought for them.

Some of the inmates have come to my house time after time and asked for something to eat and I always gave them something. But they are not allowed to come to my house at all now.

I think it is a shame for the unfortunate inmates of the poor house to have to be treated as they are by Mr. Bean. I will state further that Mr. Hand gave to the inmates on one occasion three dollars in cash, and brought other gifts and gave them. The following is a letter from W. C. Burnett, and who is a former keeper of the poor house:

The letter says: "In regard to the piece in the paper about Oliver Smith. It stated that Mr. Smith never did get along with anyone. I can say positively that we never did have a cross word as long as I stayed there. It was two years I stayed."—W. C. Burnett.

Mrs. Annie Mae Huckaby states that during the seven years that her father lived near me we had no trouble whatever. Mr. Bean mentioned several times in his letter about the sanitary conditions at the poor house. The sanitary conditions have not been questioned by anyone so far as I know since the Grand Jury some time ago went there and condemned the sanitary conditions and demanded that the place be cleaned up.

The new building is nice and modern. But no one has ever occupied it yet. It is standing vacant.

If Mr. Bean will make the feeding and clothing of the inmates of the poorhouse compare with the buildings and sanitary equipment of the home all would be well.

In conclusion let me say to my personal knowledge I know the inmates at the poor house are not fed and clothed as they should be. And are not treated as humans should be treated. Such conditions are a stain to the name of Chilton County and some of her officials.

Respectfully,
OLIVER SMITH.

has been the largest individual shipper at Clanton with 1.300 crates from a patch of 6 acres. Mr. Roper had at times, over one hundred pickers employed at his patch near Clanton.

Jemison, Alabama expects to close the season with shipping 34 cars thru the Jemison Fruit & Truck Growers Association. This place shipped only nine cars last year. Vernon Cobb, of Center Hill, Geo. Childress and J. T. Childress are reported to be the largest individual shippers from Jemison.

A representative of the News interviewing several of the outstanding farmers and truck growers and business men of the county brought in reports stating that this is the largest crop of strawberries seen in this county in many years. This crop has not only brought extra money into the county to the grower, but has given employment to hundreds of persons who have been picking the berries. It was estimated that approximately $8,000 had been paid to pickers alone in the Thorsby shipping territory, this season.

Reports from many of the business houses in the county state that their business increased considerably during the past several weeks.

Officials of the Thorsby Fruit & Truck Growers Association stated that in their section of the county, more time and thought has been given to truck crops this year than any other crops.

The Jemison association reports that they are extremely well pleased with the prospects in their section for more money truck crops. The Jemison association has been doing some splendid work in the past year also.

Marvin Hilyer Receives Crushed Leg in Accident

News, Hilyer in company with Ike Littleton, Magnus Taylor, his father, S. H. Hilyer, Alvin Simmons and Winston Taylor had been to a friend's home to get some pigs and were returning when a car said to have been driven by Lonnie Cox, collided with the Hilyer car overturning it, pinning the six men and the pigs underneath. Hilyer had his feet on the running board when the car turned over.

Information stated that Cox was accompanied by Amos Bean of Thorsby and two girls. With the exception of Marvin Hilyer and his father, none of the others were badly injured. S. H. Hilyer received a bad jolt on his shoulder, which was proving painful Sunday afternoon. Cox was later arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated, the information stated. Latest reports from the hospital state that Hilyer is resting as well as could be expected.

Taylor who was driving the car in which Hilyer was riding, was also arrested, he and Cox being charged with driving while intoxicated it was stated. Both made bond.

most from its beginning. I have watched daily for a few years past the progress of the school. Having noticed such wonderful improvements in the school of recent years, it prompts me to say that I believe there is not a better school of the kind in the stat A more conscientious and devoted corp of instructors has not been known at Chilton High than has worked therein during the school year just clo g Prof. Warr is a man who weighs carefully and disciplines thoroughly. Hi interest in the school is manifest in hi every expression. The improvement made in the appearance of the surroundings of Chilton High tells the passer-by that much interest is take at the school. I think a principal of this kind is something for Chilton County as a whole to feel thankful for if not really proud. Too, I have heard of the Clanton Grammar School this year it is gratifying to the people of Clanton I know to note such great success i this school this year.

Let's support our schools wholeheartedly. If you are not getting anything from your school, perhaps i might be you have put nothing into it Put the very best support into yo school you possibly can and then yo have a right to demand somethi therefrom.

Do not take me to mean to try t say that I am competent to judge a schoo but I must say that I know that ther has been wonderful improvements i the schools of Clanton during the la year. I just feel that it can do harm to express my feelings towa the instructors who have worked i Clanton schools this year, and I fe too from what I have heard from ma others that I am in a small degree e pressing the feelings of many the in Clanton toward those who have lab ored so well in our schools. Now, th the teachers are doing so well and ma ifesting such interest in our sch let's give them all the encouragem and help possible that we may assi to maintain schools of real merit f the future.

ISABELLA SENIOR PLAY, "THE CALL OF YOUTH" THURSDAY, MAY 21ST

When Eileen Lyndon gave a party to announce her engagement to Tom Griswold she eloped with Avery Peyton, a worthless scamp, whom her father detested. Tom was heartbroken and went to Africa on a scientific expedition.

Eighteen years passed. Eileen died in the meantime, leaving a daughter named Anita. When Anita was sixteen years old, Dr. Long found her slaving in a cheap boarding house, because her father deserted her. Dr. Long brought her to her grandfather's.

Tom came home, bringing with him an adopted son, who fell in love with Anita. Tom himself fell desperately in love with Anita, the daughter of the girl who jilted him. Who won Anita? Come to Isabella Thursday night, May 21, at eight o'clock and see for yourselves. This is a 1931 royalty drama. Already the play has the reputation of being the best ever presented at Isabella. You cannot miss it!

Lulu, who has never had a beau and has no more drawing power than a defective flue, as Belinda, a colored mammy, will keep you in an uproar. So will the hilariously funny Belinda who knows everything about love charms. You will cry with Anita, and your hair will stand on end when Eileen comes back. You will pity and forgive Avery when he dies right under your eyes.

The complete cast is as follows:

Eileen Lyndon, secretly in love with Avery, Dorothy Manning.

Tom Griswold, who loves Eileen, Delos Culp.

Avery Peyton, who loves Eileen secretly, Buster Roebuck.

Hester Moore, in love with Avery, Mary Clay Turner.

Mr. Lyndon, Eileen's father, James Deason.

Dr. Long, dear friend of the Lyndons, Cecil McKee.

Yydia Boone, jealous of Eileen, Nellie Hayes.

Belinda, Eileen's colored mammy, Thelma Pierce.

Aunt Armanda, Lyndon's fussy sister, Clara Mae Calfee.

Cousin Lulu, wants to be in love, Berniece Jones.

Robert, Tom's adopted son, Morris Keen.

Irene, friend to Eileen, Glynder Oden.

Marion, another friend to Eileen, Elsie Conaway.

Anita, Eileen's daughter, Dorothy Manning.

Admission, 20 and 35 cents.

FARMERS DEFEAT CRAFT BILL IN MONTGOMERY BY BIG MAJORITY

Thousands Of Farmers Leave Work and Gather in Capitol City To Voice Disapproval of Senator Craft's Bill In Regard To Farm Bureau Work

Ten thousand Alabama farmers and farm women left their spring plowing and household work long enough to go to Montgomery May 14 and register a vigorous protest which killed Senate Bill 348 by Senator John Craft of Mobile.

The farm people appeared at a public hearing of the Senate Committee on agriculture, which is without precedent in picturesqueness and in the number of those attending. The hearing was first scheduled for the Senate Chamber. This proved too small and a move was made to the city auditorium. It was soon found that this structure would not accomodate the large crowd and another move was made to Cramton Bowl. There the farm people gathered in the concrete stands and on the ground around the committee which sat in the infield.

Speakers for the bill included Senator Craft, Edmund W. Pettus, attorney of Selma, and J. C. Hodges, feed manufacturer of Birmingham. They made brave pleas for the bill, though Senator Craft confined himself largely to a detailed review of his long legislative career.

Speakers against the bill included E. L. Deal, secretary, Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, Prof. L. N. Duncan, director of the Auburn Extension Service, Dr. Bradford Knapp, Auburn president, Mrs. J. D. Giles of Selma, president of the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs, and others.

The bill was indefinitely postponed by vote of the committee, ten members voting for postponement. Senator Faulk of Geneva, casting the lone vote against the motion to postpone.

This was considered the greatest gathering of organized farmers for a legislative purpose that has ever been staged in this Nation. They made it very clear that they were against Bill 348, or any other bill which sought to deprive them of the right of buying and selling cooperatively.

Following is a statement from County Agent C. E. Stapp, in regard to the meeting of the farmers:

The meeting in Montgomery last week was a big demonstration of the farmers being able to present claims for their rights. As was stated by Mr. Duncan, Director of Extension work, it was very pathetic that such a meeting had to be held as the result of a few interests of the State.

A little survey last week made by a committee of farmers revealed that more than seventy merchants and professional men of the county who were called on opposed the bill curbing the activities of county agents and farm organizations, while only seven or eight merchants and professional men called on favored the passing of the bill. I think every man has the right to speak and act his convictions. That doesn't mean that he is always in the right. We all make mistakes; do and say things we should not, and that we are sorry for later.

I have always been an advocate of the Golden Rule and not of the Rule of Gold. I have always contended that we are dependent upon each other and that the closer we can work togehter the more we can and will accomplish.

The point I wish to make here is that I trust that the activities of a few individual merchants over the state trying to pass the Hodges-Kidd-Pettus Bill will in no way cause any feeling of ill will on the part of the farmers toward the mass of merchants and professional men and vice-versa.

We need good merchants, lawyers, doctors, farmers and in fact, good men in all vocations of life. It has always been my policy to try to create a better understanding and more brotherly feeling between the man on the farm and the man in town.

I trust that in Chilton County and all over the State, we can forget the past and look forward into the future with all interests working together for the best of all.

AFTER 40
bowel trouble

Constipation may very easily become chronic after forty. And any continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other unpleasant disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. Whenever they need any help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, or when your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious gassy condition warns of constipation

Mrs. Grady Reynolds Honors Miss Mary Heard.

Mrs. Grady Reynolds, always a charming hostess, proved unusually so Saturday afternoon when she entertained at her home on Eighth Street with a bridge party, having as her honor guest Miss Mary Heard, a member of the graduating class.

Silver baskets of pink roses, the class flower, were effectively arranged in the rooms where the tables were placed for the bridge games. At the conclusion of the bridge games Miss Mary Heard received the high score prize, silk hose; Miss Mary Foshee receiving the consolation prize, novelty handkerchiefs. Mrs. Reynolds presented the honor guest with an attractive pair of sport pajamas and a souvenir of the afternoon, a miniature diploma.

A tempting salad and ice course was served late in the afternoon. Those enjoying Mrs. Reynold's hospitality were: Misses Mary Heard, Bernice Williams, Gertie Mae Fiquette, Katherine Hayes, Frances Higgins, Mary Goodwyn Jones, Janice Danforth, Carrie Foshee, and Mrs. Inzer. Mrs. Page and Mrs. Heard.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Coody of Columbus, Ga., stopped over in Clanton last Monday afternoon for a visit with the latter's father, T. W. Bryan, Justice of the Peace.

Westinghouse REFRIGERATOR

Think of the world-wide reputation of WESTINGHOUSE. Think of the many improvements and the new conveniences offered in the WESTINGHOUSE Refrigerator. And remember, WESTINGHOUSE states openly, that you can save $50 to $150 yearly, with this improved electric refrigerator. Not in theory. Not on paper. But in cash—money which you are now wasting. And you can make this saving without inconvenience. A small cash payment puts the WESTINGHOUSE in your home —24 months to pay the balance.

See us. Challenge us to prove these startling claims. Make no decision! Pay no money down! Sign no commitments of any kind—until you do this. Only then can you be sure of having the latest improvements in electric refrigerators.

FARM WEALTH IN STATE IS RAISED BY $1,105,544

By improving their land and buildings and buying improved farm implements to replace those that are old and inefficient, Alabama farmers effected savings and enhanced the value of their land more than a million dollars last year. Statistical information as to how it was done is contained in the annual report of extension work in agricultural engineering as done by the county demonstration agents and J. B. Wilson and W. H. Gregory, specialists in this subject, who made the report.

During the year 124,659 acres of Alabama land were terraced, increasing the value $6.00 per acre or a total of $747,954.

At the same time 6,910 acres were drained, increasing the value $20 per acre or a total of $138,200.

The irrigated area of Alabama was extended over 179 acres which increased the value $200 per acre or a total of $35,800.

Following demonstrations, 965 two-horse cultivators were bought. The specialists estimated that each of these cultivators replaced one man three months at a monthly rate of $35 per month or a total of $105 for each cultivator. This multiplied by 965 gave a total saving of $101,325.

Improvement of residences, barns, and other farm buildings; the erection of new buildings; and the addition of new equipment brought the grand total up to $1,105,544.

Alabama Crop Outlook Good

General crop conditions in Alabama on the first of May this year were much improved and present prospects for the current season are flattering compared with the 1930 opening according to a report by F. W. Gist, Agricultural Statistician.

"Last year the drought had already set in and the month of April was exceedingly dry," Gist said. "The preparation of land had been delayed, and little planting had been done compared to normal seasons. This spring the weather has been favorable for farm work, ground was prepared earlier and in larger volume, and planting had progressed to practically a normal extent."

"A shooting affair occurred last night Sir Dwight Hopeless, a guest at Lady Panmore's ball, complained of feeling ill, took a highball, his hat, his coat, his departure, no notice of his friends a taxi, a pistol from his pocket, and finally his life. Nice chap. Regrets and all that."

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for May 24
JESUS PREPARING FOR THE END
Luke 22:7-23
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

At all times Jesus of Nazareth was loyal to His Jewish extraction. He observed the Sabbath, made full use of the synagogue and kept the Hebrew feasts. His work during recent weeks had the Jewish Passover as its objective. Preparation was made on Thursday of what we now call Holy Week. With His disciples He proceeds to Jerusalem and instructs how they may find the room where they will keep the feast. It was easy to follow the lead for they were to find a man bearing a pitcher of water, whereas water carrying was the job for women. It is thought that John Mark was the young man and that he led them to the house of his mother, Mary

A most significant act took place when Jesus washed the feet of all, since each one of the disciples purposely avoided this customary duty lest he appear to belittle himself and have a lesser place in the Kingdom they expected the Leader to establish.

Following the Passover meal and the departure of Judas, Jesus performed one of the few acts that deals with organization. He took some of the unleavened bread and gave to it the significance of His body that was about to be yielded up on the cross. The cup typified His shed blood. These emblems were to be taken by His disciples throughout all time as memorials of the gift of Self on the cross on the morrow. Thus we have the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, through which we make confession of Christ as our Saviour. Read the table conversation in John 14, 15, 16, and note the prayer of Jesus in that upper room as recorded in chapter 17. "This do in remembrance of me," is the abiding command to all believers.

MAIN STREET Looks at BROADWAY

Sidewalk Traders—

Gardenias, that boutonniere of the boulevardier, the favorite flower of kings and captains, were selling for fifteen cents each in the heart of Times Square this week. They were being offered by a sidewalk peddler who was doing a rushing business. Farther down the street another peddler was unloading sweet peas at five cents a small bunch

That these prices may be appreciated one must realize that millions of gardenias have been sold in recent years at $1 and $1.50 each. Two centuries ago Beau Brummell used to buy them for half a crown in England that is sixty cents

A Broad Market—

Flower salesmen do only a small part of the business that street peddlers here carry on. One can buy neckties, gold watches (25 cents each), novelty jewelry, fruit, potatoes, fresh fish, shoelaces and almost anything else from curb dealers.

They do a thriving business particularly the candy men and the small fruit men and the small fruit men in the wholesale furriers' district, where operators stand around during their lunch hour and supplement their quick lunches with some succulent fruit from the peddler's wagons

Dubious Goods—

The chance of getting "stung" in buying anything from peddlers is pretty heavy. Few expect the gold watches to contain much of that metal but they do expect to have the watches tick. The best any of these quarter timepieces has been known to do is run ten minutes on one winding—if they do that. Silk articles are so loaded with tin—the chief adulterant of silk—that one can almost shake out that gross metal by slamming the neckties against a post

It cannot be denied that some of them are quite pretty. One fifty cent tie wore almost a full week, which was pretty expensive dressing

A Slick 'Un—

One cannot be in New York a month and stroll about the streets without running into one kind of a dodge that is worth knowing about. The way it happens is that, as you saunter along some honest appearing truckman, dressed in overalls, sidles up and says under his voice, "Like a bargain?"

Who can resist. You inquire and find he works along the docks and has just helped to unload a foreign steamship. A packing case broke open and he got a wonderful shawl, or a piece of dress goods, or a suit pattern worth $100 or something like that.

"If you can keep your mouth shut you can take home something to the missus that is worth having. How about it?"

Depending on how you come out of the wrestle with your conscience is the measure of your loss. If you buy anything you lose. But that truckman looks so honest and there's only you two in the deal.

It's one of those things that adds considerably to the cost of a trip to New York.

A Broadway Happening—

A horse played a star part right in the heart of New York's theatrical district the other day when it backed into a manhole at 44th Street and Broadway

Its hind legs went down into the manhole, in which two laborers were working ten feet below the street level, and stuck there. Leading the crowd of curious was the policeman on the beat. He looked things over and called the fire department and the police patrol.

Meanwhile the crowd grew until it numbered 3,000 or more people. Those in front offered all kinds of suggestions. The driver of a truck got out a rope, made a sling under the horse's belly, hitched the rope to his auto, started the engine and out came the horse, practically unscathed

When the firemen arrived they found themselves with nothing to do. The captain of the fireman gave his O. K. to the job and asked the truck driver where he learned how to pull horses out of manholes.

"Oh, you have to do things like this out where I come from," was the rejoinder. "I was raised on a farm."

HUMIDOR PACK

IN congratulating the winners in the great Camel contest we want at the same time to thank most cordially the approximately million men and women who displayed their friendly interest by sending in an entry.

We wish also to thank the millions of smokers throughout the country for the appreciation they are showing for our new Humidor Pack as is evidenced by the notable increase in the sale of Camel cigarettes.

By means of this dust-proof, germ-proof, moisture-proof Cellophane wrapping the rich aroma and full flavor of choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos have been air-sealed in Camels for your enjoyment.

If you have not tried Camels in the Humidor Pack all we ask is that you switch over to this brand for one day.

After you have learned how much milder, how much cooler, how much more enjoyable it is to smoke a perfectly conditioned fresh cigarette, go back to the harsh hotness of stale cigarettes if you can.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

High School Commencement Program

The regular classroom work including final examinations for Chilton County High School will end Friday noon, May 22, and the regular Commencement Program will begin Friday night at eight o'clock.

The first number of this program will be the Senior Class exercises combined with Junior high school graduation. Twenty-eight members of the Junior high school will be presented diplomas. The Senior Class will then present their program of Class Day Exercises in the accustomed order. Both of these numbers will be very interesting and entertaining, and the friends and patrons of the school are expected to attend.

The second number of the Commencement Program will be the sermon on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock at the First Baptist Church, by Dr. H. C. Bass, pastor of the West End Memorial Baptist Church, Birmingham. The program for this occasion will be as follows:

1. Processional.
2. Son, Congregation: "All Hail The Power of Jesus Name."
3. Prayer, Dr. S. J. Ezell.
4. Special Music, Choir.
5. Responsive reading, Dr. Ezell.
6. Special Music, Choir.
7. Commencement Sermon, Dr. H. C. Bass, Birmingham.
8. Special Music, Choir.
9. Song, Congregation: "Blessed Be The Tie That Binds."

The third and last number of the Commencement Season will be the graduating exercises of the Senior Class, and the Baccalaureate address by Dr. Bradford Knapp of Auburn, Monday night at eight o'clock at the High School Auditorium.

The public is cordially invited to attend all these exercises.

Class Night, May 22, 1931.

Mr. Varnell's Agriculture Class Spends Saturday At Auburn

The following young men of the Senior One soils and crops class accompanied by Mr. Varnell, teacher, spent a most enjoyable and profitable day at Auburn last Saturday. Those making the trip were:

James Tiffin, Pratt Busby, Alec Hayes, Jarrell Burdette, Clyde Popwell, Theodore Littlejohn, Lewie Alford, Floyd Devaughn, Grady Carter, Jasper Cox, Jerome Gray, Melvin Powell, James Parrish, Morris Pyron.

This outing grew out of a project of work that was begun last fall in connection with the study of the storing of sweet potatoes, small grains, and live stock judging. The purpose of the visit was to check up on the projects along advanced lines at Auburn. The entire class is grateful for the reception received at Auburn by the heads of the different departments.

ALABAMA SUFFERS LEAST AMONG SOUTHERN STATES

"In the farm land depression since 1920, Alabama has suffered the smallest loss of any of the chief cotton growing states," F. W. Gist, State and Federal Agricultural Statistician said. He declared that Alabama land values are 73 percent of the 1920 value, the high peak of land value in recent years. "A slump in farm real estate values in virtually all states during the year ending March 1st, 1931, carries average values to new low levels since the postwar agricultural depression," he said.

He attributed the fall in farm land values to low prices of farm commodities, drouth, world depression and a congested farm real estate market.

LAST CALL

by your Fertilizer Dealer

No. 8

in a Series appearing in this newspaper

IF you hold out any longer from buying your side-dressing, you may find it too late for your crops to take full benefit from the fertilizer. You may also find it hard to get it in time. I've still got a good supply of Chilean Nitrate of Soda on hand. But it's not going to last very long the way they're buying it just now.

Your Fertilizer Dealer

IF you wait too long before side-dressing, you'll only be delaying harvest time and you won't get the big yields you should. With Chilean Nitrate selling at the lowest price in years, there's no saving in waiting until the last moment. Get your Chilean—the natural nitrate—NOW. Then there'll be no delay in putting out your fertilizer when crops need it most. In the new 100 lb. bags that stay in good shape, you'll find Chilean keeps in better condition. But be sure to insist on "Chilean" when you order your nitrate. It is the real thing... the real original "SODA." Remember the two kinds — Original Chilean (Crystalline) and Champion Brand (Granulated) both natural nitrate.

M. D. FOSHEE, Manager

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

Major Jeffers Attends World Peace Meeting

Anniston, Ala., May 13.—Major Lamar Jeffers, World War veteran and Fourth District Congressman, was in Indianapolis, Ind., today for a two-day session of the American Legion national committee on foreign relations and world peace.

The meeting is being held in connection with the regular May session of the national executive committee of the American Legion.

Congressman Jeffers is a vice president of Fidac, inter-allied organization of the veterans of the World War. By reason of his office in the international organization, he automatically becomes a member of the committee on world peace.

Congressman Jeffers was elected to the office in the international organization several months ago at a meeting in Washington and is the only American holding office in Fidac.

HUNDREDS ARE SEEN TAKING A PART IN PICNIC

All-Day Affair For Former Coosa People Brings Out Large Number

The all-day picnic given for the former Coosa County people who now reside in Chilton County, last Sunday on the Coosa River, near the new Rockford Road, brought out hundreds of people from all sections of Chilton County and parts of Coosa.

The crowd began to arrive early in the morning and by noon, there were approximately three hundred persons at the river bank, shaking hands with old acquaintances.

Col. A. C. Smith, of Clanton, and Hon. F. A. Gulledge of Verbena, were the principal speakers on the program for the day. This was one of the first picnics of its kind to be held in this section, and gave an opportunity for persons to see their home county friends again.

SON OF MR. AND MRS. K. C. FOSHEE DIED IN FLA., ON MAY 6TH

On May 6th the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Foshee of Lakeland, Fla., and took away their beloved son, Julius Wilbert, age 5 years. He died in the hospital at Tampa, Fla., following an illness which lasted three months and three days. He is survived by his parents, one sister, Mary Carr Foshee, and several other relatives.

IN MEMORIAM

Dear little Julius is now in Heaven,
Sleeping sweetly on,
With God and His angels
On that mighty throne.
But Oh! how we do miss him.
He was such a darling child.
But he is smiling now in Heaven
With the angels all the while.
Weep not, dear father, mother and little sister,
Although we know you miss him,
Miss his tender voice and love.
But some day we will meet him
In that heavenly home above.
—His Aunt, Mrs. Georgia Rutland.

POPPY SALE IN CLANTON ON SATURDAY

American Legion Auxilliary Of Chilton County To Sell Poppies Here

Work of preparing for the annual poppy sale of the American Legion Auxiliary went into full swing today when the memorial poppies which will be worn on Poppy Day, May 30, in honor of the World War dead, were received at Auxiliary headquarters. The little red flowers, packed in neat boxes, came from a U. S. Government hospital where they were made by disabled veterans under Auxiliary direction. They must be counted and arranged for distribution to the volunteer workers who will offer them on the streets on Poppy Day.

The poppies are paper replicas of the wild European poppies which bloomed on the battle fields in France and Belgium during the World War, Mrs. Gertrude Calloway, who is in charge of the work at Auxiliary headquarters explained. It was this flower, growing between the rows of wooden crosses above the fresh battle graves, which inspired the famous poem, "In Flanders Fields," by Col. John McCrea. Since the war the flower has become recognized throughout the world as the symbol of war sacrifice.

"I wonder how many of the people in Clanton who will wear these poppies this year, realize the story that is behind each little flower," Mrs. Calloway

Popular Picture Here Next Week

"The Man Who Came Back," an all-talking picture that has scored a hit wherever it showed will be presented at the Wadesonian Theatre in Clanton on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week, by the Clanton Kiwanis Club, according to an announcement from J. Mell Martin, president of the club.

Two of the screens most popular stars, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, take the leading parts in this most modern picture. These two lovers will be remembered as becoming popular here in the picture "Sunnyside Up."

This picture promises to fill the theatre each night shown here as wide publicity has been given it, and also due to its popularity.

PARTY FROM FAIRFIELD INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

A party composed of Dr. and Mrs. Harry Morris, of Fairfield, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Morris of Jasper, and Mrs. H. R. Sims, of Birmingham were badly shaken up and bruised as the result of an automobile accident which occurred on the Bimingham-Montgomery highway, about twenty miles south of Clanton Monday afternoon.

They had been to Montgomery to the commencement exercises at Womans College, where Miss Virginia Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Morris, graduated, and were returning when the accident occurred.

According to the story given the News, Dr. Morris was driving, and the car struck a bed of sand off the edge of the pavement, causing him to lose control of it. It was said that the car overturned twice before stopping.

All the occupants except Dr. Morris were thrown through the top of the heavy vehicle, it is believed. Mrs. Sims was believed to have suffered internal injuries. She was carried to the T. C. I. Hospital in Fairfield Monday night, while the others received medical attention in Clanton from Dr. Morris, who is connected with the T. C. I. Hospital. The car was badly damaged.

ISSUES PROCLAMATION DESIGNATING POPPY DAY

MAYOR J. LEE SMITH

Saturday, May 30, was proclaimed Poppy Day in Clanton in a proclamation issued by Mayor J. Lee Smith. The proclamation urges all citizens of the city to observe the day by wearing an American Legion and Auxiliary poppy as an individual tribute to the American men and women who gave their lives in the World War. It also calls upon the citizens of the city to contribute as liberally as their means will allow to the welfare of the disabled veterans and dependent families of the dead and disabled when purchasing their poppy.

The proclamation follows:

"I, J. Lee Smith, Mayor of the city of Clanton, remembering the fine young men of Chilton County whom we sent forth in the years of 1917 and 1918 to defend the honor and ideals of our nation on the battle fields of the world's most terrible war, and who died in the heroic performance of the duty the nation assigned to them, and deeming it fitting that the citizens of the city should pay honor to their memory by wearing the flower among whose bright red blooms many of them died, do hereby proclaim Saturday, May 30, Poppy Day.

"I urge that this day be observed by all patriotic citizens by the wearing of the memorial poppy made by disabled veterans which will be offered on the streets of the city by the women of the American Legion Auxiliary. I further urge that the citizens of Clanton who gave so gallantly of their services and so liberally of their wealth during the war, think on this day of those who gave health and strength, and when purchasing a poppy give as liberally as their means will allow to help lighten the burden for those who are still paying in suffering and poverty the price of our glorious victory.

"—J. Lee Smith, Mayor."

MAYORS VISIT FRANCE

In token of Franco-American friendship, the mayors of thirty-six American cities have been invited by France to be guests this month on the occasion of the Colonial Exposition at Paris. The thirty-six mayors are heads of as many cities which welcomed Dieudonne Costes and Maurice Bellonte last year when the latter made their good-will tour of America, after achieving the first non-stop flight from Paris to New York.

The mayors who arranged to make the trip sailed from New York on May 13 aboard the Ile de France, of the French line, with their wives, who are also invited. The party will return five weeks later on the same liner. All expenses to and from Paris and in traveling in France will be paid by the French authorities.

During the two days in New York before sailing, the mayors and their wives attended a series of entertainments and social events. In Paris, the Municipal Council will be their host. They will meet the President of the Republic and will be taken on a two weeks tour of France after visiting the Colonial Exposition.

My Experiences in the WORLD WAR

U. S. Advised on Powder Needs.

Meanwhile, a study by a joint French and American commission of the question of production of powders and explosives in France showed that the greater part of the raw materials must be imported and that, due to the shipping situation, France in December would produce only about half of the current output. It was apparent, therefore, that to avoid calamity the United States must not only furnish powder and explosives for all of its own forces, but must supply about half the French requirements, and the War department was so advised.

Gen. W. W. Atterbury.

By this arrangement a large saving of tonnage would be effected, as the weight of raw materials was ten to twenty times that of the finished product. As nitrates for the manufacture of powder and explosives had to be imported from Chili, the hazard to shipping would be reduced by avoiding the long haul to France. Millions of dollars were expended in the construction of plants at home in an attempt to produce nitrates, but none had been turned out before the end of the war.

Dawes Made Supply Chief.

In view of the uncertainty of obtaining more than a limited amount of ocean tonnage it was natural that we should procure abroad as large a proportion of supplies as possible, and our supply department began at once to make inquiries to meet the demands for construction material, subsistence stores and engineering equipment. Many sources of general supply had been developed by the French and we soon found ourselves not only in competition with them and the British but our different departments also began to bid against each other.

To my mind the solution seemed to be merely a matter of co-ordination. Therefore, I established a purchasing board to consist of one or more representatives of each service making purchases of any sort, including the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A.

Lieut. Col. Charles G. Dawes, Seventeenth engineers, well known as a man of large business experience, was appointed as the head of this board, the members of which were to meet together and make known their respective needs and then agree among themselves as to where and by which department such purchase was to be made, thus mutually assisting instead of competing with each other. Under the arrangement co-operation with the French was established and the agency became increasingly effective in handling our procurement activities.

Couldn't Depend on French R. R.'s.

The use of railways for the movement of troops and supplies had never before attained any such proportions as in the World war and there was no service except sea transportation upon which we placed greater dependence for our success.

It was apparent that we could not depend on the French without great risk of failure at a critical moment and it was evident that if we expected the maximum efficiency in this service we must provide our own personnel as well as additional locomotives and cars, all to be as far as practicable under American management.

With this plan in view commendable progress had been made toward both procurement and organization by Colonel Taylor, and complete estimates for rolling stock and construction at ports, terminals and yards, including an accurate survey of building and equipment requirements, had been made under his direction by Maj. W. J. Wilgus, formerly vice president of the New York Central, afterward a colonel, who had been a member of the Parsons board. These estimates without change served as a permanent guide for railway construction plans and material.

Creation of Transportation Corps.

As co-ordinate with the procurement and maintenance of material and equipment we were confronted with the vital question of organization for operation and management, but we had no officers in the regular service of sufficient experience in railway management to insure success. Therefore the evident course to pursue, to which the precedent of both British and French pointed the way, was to create a transportation corps immediately under the direction of some man of outstanding reputation in the railroad world. In accordance with the principle of obtaining the most competent men for important positions the following cable was sent July 29:

"Have made thorough study of railroad situation and am convinced that operation of railroads must be under man with large experience in managing railroads at home. Sucessful handling our railroad lines so important that ablest men in country should be selected. After almost disastrous results with inexperienced military men running railroads British selected ablest man could find to have charge transportation.

"Question here mainly one of physical operation and management in intimate relation with French, who retain general control, which is necessary to handle ordinary commercial traffic. Question of railroad transportation of course involves equipment, maintenance and new construction at front as army advances, and should be practically independent department, although nominally under engineers. Railman chosen should be sent here without delay, together with three or four able assistants of his own selection. Later on it is believed these men should be given appropriate military rank."

In reply, the War department recommended W. W. Atterbury, then general manager and now president of the Pennsylvania railroad, for the place, and I immediately requested that he be sent to France.

CHAPTER XIII

The most important question that confronted us in the preparation of our forces of citizen soldiery for efficient service was training. Except for the Spanish-American war nearly twenty years before, actual combat experience of the regular army had been limited to the independent action of minor commands in the Philippines and to two expeditions into Mexico, each with forces smaller than a modern American division.

The World war involved the handling of masses where even a division was relatively a small unit. It was one thing to call 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 men to the colors, and quite another thing to transform them into an organized, instructed army capable of meeting and holding its own in battle against the best trained force in Europe with three years' actual war experience to its credit.

A general scheme of schools for the A. E. F. was prepared by the operations and training section, but in order that this instruction should be as complete and uniform as possible and at the same time be co-ordinated with other activities, I declared that training should be handled by officers who could devote their entire time to it. An additional section of the headquarters staff therefore was established, called the training section, to function under my personal direction. As chief of this section Col. Paul B. Malone was chosen, with Col. H. B. Fiske as his assistant.

Appeal in British Methods.

The British methods of teaching trench warfare appealed to me very strongly. They taught their men to be aggressive and undertook to perfect them in hand-to-hand fighting with bayonet, grenade and dagger. A certain amount of this kind of training was necessary to stimulate the morale of troops by giving them confidence in their own personal prowess.

Through the kindness of Sir Douglas Haig we were fortunate early in our experience to have assigned to us Lieut. Gen. R. H. K. Butler and other officers of the British army to assist in this individual training.

Later on several French and British officers also came to lecture at a number of our schools.

Differ on War Principles.

We found difficulty, however, in using these allied instructors in that the French and, to a large extent, the British had practically settled down to the conviction that developments since 1914 had changed the principles of warfare. Both held that new conditions imposed by trench fighting had rendered previous conceptions of training more or less obsolete and that preparation for open warfare no longer was necessary. French publications and manuals were generally in accord with this theory.

If the French doctrine had prevailed our instruction would have been limited to a brief period of training for trench fighting. A new army brought up entirely on such principles would have been seriously handicapped without the protection of the trenches. It would probably have lacked the aggressiveness to break through the enemy's lines and the knowledge of how to carry on thereafter.

It was evident that the victory could not be won by the costly process of attrition, but that we should have to drive the enemy out into the open and engage him in a war of movement. Instruction in open warware was based upon individual and group initiative, resourcefulness and tactical judgment, which were of equal advantage in trench warfare.

Therefore, we took decided issue with the allies, and, without neglecting thorough preparations for trench warfare, undertook to train mainly for open warfare, with the object from the start of vigorously forcing the offensive.

Rifle Practice Urged.

Intimately connected with the question of training for open warfare was the matter of rifle practice. The earliest of my cablegrams on this subject was in August, in which it was urged that thorough instruction in rifle practice should be carried on at home because of the difficulty of giving it in France:

"Study here shows value and desirability of retaining our existing small arms target practice course. In view of great difficulty in securing range in France due to density of the population and cultivation, recommend as fast as practicable the complete course be given in the United States before troops embark. Special emphasis should be placed on rapid fire."

My view was that the rifle and bayonet still remained the essential weapons of infantry, and my cable stressing the fact that the basic principles of warfare had not changed, were sent in an endeavor to influence the courses of training at home. Unfortunately, however, no fixed policy of instruction in the various arms, under a single authority, ever was carried out there.

Insensible to advice, the inclination was to accept the views of French specialists and limit training to the narrow field of trench warfare. Therefore, in large measure, the fundamentals so thoroughly taught at West Point for a century were more or less neglected.

The responsibility for the failure of the War department to take positive action on my recommendations in such matters must fall upon the military head of the department, which was the general staff.

There were other causes, as we shall see later, that led to confusion and irregularity in training to such an extent that we often were compelled during the last stages of the war to send men into battle with little knowledge of warfare and often with no rifle practice at all.

Military Police Provided.

The maintenance of good order among our troops under the peculiar conditions of service in France was most important, and for this purpose a military police was essential. Such a force, under the control of provost marshal general, corresponded to the police department in a well-organized city, except that its jurisdiction included only those in the military service. The British, whose situation was similar to our own, gave us helpful information regarding their system, which, with a slight modification, was adopted for our armies.

In our previous wars, the provost guard, so called, usually consisted of troops of the line detailed for the purpose, but without any special training for such duty.

Col. Hanson Ely was selected to organize the police corps and made a good beginning in laying the foundation, but, at his own request, he was shortly relieved and sent to regimental duty. His successor, Col. W. H. Allaire, became provost marshal general until the following July, when he was relieved by Col. J. C. Groome.

Brig. Gen. H. H. Bandholtz, on account of his special fitness for such work from his experience as chief of constabulary in the Philippine islands, became the permanent head of the corps in September, 1918.

Due credit must be given to each of these officers, but particularly to Bandholtz, for the smart appearance and the high efficiency of this force.

The military police were indispensable in directing and handling traffic during combat activities, in preventing straggling and in maintaining order among scattered groups of our armies both before and after the armistice.

The organization November 1, 1918, numbered 463 officers and 15,912 men, spread over the whole of France.

CHAPTER XIV

In response to my request to Washington for an experienced man to take charge of rail transportation, W. W. Atterbury, general manager of the Pennsylvania railroad, arrived in France and reported to me September 1, 1917.

At Atterbury's suggestion a cable was sent requesting certain men to fill important positions in the organization. The list included J. A. McRae general manager of the Long Island railroad, for general manager, with C. M. Bunting as business manager, H. C. Booz as engineer for construction, and J. G. Rogers as deputy. The railway problem was far from easy, and many were the obstacles to be overcome, both in our own and in the French services. Successful management would have been very doubtful under a leader without Atterbury's patience, ability and force of character.

Visits to our training areas by the French, official and otherwise, had become rather frequent. One of the visitors, M. Georges Clemenceau, who always remained a power even when not in any official position (Clemenceau was not then prime minister), called at the headquarters of the First division, accompanied by General de Castelnau, the commander of the group of armies with which it was serving.

Clemenceau Urges Action.

In the course of the conversation with General Sibert, the division commander, M. Clemenceau, with considerable emphasis, urged that our troops be put into the line without delay. It was explained to him by General de Castlenau that as soon as they were sufficiently advanced the troops of the division were to be placed by brigades with the French in a quiet sector near Luneville.

M. Clemenceau went on to say that America had now been in the war several months and the French people were wondering when they expected to take an active part. He said that the French army was exhausted by the war and that its morale was poor. He insisted then, as he did with even greater vehemence later on in an official capacity, that it was not so much a question of troops being ready as it was of giving relief to the allies.

Although the division was only partially trained it could have been used in an emergency, but there was nothing threatening in the situation at that time and no suggestion had been made that it should go into the line for serious work.

The failure of our aviation bureau to keep abreast of airplane development in the contending armies cost us serious delay.

With a lack of data in the beginning, little progress had been made at home on our aviation program at the end of five months. Fruitless efforts to describe mechanical construction and give definite information concerning production and otherwise reach decisions by cable prompted Washington to send a special mission to France, of which Maj. R. C. Bolling was the head.

Through his ability and expert knowledge he rendered exceptional service in co-operating with those in control of allied aviation and in furnishing the necessary technical information upon which to base action at home. The investigation made by his mission confirmed the view that our manufacturers could not begin to furnish planes before the summer of 1918.

IN MEMORY OF MOTHER, MRS. ANNIE CULP

—o—

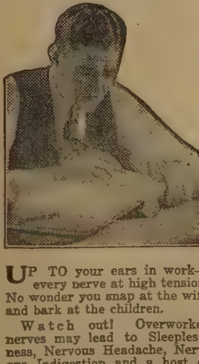
On last Wednesday, just after twelve o'clock, God called the sweet spirit of my precious mother home. Mother had been in bad health for some time, and her death was not unexpected, but was a great shock to the family and community, as she appeared to be better than usual that day, but God looked down and said: "It is enough." So without a struggle her sweet spirit was wafted to the Eternal shore to be united with those precious ones gone on before.

Mother leaves here on this sad earth, besides numerous relatives and friends an aged mother, Mrs. A. M. Ledbetter, one brother, J. C. Ledbetter, of Tallassee, Ala., four boys and five girls, Oscar L., Thomas J., and Allen Culp, all of Birmingham, Clifton L., of Selma, and Mrs. C. W. Blackwell, Mrs. M. H. Headley, Mrs. S. L. Broadhead of Clanton, Route 7. Mrs. S. W. Milstead of Selma, Ala., and Mrs. John L. Moore of Plantersville, Ala.,

Dear brothers and sisters, let's all be prepared to meet the sweet smiling face on the other shore where there are no more partings or farewells to be said. Mother was always so pleasant and kept her troubles locked away in her heart until it gave way and released the sweet spirit to wend its way to portals of glory. Yet it is so hard to give up the dear presence in our homes.

Mother was a devoted member of the Methodist Protestant church from early childhood and always lived up to her vows in a quiet way. The precious form was laid away amid banks of beautiful flowers at eleven o'clock on Thursday at Pleasant Grove with the Rev. T. C. Cassaday of Montgomery officiating.

Farewell darling mother, farewell.
Darling mother how I miss you,
Words can never tell.
But I know that I will find you
In a land where all is well.
In that bright and happy morning,
With our loved ones gone before.
We will then be joined together—
There to live forever more.
—Written by a loving daughter,
MRS. ROBERTA BROADHEAD.



OVER WORKED NERVES

UP TO your ears in work—every nerve at high tension. No wonder you snap at the wife and bark at the children.

Watch out! Overworked nerves may lead to Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Nervous Indigestion and a host of other unpleasant disturbances. Why don't you try Dr. Miles' Effervescent Nervine Tablets?

Just one in a half glass of water makes a pleasant, sparkling drink delightfully soothing to over-taxed nerves.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is now made in two forms—Liquid and Effervescent Tablet. Both are the same therapeutically.

Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

School is out and Commencement is over, now we are ready for church work in earnest. We should allow nothing to come between us and our church attendance for the summer. Be with us at 9:45 and at 11 a. m. next Sunday. We are anxious to have you in one of our religious educational classes, and then in one of our pews to hear the gospel.

We observe College Day Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, and we are giving out a special invitation for all young people and parents to worship with us. We are anxious for you to hear the message on Christian Education.

The League will meet Sunday night but we will have no preaching. We are calling in the night service on account of the big Memorial service to be held in our church Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Be sure that you read the announcement of this service, and let everybody come.

Memorial Day

The beautiful custom of setting aside one day in the year for the decoration of soldiers' graves is said to have originated in Petersburg, Va., where Memorial Day was observed for the first time on June 9, 1865, in honor of Confederates who were killed in battle there just one year before.

In 1868 the wife of General John A. Logan, then commander of the G. A. R., happened to be in Petersburg on its Memorial Day, and was so impressed with the tributes of flowers and flags with which the graves were decorated that she suggested to the general that this be made a national custom. General Logan accordingly issued an order to the G. A. R. "that every post of the Grand Army should hold suitable exercises and decorate the graves of their dead comrades with flowers, on May 30 of each year.

The idea spread throughout the South, also, and Confederate Memorial Day is observed in various states on the following dates: April 26 in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and Florida; May 10 in North and South Carolina; the second Friday in May in Tennesse, and June 3 in Louisiana. In the South the national Memorial Day of May 30 is more generally observed since the World War, the exercises being conducted by the American Legion.

At the national cemetery of Arlington, near Washington, the grave of America's Unknown Soldier is decorated with special ceremonies, usually participated in by the President and other high officials, on Memorial Day.

It is highly fitting that all citizens should join in the observance of this most beautiful and sacred of our national holidays.

Organize Friends of Schools

Some years back it was said that farmers could never be organized. It was said that the farmer was too independent and would not co-operate in an organization. Judging from the mass of farmers that gathered in Montgomery one day recently to voice their disapproval of the Craft Bill, somebody was wrong when they said farmers could not co-operate. Judging from appearance at the gathering in the Capitol City, considerable headway has been made to organize the farmer.

The farmer, then, is undoubtedly pretty well organized over the state.

Friends of the schools in Chilton County could be a group just as the farmers are organized, and for the sake of our boys and girls, let us start to build some sort of a real organization of friends of schools in Chilton County, and keep going forward.

Less Work For Women

Woman's work is divided up so thoroughly and effectively among machines there is little left for the efforts of even the most ingenious inventor.

A recent issue of the Brooklyn Eagle says that with so much work of the world done by electricity it was high time the kitchen should receive its share of equipment necessary to make it as efficient as the most up-to-date manufacturing plant.

"An electrotable, the newest kitchen assistant, will be as indispensable to the housewife as her vacuum cleaner," says the New York writer. "In its cabinet are attachments to take the drudgery out of food preparation. Meat chopper, fruit juice reamer, grater and shredder devices, bowls and beaters of various sorts are at hand to work at the turn of a switch. There are places to plug in the waffle iron, percolator, egg cooker, and so on, part of every well-equipped household."

Discussing the invention, the Detroit Times says: "If some day you should find at your back door a maid who said, 'Madam, I want to work for you for the rest of my life; I will never need food or a day off, always be available to work at any hour,' what would you say?" and leaves the answer to the housewife's imagination.

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

By Edson R. Waite

The man who earns his money in the city where he lives and spends it in some other city is no citizen.

No man can send his money away from home and then expect his home city to prosper.

The man who helps to build a city other than the one he lives in is a liability, not an asset.

Every citizen should be a booster for better business for the home city.

They should help to keep their city on the map in capital letters.

Citizens who think a city can be built without co-operation are just dreaming.

In order for a city to grow all citizens must be loyal to the home city and keep their money working at home.

The city that pays attention to community growth, makes the most of its natural resources, keeps up its appearance and helps in the development of its trade territory and gets somewhere.

An unattractive looking city hasn't half a chance.

In order to instill home pride and attract new industries, a city should keep dressed up. A good front goes a long way.

Women In Prison

Four years ago a new Federal prison for women was opened at Alderson, West Virginia, with Dr. Mary B. Harris as superintendent. A recent writer describes it as "a Federal junk yard where women are sent who have broken the nation's laws," but adds that under the guidance of Dr. Harris "these misfits of society are being reconditioned to such good purpose that the prison world is sitting up and taking notice."

Dr. Harris has demonstrated that strict discipline may well be combined with sympathetic interest in her unfortunate wards, a majority of whom are drug addicts when they are sent to her. While many of these cases seem hopeless, much success has been attained already in effecting what appear to be permanent cures.

A striking illustration of the efficacy of the prison's system is seen in the fact that of 170 paroles granted since the institution was opened, only one has been broken. Many affectionate letters are received by the superintendent and her assistants from women who were former inmates of the prison, and quite a number have returned for a friendly visit.

The prison is conducted on the theory that there is some good in everyone, and it is the business of prison authorities to develop the best in its wards, at the same time firmly repressing their evil tendencies so far as possible. This theory is working out well in practice at Alderson.

Friendliness Plus Advertising

Well advertised products have the reputation of being of a superior quality. Stores in Clanton that carry well known lines of goods in stock and persistently advertise that fact, find that sales are greater and more easily made, because their goods give better satisfaction.

The business of persistently advertising goods of quality not only wins new business but results in steady sales, and the effects are lasting, as people everywhere are ever on the alert for things that will add to their comfort. Stores that are known as friendly stores get the business, because they advertise all the while so that the people may know they have what they want. Continuous advertising is an assurance that the store advertising is offering quality at attractive prices.

What Does It Matter?

Maybe it could be termed Murder, and maybe it could be termed carelessness or disregard, but whatever it is, at the rate it is going on now, there will be very few dogs left. A motor trip over the Birmingham-Montgomery highway will show one that a dog hasn't a Chinaman's chance if he is a pedestrian on the highway.

Recently, a motorist going from Birmingham to Montgomery stated that he saw eight dogs lying on the pavement, dead, from some automobile or truck between the two cities. Two of the dogs seen were large, well cared for dogs, possibly someone's pets.

Chickens, rabbits and cats, too will find it dangerous to attempt to cross a highway. Some persons no doubt think it sport to run down a rabbit or cat crossing the road. Or maybe it is a chicken running for its life. But what does it matter? It is only a chicken, maybe it is some woman's chicken who is trying hard to eke out a living from her chickens and eggs, and you probably killed her best layer, or maybe it was some little girl's pet chicken. But what does it matter?

What does it matter, it is only a cat. But maybe it is some little girl's pet cat, she has raised from a small kitten, cherishing it, waiting for it, and in a moment's flash your car has crushed out its life. But what does it matter?

What does it matter, it is only a dog. But whose dog? Who depended on that dog to come home at night to keep them company? Who depended on that dog to hunt down a square meal for the family in hunting season? Who at times loved that dog as if he was the only friend they had? Who feels the loss of that dog, when he fails to return home, after your automobile has left it on the highway, its life crushed out? Left there to be crushed again by another automobile until its is a mass of blood, broken bones? What does it matter?

What does it matter, it is only a little child? A little girl, or a little boy on an errand for his or her mother. Its life crushed out by a single blow from your automobile. A family stricken with grief. An innocent life sent Heavenward, a heart-broken mother and father.

But what does it matter? Would it matter if it was your cat, your little girl's cat? Would it matter if it was your dog? Would it matter if it was your little boy or girl? Give them all a chance.

Letters To The Editor

CHILTON COUNTY ALMSHOUSE

o

Editor, Chilton County News:

In a recent publication by J. D. Bean, keeper Chilton County Almshouse, ('whose type or character I do not care to assail), I am charged with making false accusations knowingly and not seeking the truth, which calls for facts.

On my first visit to our almshouse about September 1930, my suspicion was aroused while greeting old acquaintances, answering my "how are you," their usual reply was, "not much, but don't say I said anything." Their appearance and demeanor showed plainly that they were coerced. I made no comment.

I returned later and saw a meal (untouched) which had been served to Mr. Franklin on the porch, it consisted of thick white cornbread, cold cabbage and a glass of milk. I saw another meal served then in a pan by an attendant to Mr. Price, who was on a bed a few feet away. I could not tell what it was; it resembled dough. I saw no knife, fork or spoon. Presently another person appeared before Mr. Price and propounded the question—"Do you get enough to eat here," and repeated it. I cannot forget his face as he feebly looked up and said "I reckon;" asked again he made the same answer, "tell the man so" was then said looking at me. It was plain that this old man was overawed in his weakened condition. Neither he or Mr. Franklin partook of their meal while I remained about 15 minutes.

(The above Mr. Price (insane and helpless lost his plantation on the Highway valued at about $6,000.00 a few years ago while under guardian J. D. Collins (sheriff of Chilton County), appointed by Judge Reynolds, and D. C. Reynolds, known as Mrs. Dora C. Reynolds, wife of Judge Reynolds, received a deed for it, through a court in Equity.)

I then went through the main dining room where the evening meal had just been finished, to look for evidence of meat on the table, but found none, and apparently nothing other than had been served to Mr. Franklin.

I was told that the meal I saw was about an average for noon and evening, and for breakfast, they had "four biscuits, about the size of a dollar, a small thin piece of butter and stained water for coffee."

One informant said he had not seen an egg, or piece of fried meat since being there (over a year), that a small piece of beef was served about three weeks prior, and another about three weeks before that. Others said, the last egg they had to eat was Easter 1929, their principal food being cornbread (made with water) and cabbage. I learned later that they received greens, and that only two cows were kept to supply milk and butter for about 25 inmates, and Mr. Bean's family.

Hearing that some of the inmates would beg food at houses in the neighborhood, I called at the home of an old darky about two miles away, and was told by him, that Mr. ————, one of the inmates made regular visits to his home about once a week and while there asked for something to eat, saying he was hungry and didn't get much to eat over yonder. The darky said, "I always sets him down to my table and puts the best I got before him."

I was informed that three inmates were abused for talking to me, and that "J. D. Bean said, the next time he caught me at the poorhouse, he would make my face look like a sifter's bottom." Thereafter on the 14th of November I wrote to Mr. Shaver an inmate saying, I would take eggs to Mr. Smith's home nearby for them if they could get them. No answer came, and on the 18th I went alone to the almshouse, but remained in my car in the public road. Mr. Bean and his wife came at once and while threatening me he attempted to open the door of my car, being restrained after firm warning—there were others nearby. He continued to threaten me and said "the next time he caught me on the poorhouse premises" me and you are going to have trouble." I said, "I want to see Mr. Shaver." He said "he is not here." He then referred to a matter contained in my letter to Mr. Shaver. I left and have not been on the poorhouse premises since.

Mr. Bean invites criticism, but well knows the reluctance of any citizen of Chilton County to publish an adverse report. The fate of some subjected to slanderous publications which it seems has been a source of amusement and satisfaction to a large constituency for about 35 years, is too well known and any man is loth to expose himself to these malicious attacks. However, I will not be deterred in my duty as I see it, and this consideration is insignificant when my conscience speaks.

I have not turned against the investigators for the State—no, they laid many affidavits before the authorities, describing the deplorable conditions of abuse, assault and cruelty against an under-nourished pauperism. I saw copies of some of them from inmates, and in each case, affiant swore, they did not get enough to eat. I was present when the affidavit was made, that Bean refused to let the inmates vote in 1930, affiant stating that Bean said, he and Judge Reynolds had decided not to allow them to vote, two commissioners then being chosen.

One of the investigators stated to me that their report was unfavorable. A party with them said, they stated after leaving the almshouse, that "they were shocked, and that 'everything they had was substantiated ten-fold." I talked with the man who investigated, about July 1930, on reported assault and insufficient food; he said "he thought his report was sufficient to get indictments."

Inaction by the State in certain matters of momentus consequence, seems to be exemplified by the following recent comment by one of our Dailies, "Alabama's greatest sins in connection with the Training School have been gross neglect, and timidity to correct its mistakes when laid before it."

I was told by several that Mr. Bean not only required inmates to labor on the poor farm, but his own farm as well, and that they received "only what we get to eat." That there is about four bales of cotton, corn and other things raised on the poor farm each year, which goes to Mr. Bean, in addition to receiving $12.00 per month from the County for each inmate, and to say the least our poor are delivered with a price, and Relegated to the Workhouse.

This conduct, as well as obstructing suffrage rights is in conflict with, and nulified by our Federal Constitution, which tolerates no form or semblance of peonage, regardless of our local law which says—

"No pauper shall be caused to work without a certificate of the County Physician that said work will not be injurious to such pauper."

and which I consider a disgrace and vicious blot against the name of Alabama.

To inform certain individuals of a private matter, will state, that my financial statement made soon after closing my saw mill business, some years ago, showed a credit balance of more than $52,000.00 in cash and its equivalent in addition to other property. Will Mr. Bean state his profit from operation of our almshouse, which is the cause of our dissension.

I sent our poor three bushels of oranges (1. each for 24 inmates) and was informed that they received only eight each, and failed to receive a total of 240.

Stress is laid on many favorable inspections while everyone knows that these prearranged inspections amount to little or nothing.

There is no arrangement for caring for colored paupers; this is more than a scandal and disgrace.

I do not doubt Mr. Smith's statement of seeing cornbread and milk carried to the inmates for supper time after time, the whippings of Mr. Queen, and denial of religious services.—I see no remedy the State having woefully failed while the bars are against their friend and intercessor.

Yes, I was informed by reliable persons that the Commissioners and Judge Reynolds spent most of the day, December 23rd 1930 at the almshouse, and took a paper sack of oranges and apples, and a Notary Public. That the Judge went around and told these people he would send them away from here, and then asked them about their welfare. This was immediately following the State's investigation, and speaks for itself.

Words fail me to describe this diabolical and miserable situation. My friendship and tender feeling for the poor and needy—the friendless—the defenseless—prompts my action. I failed to induce leading citizens to come into the open and was forced to champion their cause alone.

Finally, to our Commissioners, let me say, my foreign friends— In the name of mercy, pity, grevious affliction and fellow-feeling, hear the plea of the broken spirit that "crieth out"—Assert yourselves—shake off the frouzy manacles of any prevailing influence, or dominant force. Redeem your trust. Allay the stigma. Renew your obligation, and perform it with dispatch and dignity. That you may never feel the pangs of a guilty conscience for wounded grief, but ever cherish the thought of a well kept trust and rejoice that you were so honored, and have that distinction among the walks of men and be able to face your God.

W. T. HAND.

A Peanut Shell For A Hat

Editor Chilton County News:

Monday night a debate was held in the courthouse where two men of differing opinions met to discuss their impressions concerning the future punishment of the wicked. Mr. Bowen, representing the International Bible Students sought to prove from the Bible that the wicked would be completely destroyed; while Mr. Hill, representing the Baptist denomination, used the major portion of his time in denouncing his opponent, enlarging upon his ignorance and nescience. I can not conceive of a gentleman, Christian or otherwise, and especially a minister of the Gospel, standing before an audience and alluding to the brainlessness of a fellow-being in the language that was spoken on the platform Monday night.

When our forefathers came to America and established this glorious country of ours their coming was prompted by a noble purpose and an ideal that should ever live in the breast of every true American citizen. That which they sought was freedom to worship God as they chose, or rather as conscience dictated, according to their own interpretation of the Scriptures, with no one to gainsay their right to their own belief. The Separatist movement came as a result of the desire of the Puritans to worship God without the intervention of the state into religious affairs. And as a result of this Separatist movement the Baptist denomination came into existence early in the seventeenth century. Roger Williams, a Puritan, but unable to conscientiously conform to the Church of England, landed in Boston in 1631. He founded the colony of Providence in Rhode Island on the principle of complete religious freedom. Here he organized the first Baptist Church in America, consisting of twelve members.

From that little beginning the great Baptist denomination has grown and developed in all parts of the world. Has Mr. Hill turned from these worthy principles of our forefathers? If he has read of the persecutions suffered by the early founders of the Baptist church in their efforts to establish the glorious freedom which we now enjoy, he must have forgotten how they were imprisoned and persecuted, whipped or heavily fined for daring to assert their beliefs. In Boston they met great persecution and in Virginia, though imprisoned and severely fined, they preached the Gospel and won many converts. Surely Mr. Hill would not call back those old days and have the tables turned on some other denomination.

If one sect happened to differ with another in belief regarding any points of doctrine I cannot imagine men of such magnificent ideals pronouncing upon an opponent the verdict that "If his head were whittled down to fit his brain a peanut shell would make him a good-sized Panama hat." All the dignity of a Christian, the Christ-like manner of a minister, is completely lost in a remark such as that. One cannot tell the size or state of development of another person's brain from mere observation. Jesus says in Matthew 7:1 "With what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged." I do not believe Mr. Hill's conduct on the platform and his unkind and very unfacetious remarks against the International Bible Students and Judge Rutherford in general, and Mr. Bowen in particular, were truly representative of the Baptist denomination. I have found the Baptists of my acquaintance kind-hearted and considerate of others in varying doctrines.

The same argument that would cause Mr. Hill to denounce as brainless an individual who differed with him in regard to the punishment of the wicked would hold true in regard to the difference between the Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians in the matter of infant baptism, sprinkling, and immersion. There is a wide difference of opinion and practice in this matter. I wonder if he calls those witless or idiotic who disagree with him in regard to baptism. In criticising Mr. Bowen he was in reality criticising any other denomination which did not agree with his own.

Mr. Bowen is the first of the International Bible Students that I have ever heard speak. I am unacquainted with their belief and have no affiliation with them in any way whatever, but I must say that I admired Mr. Bowen's conduct as a Christian and a gentleman toward his opponent. I was pleased with the courteous manner in which he always referred to "My worthy opponent" and the composure and placidity with which he endeavored to refute the arguments of the opposite side. These qualities were not evidenced in the treatment he received. Whatever our denomination, let us be governed by the law of kindness toward our fellow man. If personal feeling must enter into a debate on religious topics then a controversy is in vain. Why spend our time disputing our differences of opinion? Think of our Saviour who left His heavenly home and came to this earth and died on the cross for you and me, think of such amazing love for us unworthy beings. Well may we join with the devout poet in singing:

"When I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of Glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride."

INSIST on the INSIDE FACTS

For Your Protection Make These Comparisons Before You Buy Your Tires

UNDERNEATH the surface is where you get the cold truth about tire values. It's the inside of the tire—the method of construction and the quality and quantity of materials—that determines its Stamina, Performance, Safety, VALUE. You can no more tell the quality of a tire by its outside appearance than you can tell the character of a man by the kind of clothes he wears.

We have arranged to show you cross sections of Firestone and special brand mail order tires. You can come here and make your own comparisons, uninfluenced by any sales propaganda. We urge you to thoroughly check every vital point — rubber volume, weight, width, thickness, and plies under the tread. Then buy accordingly—ON FACTS AND FACTS ALONE. Against the various claims presented about different tires, isn't this the most logical suggestion ever made to you? Could there be any more positive way to definitely determine which tires offer you the most for your money? There can be no question or controversy when you get the FACTS yourself.

Here I come again with a few words from this community. Don't know if my letter of last week missed the waste basket.

Health here is fairly good at present. Everybody is battling Gen. Green, taking advantage of this pretty weather we are having.

Mr. W. T. Robinson and family attended the family reunion at Union Grove church last Sunday and reported a grand time.

Mr. Gordon Ervin of New Orleans, La., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Ervin, here this week.

On next Sunday, May 31, there will be special services at Union Springs. The Memorial Supper of our Lord will be observed at the eleven o'clock hour and our Training Class will meet in the afternoon at two o'clock.

Then at 7:30 p.m. we will have special services. The pastor announces as his subject for the evening, The Final Examination. We wil lalso have special music for the evening service. Everybody is cordially invited to attend these services.

Our pastor, W. W. Dyer, is planning to be off to the University of Alabama next week to attend the State Teachers School this summer.

Rev. W. W. Dyer came back Monday afternoon from Bibb County with a big smile on his face, reporting a jolly good time the past week end. Wonder where he went?

W. T. Robinson has been driving the school bus from this community for the past nine months. School is out now and he will give his attention to his farm for awhile. I'll bet he sure does hate to get out to work after being out so long, Ha, ha.

FINAL PLANS MADE FOR LOCAL GIRL SCOUT CAMP ON RIVER

—o—

The local troop of girl scouts will begin their first experience of camping when they go to camp next Monday, June 1.

The following scouts have registered to attend the camp:

Elizabeth Williams, Gladys Martin, Mary Belle Bean, Ruth Gowan, Eloise Rasberry, Helen Roberts, Hary Charles Cox, Dollie Belle Harris, Dixie Johnson, Jane Neighbors, Helen Nix, Frances Foshee, Theda Wyatt, Jane Pitts, Margaret Jones, Mary Edith Jones, Frances Rasberry, June Cox, Elizabeth Lawrence, Helen Moore, Hilda Hart, and Grace Plyler. It is hoped that other members of the troop will join the camp.

In order to make the camp fee as low as possible, the camp staff has been selected from local help. The camp staff is composed of the following:

Miss Zora Guy, Troop Captain; Mrs. Napoleon Johnson, Director; Mrs. C. E. Stapp, Handicraft; Mrs. W. M. Wyatt, Director; Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin, Camp Recreation and Woodcraft; Miss Mary Ellis, Swimming and Camp Dramatics; Miss Emma Lou Bass, of Birmingham, Nature Studies and Food.

JACOBS CHAPEL

(Too late for last week)

The Teachers' Training Class here finished its first book of the Sunday School Manual last Sunday afternoon. Several took the examination and passed. We are real glad to have so many who are prepared to teach in our Sunday school. For this day of specialization a person must prepare himself or herself for whatever vocation in life they choose. Some of us older people don't seem to realize the importance of being trained. Some seem to think that if one can read and write it's all right. But the way I see things if a person is not trained in the vocation he chooses to follow, he does not do very much and never builds himself or herself up to anything better—just drags along in the same old rut. You may look over Chilton County or anywhere else and you will find the man who is pushing ahead is the one who's had years of training. The farmer who is prosperous is the one who has years of training behind him. How important it is that we train ourselves for our life's work. Then, how much more important it is that we prepare ourselves to carry on the Lord's work. We can only teach as far as we have been trained. By hard study, prayer and the help of God, so let us search the Scriptures that we may find food for the soul that we may grow in grace and understanding of the Word of God and pray God to lead us and direct us so that we may be able to accomplish the things that we desire in life according to His will.

We had a very large attendance at preaching last Sunday, and had a very good service. There will be no preaching next Sunday on account of the absence of the pastor, but we will have Sunday school at 10:30 o'clock. Everybody who will, come. I'll stop.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

The schools of the City and the county have closed. College students who have been away to school are back at home. We can not take lightly the responsibility of caring for this large amount of young life that is now released from restraints. Now is the time for church organizations to be wide awake. It behooves us to provide wholesome entertainment for our young people. Many a youth goes to ruin during vacation because no one cares for his soul. The Leagues, the B. Y. P. U. and the Christian Endeavor, should take charge of young life with renewed energy. Not only that but great care should be taken in the boys and girls who no longer attend school. They are going to be let loose around our homes and on our streets. Clanton needs a play ground where the children can go and find room for play without being run over by cars. It is very dangerous for boys to fill the streets with bats and balls. Shall we have a mangled child on our streets during the summer? Let parents and auto drivers be careful.

—o—

The other morning I was hoeing for dear life in my garden. The perspiration was pouring from every pore of my skin and my muscles were tired from the constant dig. I wondered why I was experiencing such fatigue. Then I noted that I was hoeing three rows at one time. I looked up and saw a man walking along the side walk with plenty of leisure. He looked like he had never carried a row in his life. There I was carrying three rows at one time, and the other fellow was carrying not a one. Well, that is true to life. It seems to me that I have carried from two to five rows, the most of my life. The trouble in a preacher's life is that he must carry the rows that belong to someone else. The Deacons sit down on their job, and if the row is carried, the preacher has got to double up and carry that row. The Stewards dig a little and then they squawk, "Calf Rope," and if the job is done the preacher must double his rows and do it. I am in for making every fellow carry his own row. It looks fair and right for three men to carry three rows and not for one man to have to carry three rows while two stand idle.

—o—

Ezekiel saw seven men approaching Jerusalem. One of the men was clothed in linen and carried a bottle of ink and a paint brush, while the other six men followed him with large battle axes. The man clad in linen was to go through the city and put a crossmark on the head of everyone who loved God and kept His commandments. The other six were to follow him and cut down every man and woman who was not thus checked. That was a terrible day in Jerusalem, and when Ezekiel saw how many were falling, he fell upon his knees and prayed as he had never prayed before. Not many were checked and that left a vast multitude to be cut down. I am praying that the good Lord will not release those seven men on Clanton and Chilton county. Wonder how many bottles of ink it would take to check all among us who really love the Lord and who really observe His laws?

—o—

A friend of mine won quite a reputation for himself because of his ability to untangle lines. He would take the tangled lines out under a tree, and he would sit down and woo the tangles apart with a soft whistle, or a mellow song. He was never in a rush, but with unspeakable patience and perseverance he would work with the tanglel line until it fell apart and gave up its secret. If you want to find a sure enough great man, you will not be far from finding him, when you select a man who will whistle, laugh and sing while he untangles a line in the presence of other men who are catching fish. The most of men will throw a tangled line away, give it to some friend to untangle for them, or cut it all to pieces. That fails to show a great spirit. The great man will take his tangle and sit down and think it through, and quietly, persistently, patiently work at it until the line is no longer a tangle. When you meet a tangled line, and you may expect them along the way of life, be a real hero and untangle that line. Refuse to throw your problems aside, refuse to hand them over to someone else to be untangled, refuse to cut your way through all tangles. Have the patience and the perseverance to untangle your own tangled lines.

—o—

On entering the Court House I saw a great throng of people crowded about the desk of the Tax Collector. They were pushing each other and crowding toward the man who was busy with receipt blanks. I asked the Probate Judge what it all meant. He told me that it was the last day in which the people could pay their tax, and they were trying to get before the Collector for a tax receipt. What had that mad, scrambling, pushing crowd done? They had done just what thousands are doing in regard to preparation for the next world. They had said, "There is time enough yet," and had gone on until the last day. They hoped to get in on the last minute. Many in that crowd had to go home without a tax receipt. According to law, the tax book went shut at a certain moment. "Procrastination is a thief of time." Why put off until tomorrow the thing that should be done today?

POWER COMPANY ASSESSED HIGH TAX HEAD SAYS

Contributed 34.01 Per Cent of Taxes Paid Into Educational Trust Fund

Montgomery, Ala., May 14.—Alabama Power Company is assessed at a higher rate than other utilities, persons and non-utility corporations, Henry T. Knight, Chief Clerk of the State Tax Commission, testified today before the Joint Legislative Committee investigating electric utilities.

Knight said that Alabama Power Company is assessed for taxes at 46.81 per cent. of the value of the Company's taxable property and assets. This compared, he said, with an assessment of 45 per cent. for other utilities in the State and 33 per cent for property generally over the State. Utility assessments, he pointed out, are at a higher rate than any other class of property with the possible exception of some banks.

The Power Company pays more taxes than any other corporation in the State, Knight testified. It contributed 34.01 per cent. of the taxes paid into the educational trust fund in 1930. This, he added, was the largest single payment into this fund created by the Legislature in 1927.

Rev. Harvie Culp will preach at this place next Sunday night. Everybody is invited to come and hear him.

Our B. Y. P. U. meets every Sunday night, Sunday school every Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Our singing society meets every third Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. We always welcome visitors to meet with us.

Mrs. J. I. Bice, who underwent an operation for appendicitis May 19, at Hill's Hospital in Montgomery, is doing nicely. We hope she will soon be home again.

Several from here attended the singing at Providence Sunday.

Miss Sudie Keen of Pletcher spent Saturday night with her brother, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Keen, and family.

Mr. Jean Mullins and family and Mr. John Mullins and family were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coggins Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Deason and daughter and Mrs. Eliza Weldon were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Billingsley Sunday.

TO MY FRIENDS—IN SICKNESS HEALTH AND MISFORTUNE

By Mrs. M. B. Arant

I'm sending you a few lines to press,
Desiring to my love express.
To have such friend, Oh, what a treat
The Clanton people can't be beat.

The people have been so sweet and nice
To us their value has no price,
We shall remember them till we die,
And pray God we may meet them in the sky.

The nice shower from the W. M. U.
Came when we were awfully blue,
Lord help us always to be true,
Helping others bear their burdens, too.

Thanks especially to Circle three,
For their kind and loving thought of me
And hope in a better world we'll meet,
Where we can cast our burdens at Jesus' feet.

God help me to worthy be
Of the many blessings bestowed on me,
Grant we all by faith may see
Our loving Saviour on Calvary.

A little more than a year has passed
When everybody thought I would breathe my last.
Many people said to God they did pray
That He might see fit to let me stay.

I would not forget dear sister now,
Who often bathed my fevered brow,
And prayed God that I might live.
Great God, to her, Thy blessings give.

To my family, one and all
Oft on Jesus for thee I call,
And pray that in heaven we'll meet
When our journey is complete.

How we love you, you may never know
And pray God you may to the good world go.
God's blessings rest upon you all
Until for you the Father doth call.

Hope you'll pray that my life shall be
So others may see Jesus in me,
While along this rugged road I trod,
That I may point others to the lamb of God.

3 RULES
big help to BOWELS

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwells' Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin, and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Coopers Has A Real Furniture Mfg. Co.

W. T. Morris Is Maker of Articles of Many Types And Kinds Of Home Furnishings

Beds, hall trees, chairs, cedar chests, magazine racks, porch swings, porch chairs, telephone tables, end tables, and what-nots, can be found down at Coopers, Alabama where W. T. Morris is operating a real little furniture manufacturing plant.

The plant is not large, the display rooms are his garage and his little shop, there is no great big electric sign out front, there are no tall smoke stacks, no office building, but inside of that garage and cabinet shop is manufactured all the items named above and then some, if anyone wishes anything else.

At first glance, one would mistake a piece of furniture there as having come from some large furniture plant, and would cost a neat little piece of money, but when one asks Mr. Morris the price, that is where the surprise is. It is just like buying it wholesale. Mr. Morris' shop is located on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway, just as you go into Coopers on the north side, on the right-hand side of the highway.

Mr. Morris lives in Coopers, his home being near his furniture plant. A visit to his plant will show one that Chilton County has a real furniture building place, as when a representative of the News visited it the other day, there was an order for fifty porch swings completed and ready for delivery to one concern, and the assistant to Mr. Morris, a young man who knows his business, was at work making attractive magazine racks, already sold Mr. Morris stated. Mr. Morris will be glad to show anyone his display of various articles of furniture manufactured by his plant.

remarked, as she examined one of the little paper blossoms. "Each poppy has been made individually by some disabled veteran who through this work has been able to help himself or his family in the long struggle against the handicaps of war disability. Often there is a tragic and pathetic story wrapped up in these flowers.

"Each poppy made means one cent earned by some needy disabled veteran for the support of his family or to aid him when he attempts to re-establish himself in the world. Three hundred flowers a day is the limit usually placed on the workers to prevent them from overtaxing their strength, but three dollars a day is a God-send to men who have earned nothing for months and years. Approximately 10,000,000 of the poppies have been made this year and about $100,000 has been paid by the Auxiliary into the empty pockets of the disabled men."

ready signified their intentions of coming to Montgomery for this great event and participate in the spectacular Parade which will be filmed by the several News Reel Companies of the United States. The Heads of all Fraternal Orders in Alabama have issued Dispensations whereby the units under their command may participate in full Uniform in this Parade. This was started by Grand Commander, Franklin L. Milhous, of Selma, who is head of the Commandery of the State. Many Commanderies will attend as full units and others will send individual members to swell the size of those Commanderies.

All Fraternal Orders expecting to participate in this Parade are urged to notify Joe King Stanley, P. O. Box 708, Montgomery, Alabama, at an early date in order that provisions may be made for them in the Parade. This may be the last Reunion ever to be held by these wonderful men of the Gray and they are coming back to the "Cradle of the Confederacy" for what may be their last association together.

Mass Meeting Approves Election of County Supt.

tendent of Education of Chilton County is now an appointive officer being appointed by the members of the Board of Education of Chilton County and whereas, we believe that it would be to the best interest of the schools of Chilton County that said office of superintendent be elective without lowering the educational qualifications as now fixed by law; be it therefore resolved that this mass meeting go on record as favoring and indorsing the election of the County Superintendent of Education at the earliest possible time by popular vote with the qualifications of said Superintendent remaining as the same are now fixed by law, and be it further resolved that Hon. J. G. Duncan, Senator from this Senatorial District, and Hon. Percy M. Pitts, member of the House of Representatives from this County be urgently requested to use their vote and influence in behalf of the passage of a local law making the selection of said Superintendent by popular election.

That whereas, the members of the Board of Education of Chilton County are elected from the County as a whole and we believe it to be also to the best interest of the schools of this County that said members be elected from districts and the Chairman of said Board to be elected from the County at large; be it therefore further resolved that said Senator and Representative also use their influence and vote in getting a local bill passed for this County, the purpose of the same being the election of said members of the Board of Education from districts and the election of the Chairman of said Board from the County at large.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to said J. G. Duncan from this Senatorial District and Percy M. Pitts, Representative from this County and that the same be published in both local papers.

LEGION PICNIC IS REAL OUTDOOR AFFAIR FRIDAY

The fish fry staged by the Chilton County Post of the American Legion last Friday at the Club House above Lay Dam was a complete success all its own.

There were approximately three hundred Legionnaires, their wives and children, and friends and Confederate veterans attending this all day affair.

The appetizing odor of fresh fish cooking rose up into the pines, and sharpened the appetites of the three hundred people, as it dropped into their midst. There were groups here and there of men telling of their experiences "Over-There," some speaking fully of their narrow escapes, while others said little of the memories they harbored of the World War in France.

One place, two men were looking at wrist watches that served them through the days of shell fire and narrow escapes. The watches are still being used, and both men stated that money couldn't buy them now.

Commander Joe Calloway introdu H. C. McClung of Birmingham, a re ular Legion buddy, who brought loud cheer from the Legionnaires w he spoke a few moments. Dr. Trott Jones, of Montgomery, another regu Legionnaire, spoke a few words to th gathering, followed by Mrs. H. C. M Clung, a wide-awake and active w in the American Legion Auxilia who in the afternoon presented the l cal Auxilliary with their official cha er.

NATIONAL DEMONSTR'TN IDEA OF CHEVROLET

Official of Company Says Potential Buying Power Of Country Unimpaired

A national demonstration campaign, with a goal of one million demonstrations during the month, has been mapped out for June by the Chevrolet Motor Company.

The campaign is in line with Chevrolet's previously expressed opinion that the potential buying capacity of the country is unimpaired and requires only intensive sales effort to develop a satisfactory volume, according to H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager.

The past four months for which registration figures are complete show that Chevrolet sixes have led the domestic passenger car market.

During the month of June, every one of the 35,000 Chevrolet dealers, sales managers and salesmen will be required to fill an assigned quota of demonstrations, appraisals and sales.

The campaign is unique in that the objective is directly aimed at increased demonstrations, and that special recognition will be given salesmen who fill their demonstration quota.

MILK TRUCK BLAST BLAMED ON PRICE WAR

Dynamite Hurled At Foremost Dairy Tank on Montgomery Highway

Birmingham, Ala., June 2.—County deputies and Homewood police Tuesday were investigating the dynamiting of a milk truck on the Montgomery Highway in Shelby County near Jefferson County line Tuesday in which Jim Warren, driver, was injured. One side of the truck, which belonged to Foremost Dairy Products, Inc., was damaged by the explosive, officers said.

Officers investigating the explosion believe it to be the outgrowth of a milk price war in Birmingham.

Witnesses said the dynamite charge was tossed onto the left fender of the milk truck by occupants of a touring car bearing a Missouri license tag as it was climbing a hill on Shades Mountain. The truck was en route to Birmingham from Montgomery about 5 a.m. when the explosion occurred, it

PLANING MILL AT THORSBY IS DESTROYED SAT.

Loss Lumber and Machinery Estimated at $8,000, Owned By Dolphus Gentry

Residents in and near Thorsby were aroused about one-thirty o'clock Sunday morning by the fire which almost completely destroyed the planing mill belonging to Dolphus Gentry, which is located just north of the town.

Origin of the fire was undetermined at this time, but is said to have started in the building housing the planing machinery and spread to the boiler room and to the dry kiln. There was quite a bit of dressed lumber in the building that belonged to Sims Mims of near Thorsby, who was to use it in the erection of a house soon.

The mill had been operated by W. H. (Bill) Goodgame up to last Thursday or Friday, when he turned it over to Mr. Gentry, having completed his run of lumber.

Some insurance was carried it was stated and the damage has been estimated at approximately $8,000.

STATE-WIDE REVIVAL CAMPAIGN IS BEING PLANNED

Meetings To Be Held Next January

One of the most unique and far-reaching movements ever undertaken in the history of evangelism is now being planned for the state of Alabama. This movement is being sponsored by Rev. Bob Jones, native Alabamian and recognized as one of the best known evangelists in America.

"What we need in America today," says Bob Jones, "Is an old-fashioned heaven-sent revival of the religion of Jesus Christ that will awaken in the hearts of the people a new devotion to His cause. There has never been a state-wide movement of this kind undertaken before. The time has come for a united effort on the part of the Christian forces that will include the entire state in a great spiritual awakening."

The plan as now being worked out, is to organize at least one meeting in every county in the state to be held for a period of three weeks next January. This time was selected so as not to conflict with local church meetings. This series of revival meeting is intended to strengthen the work of churches of all denominations.

Some of the most outstanding evangelists and gospel preachers of this and other states have been secured to conduct these meetings. Churches of all denominations are invited to cooperate in these meetings and local committees will be selected in each community to have charge of the conduct of the meetings.

W. G. Haymaker of Winona Lake, Indiana, is now in Clanton making preliminary arrangements for the meeting to be held for the people of this section. "We are not asking any church or group to underwrite or guarantee any money even for expenses," Mr. Haymaker said when asked about this phase of the meeting. "All we ask is the proper spiritual backing and the earnest prayers of the people here. If the people will pray earnestly for a revival the Lord will send it."

It is planned to hold the meetings in the Court House provided satisfactory arrangements can be made. Each Wednesday morning from now until next January has been set as the day and from 10 to 10,30 a. m., as the time for state-wide prayer meetings to be held for this revival. People in this section are asked to join in this state-wide Wednesday morning prayer meetings which are to be held in the homes.

Mrs. George McCain has as her guest her sister, Miss Hattie Sue Prater, of Rockford.

NO SERVICES AT BAPTIST; "COURTSHIP" AT METHODIST

There will be no services at the Clanton Baptist church next Sunday night, according to Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor. Dr. D. W. Haskew, pastor of the Methodist church, announces a special sermon there for Sunday night. His subject will be "Courtship," a message of special interest to young people, and the public is invited.

W. O. W. FIELD DAY SUCCESS; WOODMEN EXPRESS THANKS

The Central Alabama Field Day of the Woodmen of the World which was held in Clanton last Thursday met with success, according to E. C. Evans, district manager with headquarters in Clanton.

There were several hundred visiting Woodmen from this section of the state, and the Monroe County High School Band furnished entertainment in the way of a concert, and leading the huge parades in the business section.

Mr. Evans stated that the Woodmen desired to express their appreciation to the officials of the Town of Clanton and the people of the town for their cooperation in this day's program.

The Clanton drill team won second place in the drill contests which took place on Main Street in the afternoon. There were nine teams taking part in the contests.

ONE POUND BARS OF SOAP BEING SEEN ONCE AGAIN

Old times are coming around again in the soap line, according to J. D. Williams, well known and popular salesman of the Proctor & Gamble Company, who was in Clanton Tuesday. He stated that he has placed in almost every store in the county that handles soap, some of these one pound bars of laundry soap that sell at a very reasonable price. This will be good news, no doubt, to the people who use a lot of laundry soap.

GIRL SCOUTS ENJOYING WEEKS CAMP ON COOSA RIVER

The Clanton Troop of Girl Scouts left Monday for a weeks camp on the back waters of Coosa River, at the camp known as Upchurch Camp and Martin Camp.

Approximately 27 girls are taking part in this outing. They have competent directors and instructors in the various forms of camp life.

Maplesville News

Misses Ethel Mize, Susie Mae Hayes, Fannie Lee LeCroy and Frances Brown left Monday for Livingston State teachers college.

Messrs. Abney Brown and Charlie will attend summer school at the University.

Those returning home to spend vacation are Miss Elizabeth Parnell, who has been teaching in Guntersville. Messrs. John A. Foshee, Kermit Cobern and Abney Brown from the University, Herbert Foshee from State Teachers College, Livingston.

The many friends of Mr. W. E. Northrup are glad that he is able to be at work again, after a long seige of illness.

Those on the sick list this week are Mrs. F. A. Shanks, Mrs. Monroe Ramsey, Sr., and Mr. Charlie Smith.

Mrs. Bessie Middleton has returned from Birmingham where she has been visiting relatives.

Mr. Jack Northrup of Kerrville, Tex., is still improving at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Northrup.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gwin, Jr., of Auburn are spending a few weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gwin, Sr., before returning to summer school.

Miss Helen Nix, who is an active member of the Girl's Scout, is enjoying a week's outing at Martin & Upchurch Camp.

One of the prettiest social affairs of the season was that of last Wednesday afternoon when Miss Ruth Mize entertained with bridge at her home honoring her sister, Miss Ethel Mize, and Miss Susie Mae Hayes, who were leaving for summer school. The home was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, and hot plants. The honorees were presented with novelty necklaces. High score prize, a box of handkerchiefs, was won by Miss Olivia Latham, and low score, a deck of cards, was won by Miss Louise Pulilam. At the conclusion of games an ice course was served. The guests included Misses Mize and Hayes, Olivia and Lurleen Latham, Mary D. and Annie Laura Potts, Margaret Nix, Elizabeth, Lucy and Ruth Parnell, Estell Davis, Flossie Shanks, Louise Pulliam, Frances Brown, Imogene Dawson and Mesdames J. W. Gwin, Jr., F. A. Shanks and W. H. Abney.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Wright and family of Linden are the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Munro Ramsey, Sr.

Miss Edith Hand of Birmingham, spent Monday with friends and relatives in Clanton.

Clanton Methodist Church

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

Did you ever go a courting? Do you ever expect to do any courting? If so, we want you to hear the special message next Sunday night at the Methodist church on the subject, "Courtship." Dr. Ezell announced that he would have no service at his church, and we are inviting our Baptist friends to worship with us. The message will be of special interest to young people, and we invite all in and out of Clanton to come. Many things that should be said to our young people, will be said next Sunday night.

The collection in the Sunday school next Sunday morning will go to build banisters for the stairway in the Sunday school annex. This is a needed work, and let everyone bring a special donation.

At 11 a.m. we have the Holy Communion and a special message. Make Sunday a great day for the church. Let everyone act Sunday just like you would act if you knew that you would die Monday. If you do that, your church will be crowded.

The "completely balanced" Electric Refrigerator

Read this . . .
before you decide that an electric refrigerator is too expensive

A WESTINGHOUSE Refrigerator is positively an ECONOMY. Let no one change your mind on that. Whether you buy the "small-family" size at $180 (f. o. b. factory) or one of the five larger models—you can actually save from $50 to $150 yearly with it—as compared to less modern equipment. Think of the health safety—the convenience—the ice cubes and frozen dainties. And only 10% down is required. Balanced may be spread over 12, 18 or 24 months if desired. See the WESTINGHOUSE. ASK ME ANOTHER

Some of the "ask me another" question lists now current carry informing answers, while many of them are extremely trivial and merely tend to clutter up the mind with useless facts.

A writer in the Boston Transcript has dug up a list of old-time questions, showing the trend of inquiry in the Middle Ages. Here are a few:

"Why did God not will that a man should be hungry only once a week? Answer: Hunger is a punishment for Adam's sin.

"What makes beasts mad? Answer: Looking at a certain star on the 21st day of the March moon.

"Why did Noah bring serpents into the ark? Answer: In obedience to God, who, having created them for his glory, did not wish them destroyed.

"What language does a deaf-mute understand in his heart? Answer: Adam's, therefore Hebrew. A child brought up without being taught any language would speak Hebrew spontaneously.

"If my parents had not existed, how should I have been born? Answer: The number of living things are foreseen from all eternity, hence you would have been born from other parents.

"When God made Adam, how old was he? (No answer).

"Will idiots be damned? (No answer)."

While the propounders of the questions appeared to claim an unusual insight into the workings of the Almighty, they hesitated to venture answers to the last two. We, too, would hesitate to answer them, although we have heard people refer to that kind of idiots.

FAKE PRIZE SCHEMES

A rather ancient scheme for separating the unwary from their money is being worked again, both in the United States and Canada, according to a leading business men's magazine.

The plan is to insert an advertisement containing a perfectly simple puzzle which anyone can easily solve, and offer prizes for correct solutions. A favorite prize is a "building lot."

Of course, anyone who sends in a solution of the puzzle wins a lot, but he is informed that he will be expected to remit a small sum—in one case $7.75—for the deed and other incidental expenses connected with the transfer of the property. The "lot" is very small and the $7.75 fees alone would net the seller around $200 an acre for some worthless land.

So, if the "winner" swallows the bait he is out just $7.75 for the privilege of working the puzzle. while his name is passed along to other swindlers as that of an easy mark.

There are many perfectly legitimate prize offers advertised in various periodicals, but those which require a payment of cash before the prize is delivered are generally fraudulent and should be shunned.

W.E.G. Sutton Former Verbena School Principal Has Splendid Record Achievements Behind Him

Verbena School Shows Up Well During Principalship Of Prof. Sutton

PROF. W. E. G. SUTTON

It is so often true that the achievements of men, who have started at the bottom and worked up, against hardships, go unnoticed and unmentioned, until someone finds that a man or woman has a commendable record and says something about it.

Prof. W. E. G. Sutton, who has been principal of the Verbena High School for something like seven years has moved steadily forward each year since coming to this county. Mr. Sutton became principal of the Verbena School in 1921 and served as principal until 1925. When he first came there, there were only four teachers in the school with a student enrollment of 120. At the close of the year 1925 there were eight teachers. with a student enrollment of 380, and the school became an accredited school in 1923. The new and modern stone building for the school was erected in 1924.

From 1925 to 1927, Prof. Sutton attended Brantley University, and from 1927 until 1928 he attended Vanderbilt University, having been awarded one of the Rockefeller Foundation scholarships. and there received his M. A. Degree.

According to the State Department of Education, there has been no failures of students in colleges, to where they went after completing their studies at the Verbena High School, in the past two years.

Prof. and Mrs. Sutton have made for themselves countless friends in the county during their residence here. He will not act as principal of the Verbena School next year. Prof. Sutton stated that he will be engaged in instructing at the Womans College, in Montgomery during this summer.

Berries Go Out Cash Comes In

Montgomery, Ala., June 3.—Special. —Alabama strawberries went north, east, and west, and as a result more than a million dollars came south.

Official records of the department of agriculture here show that to date producers of the State have sent out 1,101 carloads. Cash received, reports show, amounted to more than $1,000 per car, which means that from the shipments well over a million dollars and perhaps a million and one-half dollars has entered business channels of the State.

The Castleberry section is the largest beneficiary, having shipped 305 carloads of the red berries. Farmers around Evergreen, McKenzie, Garland, Bolling, Brewton, Atmore, Clanton, Jemison, Thorsby, Cullman, Guntersville, Leesburg, Attalla, and other places also participated.

A large part of the berries were marketed cooperatively. This was done through local shipping associations and the Alabama Farm Bureau. J. B. Sylvest, manager of the farm bureau produce department, says that growers have shipped 135 carloads through the Farm Bureau. These berries, he said. sold from $1,000 to $1,500 per car and brought producers around $145,000.

This is the first the Farm Bureau has participated in the marketing of strawberries. and farmers have welcomed the entry of a large producers' agency into the field, he said. He expects a large increase in marketing of strawberries on a cooperative basis next year.

WOMEN AS POLICE

A world survey of conditions with respect to the welfare of women and children made under the auspices of the League of Nations discloses that in 18 countries women are employed to a greater or less extent as police.

The largest number are employed in the United States, with Great Britain and Argentina following. Satisfaction over the results obtained through the work of policewomen is expressed by all countries reporting, except South Africa, where women police formerly used in Cape Town have been discontinued.

Not all the countries which include women on the police roster use them for making arrests, however, as a great many are detailed to duty as matrons or for investigation work.

The employment of women in this and other branches of public service appears to be steadily increasing, and the spread of the idea, particularly in countries in which women have the ballot, is an indication that in time very few human activities will be closed to them.

Our Bankers Oppose Further Tax

Calling on Gov. Miller to appoint a non-political commission of five men to ascertain the state's present financial condition and suggest a remedy, the Alabama Bankers Association in session at Gadsden last week, expressed itself as being vigorously opposed to further taxes.

The bankers take largely the same view of the state's financial problem as that taken by the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce which recommended first the appointment of a firm of business engineers and certified public accountants to make a thorough audit and survey of the state government, and then the appointment of a fiscal commission of five representative citizens and business men accustomed to dealing with financial and administrative problems to study the findings of the audit and survey, and to recommend to the governor and Legislature a revenue program that "would least disrupt business and industry and complicate as little as possible the efforts of the state toward recovery from the present economic depression."

Since these two organizations represent the financial, business and industrial leadership of the state, their counsel is to be respected and trusted.

Alabama's problem is an economic problem—a financial and business problem. Who else is better qualified to point out a solution than the business and financial leaders of the state?—Marion Times-Standard.

Freedom From Crime

Cities which are largely free from crime, or claim to be so, are beginning to use this fact as a means of proving their superiority, according to the Wickersham commission on law enforcement. This statement is contained in a report in which the commission urges more accurate statistics on crime. Manifestly, if the cities are going to use their freedom from crime as a talking point in their favor, it is desirable to know on what figures they base this claim.

Any city which can prove that it has reduced crime to a low point has a powerful argument with which to attract business and residents. The people look with horror on the lawlessness of this period. They do not know what it will lead to.

Business men would hate to establish themselves in a place where crime was common. They would fear that there was a loose kind of government there, which would cost them high taxes and they might be exposed to racketeering that would cost them heavily.

It will be a great help to any community in the future to show that it is a law abiding place, that life and property are safe there. The smaller cities and towns are never centers of crime as the big cities are. The crooks flock into the big places because they can hide out of sight there. But there are lawless people with a crooked tendency almost everywhere, and the forces of the law must be forever vigilant to repress them.

A community, big or little, that can show a clean record as respects crime, which can reduce thefts and frauds and other offenses to the lowest possible terms, has an advantage that will appeal to everyone. Not merely do people feel safer in such a community, but it is an indicator of the character and high standards of the place, and people will feel that community life will be desirable in such a town.—Sylacauga News.

Collect Millions With Miller

Week after week, day after day, we read in the editorial columns of newspapers, about Governor Miller increasing the taxes of the people of Alabama. "Save Millions With Miller" was the slogan of Gov. Miller's supporters during the campaign. One newspaper suggests that that slogan should be changed to "Collect Millions With Miller."

Another newspaper last week went so far as to say that it is true Gov. Miller cut off the small wage earner, and raised the salary of Bill Feagin from $5000.00 a year to $7500.00, pointing out that the $2500.00 raise would have employed several needy state workers.

The majority of voters put B. M. Miller in office. They listened to his supporters in the campaign. The majority of voters put representatives in the Legislature, they put Senators of their choice in the Senate, they put Judges in their offices, and filled other offices with the ones of their choice, so what are you going to do about it?

At a time when practically every individual and every business firm is having a hard struggle to pay taxes already due and numerous other obligations, Gov. Miller, misnamed "Old Economy," is making an effort to pile up more taxes on the people of this state. That does seem rather bad. But he is the follow you put there to rule. It looks like a case of where the majority of voters in Alabama have got something they don't want, and can't help it. It would be a good idea to vote next time, only after going into the matter seriously and convincing yourself.

It takes a progressive, far-sighted and prosperous person to make a success of most anything, not a man with primitive ways.

"ROUND TOWN"

---by Doug

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

"The man who trusts men will make fewer mistakes than he who distrusts them."

* * * *

Glad to be back again in this, my column. That is if I may call it my column. I had a very good rest—a rest from writing this column and a rest from bothering you with those trifling items round town each week. I too, have found that the ed has no trouble whatever taking care of this column even if I am not here to fill it.

* * * *

It seems to be customary for columnists to write about what they saw, and some of the things they did while away for a spell. Naturally, being of the type I am I went in for adventure. Not the kind ones goes for in exploring caves, and jungle lands, but adventures with humans. You will remember that I have very frequently referred to humans as being funny things. I take advantage of every opportunity possible to delve into the innermost depths of humans, tearing down that outer crust most everyone assumes practically at all times, and seeing what is inside. It is very interesting.

I arrived in a certain large city one afternoon, and knowing several in a set that is usually ready for a grand time at night, I called one of the set over the phone to let them know I was in town and would like to get into their party that night. I always find a welcome and things were arranged for a swell blow-out at a night club. We assembled about ten o'clock that night and the round was being made. Observing closely the acts of those in my party very closely at the beginning and throughout the night. There were nine in the set, and two did not vary from their first actions from the time the fun started until early in the morning when it ended.

The others, after awhile, came out from their outer crusts and showed the real person without sham or camouflage. One of the young men played the part of a well-read gentleman, there was very little he did not know something of, so it seemed, until he weakened and then he was just ordinary. One of the young ladies took a great part in making the party lively, but when it was possible for me to be alone with her for awhile, she showed a true-blue person, serious-minded, and worthwhile. She too, was pretending when the fun was going on.

There was incident after incident like that, day in and day out. After a rather busy morning of golf, I dropped into the room of a young man, friend of mine. He was a good golfer. He was neat in appearance, almost immaculate. He had more than ordinary table manners, and extremely courteous to the ladies. When he talked he showed signs of being well-bred and well read, and could be depended on to keep his appointments. He was popular, and yet when I casually dropped into his dressing room, accidentally on purpose, there were no signs of all those things one saw in him when he was on parade, outside. Almost two different persons in appearance, disposition and opinion. He showed the real self.

This young man could boast of the love and admiration of one of the most attractive young ladies in the group, who was ready to be led to the altar when he said the word. Knowing her life and environment as I do, my sympathy goes out to her, if he ever says the word and they go to the altar, together.

I chanced to meet a young man, who is somewhat well known and liked in this place, while away, and he was thrown with our party for awhile. There is no mistaking it, has was his true self at all times, and I admired him more than ever. After chatting with him in the lobby of the hotel for awhile one afternoon, I found that he too, had observed humans quite a bit and could see through those camouflages.

In another town, or rather city where I was staying for awhile, I saw a resident of Clanton at lunch in the dining room of the hotel. At the table where I was sitting with some friends, I could see him without him seeing me, and had an opportunity to observe him closely. I was surprised to see him in such perfect ease in such a place, knowing him as I do in Clanton, and I would like to tell him about it sometime. His poise was great. I liked the way he gave the waiter his order and the way he received and ate it. You wouldn't believe me, if I told you the name.

At an entertainment one night given by an organization, to which I was invited, I was fortunate to see a young lady who is quite well known in Clanton and rather popular. She too, was an invited guest. There was dancing and fun in general, the organization having reserved the ball room of the hotel for the affair, and a good orchestra. I had known her as one of those nice, reserved, and slightly dignified young ladies, who went out very little for such entertainment as that we were having then. But what a change I saw that night. She was away from home, with friends of short acquaintance, most of them, and doing her dead level best to make a hit. She might have succeeded with some. Maybe she doesn't know yet that she passed up the best part of the entertainment, and maybe I'll be brave enough sometime to tell her about it.

So, referring you back to the quotation at the beginning of this column this week, "The man who trusts men will make fewer mistakes than he who distrusts them," you can trust them all right, if you know your men. Man is like a volume, and it is best that you read that volume when possible.

Are you doing your part to see that visitors to Clanton receive a cordial welcome when possible?

o-o-o-o

A large "Welcome" sign at the entrance to Clanton on the north and south ends would bring about tremendous results.

o-o-o-o

It wouldn't hurt Clanton if our citizens took on a little more civic pride, and talked about the good things of our town whenever possible.

o-o-o-o

The sporting crowd are interested in night life, but a little more day life in tending to their job would be helpful.

o-o-o-o

The college students don't write as well as they should, but anyway they are careful to write legible letters home asking for money.

I can not help think but that the world would be better and brighter if our teachers would dwell on duty of happiness as well as the happiness of duty.—Avebury.

Letters To The Editor

LAWRENCE CORRECTS RUMOR

June 2, 1931.

Editor Chilton County News:

Again I am forced to do the thing for which I have a perfect horror and that is anything that favors a paper controversy. I understand that Mr. Percy Pitts made a statement at the mass meeting held at the courthouse on Saturday, May 23, and has told others since that I had employed certain attorneys to represent me in opposition to the local bills which he has introduced in the Legislature of Alabama. This is altogether untrue and without foundation. I have not employed any one directly or indirectly and have paid no one directly or indirectly nor have I agreed to pay any one and do not intend to.

Sometime ago when Mr. Pitts came to me getting certain data relative to the terms of the different members of the County Board of Education and discussed this matter with me I told him then that so far as I was concerned that I was having nothing to do with it. I maintain that position yet. The other citizens of the county have a right to do as they please.

I did state to him at the time that if the members of the County Board of Education were to be elected by districts that it seemed to me that the members of the County Court of Commissioners should be. I still feel that if it is good for the county the other is and I cannot understand why that four years ago Mr. Pitts was very active in fighting a bill that provided for the election of members of the Court of Commissioners by districts and now at this time is sponsoring a bill to have the members of the Board of Education elected by districts. But that is neither here nor there. If the people of the county wish to elect by districts and to elect a county superintendent of Education by popular election it is for them to decide and I will submit but I do resent being misrepresented in any matter whatever.

Now I have made this statement because I have consulted some of my friends and I felt that the people of the county ought to know my attitude and I do not expect to annoy you with any further statement about this matter, unless I am again forced to it by future developments but remember that I am not a politician, have no desire to be, but wish to serve the best interests of the children of Chilton County.

Respectfully yours.
B. LAWRENCE,
County Supt. Education.

Chilton County News,
Mr. Editor:

I desire to correct an error that has gotten before the public. It has been generally reported that when I arrived at the home of Mr. R. A. Williams last Thursday morning, a few minutes after the death of his stepson, that he would not allow me to see him. That is untrue. I, myself, was the one who remarked that if he was already dead I could not do any good by going in and turned and drove away without going in. This was of my own accord and not by direction or suggestion of Mr. Williams. I am writing this by request.

WHAT IS TRUTH? JEHOVAH'S WORD!

I want to say here that some years ago I began studying the scriptures. I saw that God would establish a righteous kingdom, but I did not understand these things. I asked a few preachers about them, and they failed to explain them to me. I took off my creed glasses, and I saw that Jehovah was being mis-represented, and I began to look for someone to explain God's plan concerning his word. I took the opportunity of studying the literature put out by the International Bible Students and I began to understand some things as to by whom this righteous kingdom would be established and operated. In Daniel 12:10 we read: "And none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." In First Thessalonians 5:3 we read: "For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them," and in verse 4 we read: "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."

In the scripture debate between Mr. Bowen and Mr. Hill, Mr. Hill said in his conclusion that he took the scripture as what they said. In Matthew 13:34 we read: "All these things spoke Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them." If the scriptures are to be understood literally, we would have no need of preachers or teachers. In Romans 10:14 we read: "and how shall they hear without a preacher?" In verse 15 we read: "and how shall they preach except they be sent?" Mr. Bowen gave us the word of Jehovah that the wicked should be destroyed. In Acts 3:23 we read: "every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." I have the books and I study them with my Bible. If we fail to harmonize the scriptures, then we do not understand them.

In Ecclesiastes 1:4 we read: "the earth abideth for ever," and in Psalms 104:5 we read: "Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever." In Second Peter 3:10 we read: "the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up." In verse 13 we read: "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." If we fail to harmonize these scriptures, we are not preachers or teachers.

Yours for the Truth,
W. A. COKER,

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES

To the Editor The News:

Referring to the Chilton County Almshouse, and statements of the probate judge and almshouse keeper denying the sale of our poor, and in order to make my position clear, will state:

According to my investigation and information, inmates of our almshouse are required to labor on the poor farm (the proceeds of which accrue to the keeper, and on the farm of the keeper as well, and as stated, "we receive only what we get to eat."

In addition, the keeper receives $12 per month from the county for food and clothing for each inmate, and to say the least, our poor are delivered with a price and relegated to the workhouse. I was also informed that religious services, also suffrage rights. have been denied them.

This practice is contrary to the fundamental principles laid down in our federal constitution, which denies the keeper the right to work inmates of the institution for personal or private gain.

Pilot Club Met Here Last Tuesday Night

The recently organized Pilot Club for the business and professional women of Clanton held its first regular luncheon meeting last Tuesday night at the Baptist church, with Mrs. C. E. Stapp, president, presiding.

Much interest was shown at this meeting and a most interesting program was given, and several new members were added as charter members. Plans were made to send delegates to the annual International Convention which is to be held at Pensacola, Fla. on June 22, 23, 24.

Arrangements were also made for the Pilot Club to join with the Clanton Kiwanis Club in putting on the free clinic for cripples at the Baptist church next Friday.

The next meeting of the club will be held on the third Tuesday night of this month, which will be June 16th. Another interesting program is being arranged for this meeting, it was stated.

LOCAL ICE COMPANY USES MODERN METHODS ICE MANUFACTURE

J. Q. Wade, Proprietor, Tells Of Care Taken In The Making Of Ice At Plant In Clanton, Using Only Water That Is Filtered

Clanton can justly be proud of the ice manufacturing plant that has served this section for a number of years without a hitch in time and promptness in service. The Clanton Ice Company was the source of Clanton's electric power for a number of years before the city began being supplied by the Alabama Power Company.

The Clanton Ice Company has grown in size. It has replaced its ice manufacturing equipment of years past with that machinery up with the modern type of plant, bringing it up to the top rungs in sanitation and efficiency.

In a statement from J. Q. Wade, proprietor of the Clanton Ice Company, he said, "We are proud of our plant in Clanton now. We can show you some real modern equipment for the making of ice that is pure and clean, and we at all times keep our plant as clean as possible."

Contradicts Rumors

"I have heard that certain interests have spread the talk that the water we use in our ice is not filtered and comes from a very shallow well," Mr. Wade went on to say, "and as we know that is very misleading to the people, I will at this time say that the water we use to make ice from is filtered, as it is the water supplied by the Town of Clanton and comes through their filtering plant. The same source of water used by residents of Clanton, and has been tested in the State Laboratories.

"I do not know why these certain interests are telling some people that we use water from a shallow well, but I can assure the people of the county that the water comes from the filtered supply of the Town of Clanton."

O. O. AND ROY ROPER RAISE FINE POTATOES ON PATCH HERE

Showing that they not only can raise some excellent strawberries by a large crop, O. O. Roper and son, Royal Roper, have brought up some extra fine looking Irish potatoes on their patch here, as was shown by ten of the potatoes that were dug from a single hill. Mr. Roper stated that they expected to raise quite a few of these potatoes this year, and the samples shown at the News office were taken at random from the patch.

Miss FRANCES WILSON, Correspondent

Sutlive-Gerald Nuptial Solemnized Saturday

A very pretty wedding was that of Miss Ruth Gerald of Thorsby, Ala., and Mr. Vinson Sutlive of Blakely, Ga.

The ceremony took place at the Congregational church Saturday evening with Rev. J. E. Each, pastor of the church, officiating. An altar of smilax and ferns was arranged, interspersed with cut flowers in pastel shades and lighted with ivory candles in branched candelabra.

Preceding the ceremony, a musical program was rendered by Mrs. C. R. Foss, organist, Miss Esther Johnson of Birmingham, Miss Kathryn Foss, sopranos, and Mrs. Grady Broadhead of Clanton, violinist.

Mrs. Leonard Moody of Birmingham, matron of honor, wore pink silk, and carried a bouquet of garden flowers. Miss Odie Lee Arthur, bridesmaid, wore yellow silk and carried a bouquet of garden flowers. Each bouquet was tied with tulle in the prevailing color scheme.

Following the matron of honor to the altar were two little flower girls, Marjorie Morgan and Helen Louise Mead, who were daintily dressed in frocks of pink and yellow organdie.

The best man was Mr. William Bodenhamer of Blakely, Ga., and the groomsmen was Mr. Rascoe Maddox of Thorsby.

The bride entered with her brother, Mr. L. F. Gerald, of Clanton, Ala. Her costume was of white silk, a princess model with train forming at the waist line. She wore a tulle veil with bandeau of orange blossoms and lilies of the valley. The brides bouquet was formed of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Hattie M. Gerald, at which the bridal party, relatives, and out of town guests were present.

Upon their return from a short trip into Georgia, Mr. and Mrs. Sutlive will be at home in Birmingham for the summer.

The bride is a native of Thorsby, Ala., and is a graduate of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., has taught several years, and at the time of the wedding was employed by the Birmingham News and Age-Herald.

Mr. Sutlive is a successful teacher at Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Ala.

Among the out of town guests were Mrs. L. E. Moody of Decatur, Ala., Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Horn and son, Leroy. of Birmingham, Mr. French, Miss Owen, Mrs. Chapman, and several others from the Birmingham News staff, Mr. Yancey Kelly of Andalusia, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Gerald, Lawrence Gerald, Jr., and Celia Gerald of Clanton, Mrs. Grady Broadhead and Hal Broadhead of Clanton, Mr. William Bodenhamer of Blakely, Ga., and Misses Agnes and Ruth Gerald of Washington, D. C.

Following the wedding rehearsal of Friday night, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Gerald of Clanton entertained members of the bridal party, relatives and friends. Several musical selections were rendered. Since the announcement of her marriage, the bride has been the honoree of a number of social events.

LAWS AND CORRUPTION

Remarking upon the tendency toward the regulation of every phase of human conduct by law, a recent speaker quoted an aphorism of Cicero: "In the most corrupt nation you have the most laws."

There probably has never been in all history a people burdened with so many laws as exist in the United States today. Whether we have the most corrupt nation is a matter of opinion, but heaven knows it is bad enough.

Still the reformers are clamoring for more laws. Where it will all end no man can foretell. Every new law for the regulation of this and that adds to the battalions of officeholders already feeding at the public crib.

Thoughtful men are beginning to realize the seriousness of the situation. Only by an aroused public sentiment can we hope to stop the orgy of lawmaking and lawbreaking which threatens our social structure and makes of liberty a mockery.

May the big surprise of his life be not his last!

THE gentleman shown above had his car all tuned up . . . went out to see what it would do . . . touched 65 and strove for 70.

And then . . . the big surprise of his life!

Because, although no bolt was left unturned to put body and motor in A-1 condition, he tried to economize with inferior tires . . . and one of them gave out.

A skid or blowout at high speed is a big enough surprise for anybody. Indeed, tire failure—even on a smooth road—is more than likely to cause disaster.

Nowadays it isn't necessary to take such chances. Our prices for trustworthy new U. S. Tires are so low that risking old tires is mighty poor economy. Pershing and Joffre.

Pershing Orders Planes.

After inquiry as to French capacity to turn out planes, I made a contract with the air ministry late in August committing us to an expenditure of $60,000,000 for 5,000 planes and 8,500 engines, to be delivered as rapidly as possible at intervals before the first of June, 1918, on condition that we should provide certain tools and raw materials. To make a contract to pay such an amount appeared somewhat bold, but under the circumstances some one had to take the initiative in providing planes needed at once for the development of our air force.

As aviation was in no sense a logical branch of the signal corps the two were separated in the A. E. F. as soon as practicable and aviation was organized and maintained as a distinct force. To co-ordinate our training with that at home Brig. Gen. William L. Kenly was sent over the latter part of August and was appointed chief of aviation in the A. E. F. Colonel Mitchell, who had succeeded Major Dodd, the first chief of aviation, was given jurisdiction over aviation in the zone of advance. Major Bolling was placed in charge of aviation in the zone of the interior, and soon succeeded in securing a better co-operation through an interallied aircraft board.

The next essential step was the training of airplane pilots, and accordingly arrangements were made for our men to enter flying schools in England, France and Italy after they had passed their preliminary tests at home. Vacancies were held for us in the schools, but we were unable to take full advantage of this opportunity for training because of the delay in sending over flyers. However, we proceeded with the establishment of our own training centers, the first of which, located at Issoudun, was planned for a capacity of 900 pilots by spring.

Use of Gas New Problem.

The use of poisonous gases in warfare had been discussed at The Hague conference in 1899, with the result that several nations pledged themselves against the employment of projectiles the only object of which was to give forth suffocating or poisonous gases. This action had created a feeling of security regarding such a possibility.

Germany had subscribed to the agreement, and when her armies disregarded this pledge and became the first to use gas shells, the impression was that they had now thrown every consideration of humanity to the winds.

This action by the enemy forced the allies to adopt this weapon themselves as a matter of self-protection. From that time on the employment of gas became common to all combatants.

The use of gas in warfare presented an entirely new problem to us, and the organization of a service to handle it demanded immediate attention. The first plan of the War department provided that the engineers should devise and handle the mechanical features and the medical department the chemical, but this soon proved to be impractical and it became evident that, as we had maintained at the beginning, a separate service would be necessary. Meanwhile application was made for a complete chemical laboratory to be shipped to France for use mainly in investigation as supplementary to similar work in the states.

Gas Service Established.

Considerable information concerning gases and the organization of gas troops had been gathered by my staff, and on August 18 Lieut. Col. Amos A. Fries was designated as chief of the gas service. He made some further investigation of the subject in the British and French armies, and as a result an order issued September 8 established a department known at that time as the gas service.

Experiments were at once begun to discover new gases and devise improvements in gas masks. To save tonnage and avoid the dangers of explosion in transit, it was decided, after consultation with the allied services, to request the shipment from the States of the basic elements and manufacture the chemical products in France. After thorough tests of different types of gas masks we adopted the box respirator used by the British, and a preliminary purchase of 100,000 was made to meet immediate demands for training.

Wartime Picture of Col. E. M. House.

With the development of trench weapons and special tactical methods of defense, never had the offensive been more costly in human life than in this war. The ingenuity of the allies was put to the test to devise new engines of war that would make the attack possible without excessive losses.

While the tank, which was simply an armored caterpillar traction motor car, was favored by many officers as an aid to advancing infantry, this opinion was by no means unanimous. Our investigations, however, led to the conclusions that we should accept allied experience and also adopt the tank as a weapon.

CHAPTER XV

I received many reminders September 13 that another birthday had come, including a surprise party by my staff that evening. As this was exactly three months after I had reached Paris, the time seemed to be passing very rapidly, with little apparent progress against the day when an American army should be on the front line.

The importance of shipping for America was beginning to be considered in allied circles. I received a letter from General Robertson, British chief of staff, who spoke of their increasing losses and of his anxiety regarding the voyage of our troops across the Atlantic. As to tonnage for us, he said, it was entirely between Great Britain and ourselves, as none of the other allies could furnish any to speak of.

On top of this, in conference a few days later with Lord Derby, the British minister of war, I was told that his government could not be counted on to furnish us with ships as transports.

The substance of General Robertson's letter was cabled to Washington, suggesting the importance of taking advantage of the opportunity offered to obtain additional shipping. A few days later we were told that needful arrangements for transatlantic transports were being made by the shipping board.

Gloomy Time for Allies.

There was little in the general situation to give comfort to the allies. Losses by the British through continuing operations were still growing. There no longer remained any doubt as to Russia's fate, and it was consequently certain that German troops on that front would be released for service in the west. Under the circumstances the tired allied people were easily influenced by rumors.

The pope's proposal, issued in August, started some talk of peace, but as it failed to condemn Germany's violation of treaties and her inhuman submarine warfare, the note did not make a favorable impression on the allies. In fact, it was criticized in terms that were not at all moderate. The various replies from the different governments did, however, arouse some hope, which was altogether unwarranted by the real attitude of the belligerent powers on either side.

The discussion was unfortunate, because the French people, not realizing that peace was improbable, lost some of their courage, and the depression from this and other factors caused uneasiness among both civil and military leaders.

From our sources of information which included the intelligence bureaus of the allied armies, we got the impression that Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey would make peace on any reasonable terms if they could do so.

Visits Artillery School.

The military post of Le Valdahon, near the Swiss border, used by us as a school for our field artillery, was one of several which had been kindly set apart for Americans in different parts of France. The others were at Coetquidan and Meucon, near St. Nazaire, and at Souge and La Corneau, near Bordeaux, and also at Montmorillon, Saumur and Angers, with a school for heavy artillery at Mailly, southeast of Rheims.

The school at Valdahon was then under the direction of Brigadier General March, an energetic and alert commander. At the time of my visit the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh regiments, comprising the field artillery brigade of the First division, were there for training.

As to the signal corps, and its progress, Colonel Russell, before leaving Washington, had ordered a large consignment of material for both telegraph and telephone services, but so far none had been received except what was sent with us on the Baltic. Finding it necessary to establish our own service in Paris, where the city system was almost useless, we were fortunately able at once to obtain enough material for the purpose in England and France.

Telephone Girls on the Job.

The signal corps had, of course, to anticipate the communications necessary in battle. Therefore definite decisions were required some time in advance as to spheres of operations. Tons of material, most of which, except wire, was obtained in France, and any amount of labor was used in the actual installation. The main telephone and telegraph lines in proximity to the actual battle area were, when practicable, laid underground to prevent destruction.

One of the crying needs when we once began to use our own lines was for experienced operators. Instead of trying to train men of the signal corps I requested that a number of experienced telephone girls who could speak French be sent over, and eventually we had about 200 girls on this duty.

No civil telephone service that ever came under my observation excelled the perfection of our system after it was well established. The telephone girls in the A. E. F. took great pains and pride in their work and did it with satisfaction to all.

The Hospital Problem.

The medical department's plans constantly received my careful attention through frequent conferences with the chief surgeon, Colonel Bradley, and his assistant, Colonel Ireland. Our problem of handling the sick and wounded was more difficult than that of any of the allies, as we had no civil hospitals of our own available. Full provision, therefore, had to be made for hospital accommodations in France, as only convalescents manifestly unfit for further service could be sent home. The early estimates submitted in August, based upon a small force of 300,000 men, called for 73,000 beds in permanent, semipermanent or temporary hospitals, and plans for expansion were in hand to keep pace with the expected requirements of our armies once they should become engaged. While this beginning appeared quite liberal, yet it was calculated to meet further demands of the immediate future.

All the facilities through France were available for the French, yet they had so many sick and wounded that their hospital resources were pretty well exhausted. As there seemed to be only a few suitable buildings that could be assigned to us we had to plan considerable new construction. This required additional labor and material, both of which were scarce, and although there was some delay we managed by persistent effort to keep pace with requirements.

Danger of Coal Shortage.

The destruction by the German army of the mines of northern France had forced the importation from England of a large proportion of the coal needed for various purposes in both France and Italy. Lack of cross-channel tonnage had produced a serious situation, and the danger of coal shortage during the approaching winter gave us much concern. Italy was even worse off, due to the greater distance from the source of supply.

The outcome of our efforts, with the very effective assistance of Admiral Mayo, was that some colliers, one of which was already at Brest, were ordered into service for immediate use, and these were supplemented later by vessels from the shipping board. An organized cross-channel service was completed under the control of our quartermaster department and later transferred to the transportation department. Although the coal question became more or less critical at various times, in the main we were fairly well supplied.

CHAPTER XVI

Having learned that, despite my recommendations, little or no attention was being given at home to the importance of teaching our men the use of the rifle, it seemed necessary again to emphasize my views, especially after further knowledge of its neglect in allied armies.

The infantry soldier, well trained in stealthy approach and in the art of taking cover, makes a small target and, if an expert rifleman, there is nothing that can take his place on the battlefield.

"Specialties of trench warfare at home," I cabled Washington, September 24, 1917, "should not be allowed to interfere with rifle practice nor with intensive preliminary training in our schools of soldier, company and battalion."

Americans Retain Jurisdiction.

My diary notes the following:

Chaumont, Wednesday, Sept. 26, 1917.—The French agree that we should retain exclusive jurisdiction over American soldiers in France.

Chief of ordnance at Washington delays storehouse construction by requesting views of French commissioner regarding our necessities.

Have again cabled relative to carelessness and delay in loading of transports.

The War department had brought up the question of civil jurisdiction over the members of our forces in France and had inquired regarding the attitude of the French.

My judge advocate, Col. W. A. Bethel, presented our opinion to the French authorities, which was that according to the principles of international law, and in view of the conditions under which the American army was serving in France, its members should not be subject to criminal prosecution in French courts but should be answerable only to our own military tribunals. This view was readily accepted by the French, and very properly the jurisdiction over our forces, both civil and military, remained in our hands.

JESUS CRUCIFIED

Luke 22:33-46

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Here is the most meaningful event in history. Nothing else has been written about as much. The entire social complex of the nations has been changed thereby. The approach to the cruelty that was enacted began when Judas came forward with his kiss of betrayal as Jesus had completed His preparatory prayer season in the Garden of Gethsemane.

Pilate sought to evade the issue and even offered to release Jesus, but Barabbas was chosen for freedom according to the custom at the Jewish Passover.

Many think that Calvary, the place of the skull, was just north of the Damascus gate and that it could not be at the site of the present Church of the Holy Sepulchre which is within the city. Two thieves were crucified with Him. Look through the accounts in the four gospels and make note of the Seven Words or sayings from the cross. He certainly was a kindly man who could say under such circumstances, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

When all was over the Centurion gave his testimony as he declared: "Truly this man was the son of God." The Bible teaches that Jesus Christ was making an atonement for the sins of the world. The Golden Text is plain: "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed," Isaiah 53:5.

How to train BABY'S BOWELS

Babies, bottle-fed or breast-fed, with any tendency to be constipated, would thrive if they received daily, half a teaspoonful of this old family doctor's prescription for the bowels.

That is one sure way to train tiny bowels to healthy regularity. To avoid the fretfulness, vomiting, crying, failure to gain, and other ills of constipated babies.

Dr. Caldwells' Syrup Pepsin is good for any baby. For this, you have the word of a famous doctor. Forty-seven years of practice taught him just what babies need to keep their little bowels active, regular; keep little bodies plump and healthy. For Dr. Caldwell specialized in the treatment of women and little ones. He attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby.

CHEMISTS AID FARMERS

Farmers would do well to look to the chemist, rather than to the politician, for relief from the present unsatisfactory state of agriculture, according to speakers at an institute held by the American Chemical Society.

By devising means whereby hitherto wasted products of the farm may be turned into useful commodities, chemistry has already done much toward increasing the farmer's income, but the possibilities in this respect have been only faintly comprehended by the layman.

Oat hulls can be transformed into furniture, cornstalks into artificial silk, sugar cane bagasse into lumber, and so on. Furfural, used in the making of radio panels, electric light sockets and other articles, is a by-product of the oat crop which was unknown 15 years ago, but one breakfast food company alone in Iowa ships many tons of oat waste daily to be converted into furfural.

In order to handle many of these waste products profitably, new types of machinery are constantly working with increasing success toward the end sought.

Pleading that he was sole caretaker of seven goldfish and that they would starve if he remained away, A. C. Hultse of Seattle, Wash., was given his freedom by the judge.

PROPERTY IN WEST END HAS CHANGED HANDS

J. R. Hardy Buys Scroggins Place; West End Coming Back in Popularity

Several years ago West End was a little booming part of Clanton. There were about half a dozen stores there doing a good business, and it was considered a trading center for that section of Clanton, as well as getting quite a bit of trade from that side of the county.

Back in those times, a person could buy almost anything from a good mule to a safety pin in West End, and the place was practically a small town in itself and many jokes were told of their mayor and chief of police, justice of the peace, marshal, whom they had named among themselves. However, in recent years, several of the stores went out of business and the buildings were torn down, and West End came very near being just another avenue of Clanton.

But now business is picking up again and West End is coming back into its own. There have been three new places opened up out there and there seems to be prospects of more being opened in the near future.

J. R. Hardy, a former Coosa County citizen and who has been residing in Clanton for sometime, and at one time was connected with the McCain Stables here, has recently purchased the Scroggins property in West End, which includes a residence, store and some vacant lots. Mr. Hardy has reopened the former Scroggins store, remodeled it in the interior and placed a line of groceries there, as well as carrying a line of dry goods. Harris Hardy, son of J. R., will have charge of the store and Mr. Hardy stated that in the very near future he will increase the stock of the store and carry a full line of general merchandise. He will also devote a part of the property to stables, as he will deal in horses and mules also.

Mr. Hardy is quite well and favorably known throughout the county, and invites the people to stop at his place when in West End.

I. H. Broadhead is one of the other progressive spirited merchants of West End, having been in business there for several years, and still a young man yet. His store is a stopping place for not only farmers living in that part of the county, and residents of West End, but many residents in the other side of Clanton shop at his store, which carries a line of fancy groceries, meats, feedstuffs. He also operates a grist mill there.

Mr. Broadhead states that he has enjoyed a steady increase in business in West End, and owns quite a bit of property there. During the first five years in the business of grinding corn, he has ground over thirty thousand bushels of corn, averaging 6,000 per year, and 500 each month. So far this year he has ground something like three thousand bushels, he stated.

Grady Taylor is one of the most recent additions to the business world of West End, having opened a store and filling station combined. Mr. Taylor is also one of the progressive merchants in West End who are aiding in building up that part of Clanton. His store carries a line of general merchandise, and he conducts a delivery service to his customers in the city limits. His business has apparently grown by leaps and bounds since opening a few months ago, in a new building. Mr. Taylor was at one time in the wholesale grocery business, and his past experience there is proving helpful to his CENTRAL SINGERS WILL MEET AT WALNUT CREEK SUN. P.M.

The Central Singing Society will meet in regular session at Walnut Creek church next Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. This is the first regular session of the society since the first Sunday in May at Concord, and it is hoped that all singers will fall in line, and let's get going again as we were before we vacated for the all day singings.—Secretary.

T. J. YORK WILL SPEAK AT JEMISON ON SUNDAY

T. J. York, prominent Baptist Layman of Birmingham, will speak at the Baptist church in Jemison, Ala., next Sunday night at 7:45 o'clock according to an announcement made this week by the Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the church.

Mr. York's topic will be "The Church and Kingdom from the Layman's Viewpoint."

AIR CIRCUS TO BE STAGED AT THORSBY FIELD

School of Aeronautics to Send Planes And Stunters To Field Near Thorsby

Those who are air-minded in this section will have another opportunity to witness the safety of flying and to take a hop in a plane, when the Montgomery School of Aeronautics sends several planes to a field near Thorsby next Saturday and Sunday.

The planes will land and be located for these two days at Plainview Farm, two miles south of Thorsby, on the paved Birmingham highway. Mr. Garrett, a representative of the school, was in Clanton Tuesday, and stated that they would probably have two cabin planes on the field as well as open ones and will be ready to take anyone for a flight.

Parachute jumping and wing-walking will be some of the features by the flyers with the planes. Buddie Plunkett, the South's youngest parachute jumper and wing walker, will be there to furnish a few thrills, as will Capt. "Pop" Hanscom, of the LaFayette Escadrille, and L. G. Mason and L. L. Bradham.

The public is invited to see these stunts each day, and there will be no charge for admission. It is hoped that this group of experienced flyers will aid in promoting aviation in this section of the state. and hasten the establishment of a landing field near Clanton.

LOCAL PILOT CLUB GETTING GOOD START WITH INTEREST

The Pilot Club of Clanton had a most interesting meeting Tuesday evening. Twenty-three members have begun to get the Pilot inspiration. The convention of Pilot International to be held in Pensacola, Fla. June 22, 23 and 24, was discussed and several are planning to make the convention. Plans were also started for the next meeting which will be June 16th when the charter will be presented by the International President, Mrs. Virginia B. Rangeley; and Mrs. Margaret Ormond of Selma.

Selma Pilot Club sponsored the formation of the Clanton Club which will be the baby club at the convention with Phoenix, Arizona club as its sister. The Phoenix club has been organized only about a month.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fox are spending several days this week visiting friends and relatives in Centerville, Ala.

Clanton Drug Company Pushing Sales Of Widely Known Brand of Foods For Babies

On another page in this issue there will be found an ad from the Clanton Drug Company, known by the people of this section as Moore's Store, telling of a widely known brand of baby foods, for which they have been named exclusive agents in Clanton.

Mr. Moore, proprietor of the drug store, stated that they have just received a fresh shipment of this food and it is now on display there. Physicians in Clanton have heartily endorsed this brand and it is being used extensively in the county, Mr. Moore stated. This baby food is usually known as strained vegetables and according to a most reliable analysis, contains a high degree of food value, and easily digested by babies. It has also been approved by Good Housekeeping magazine.

A CORRECTION

In last week's issue there appeared a list of teachers for the high schools of the county, and in publishing this list an error was made in the names of teachers for the Maplesville High School, as last years list was used and had not been changed. The teachers for this school have not been fully selected yet.

SHERIFF GETS LARGE NUMBER IN FEW DAYS

Two Stills Captured While In Operation; Seventeen Arrested In 6 Days

Since Wednesday of last week the office of Sheriff W. H. Gillespie shows that seventeen persons were arrested on various charges over the county. This report covers up to last Tuesday.

According to the Sheriff's office, one of these arrests was for forgery and one for assault with weapon, while the others were for distilling and violating the Prohibition law, and all ranged from the Western part of the county to the river, and up near the Shelby County line.

Two stills were captured by the sheriff and his forces, while in operation it was stated. One was of thirty gallon capacity and the other 250 gallon capacity. One was located near the Shelby County line and the other in the Western part of the county. Three men were arrested in connection with the stills.

Quite a bit of whiskey, beer and mash was also destroyed by the officers along with the stills. This was reported as having been one of the most active weeks for the Sheriff's forces in the past several weeks.

Heavy inroads are being made thruout the county in the liquor traffic and other law violations by the sheriff and his forces.

Another Mad Dog Reported Shot Here

A report reached the News office this week stating that another mad dog had been either seen, or killed in Clanton recently and that it had been seen with several other dogs in town, that were running loose.

Sometime ago, it was reported that city officials had issued an order that all stray dogs would probably be shot, unless it was definitely known that they had been given rabies treatment to make them immune. Several owners of dogs in Clanton have had their animals inoculated due to the recent passing in Clanton of several rabid animals.

CONCORD B. Y. P. U. HAVE ENJOYABLE SOCIAL RECENTLY

A really good time and lots of fun was had last Thursday night at the Concord church, east of Clanton when the B. Y. P. U. of that church entertained with a social.

Electric lights were strung in the trees outside the church. and the youngers ones enjoying this affair were highly entertained with outdoor games of various kinds, while almost as many elder persons became young again, looking on. Ice cream and cake and lemonade was served to a large number.

PROMINENT BAPT. LAYMAN AT THORSBY

To Speak At Baptist Church; Daily Vacation Bible School To Open

Announcement was made this week that T. J. York, prominent Baptist layman of Birmingham, would speak at the Thorsby Baptist church next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, and each night thereafter thru Thursday night he will teach "Stewardship of Life," at the church. The public is invited to hear this well-read man.

The daily vacation Bible school of Thorsby is scheduled to begin next Monday morning at the grammar school in Thorsby. Misses Hazel Maddox, Lois Primm, Lois Thompson and others will conduct the classes.

Everyone is invited to attend this Bible school, and especially the young people.

FRANK MASTIN LEADING IN SALES OF HIS COMPANY

One of the inquisitive reporters of the News found this week that F. E. Mastin of this county has been doing some extra-ordinary work on the sales force of Brown & Bigelow during the month of May. Mr. Mastin came in first place among salesmen in the Southern States division of the company in sales for May, going above some of the oldest employees of the company's sales force.

Girl Scouts Break Camp On Saturday

Ending a week of real camp life, the Girl Scout Troops of Clanton and Mitchell Dam left the camps known as Upchurch and Martins Camp on the Coosa River last Saturday. There were something like twenty-seven or more girls on this camp, under the direction of several competent elder persons.

The girls were placed under strict camp rules and received splendid training in such life, including swimming, campcraft, dramatics, etc. They entertained members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club last Thursday night. Following

MRS. MOSS LEFT TUESDAY TO SPEND SOMETIME IN NEW YORK

Mrs. Mollie F. Moss, of Fitzpatrick, who has been spending sometime in Clanton with Mrs. Mamie C. Smith and family left last Tuesday morning for Allsbury Park, N. Y. Mrs. Moss will spend sometime there with her granddaughter, Miss Geraldine Goodroe, who holds a responsible position there with a well known firm.

T. J. Henderson of Mountain Creek, was among the business visitors to Clanton Monday.

"It Is. It Ain't. We'll Just Dig It Up And See." A Case Of Real Mistaken Identity

A case of mistaken identity had its culmination on Wednesday morning. The story is full of pathos, subdued humor and other emotions; it is full of material that any playwright might use to advantage.

The drama in real life was staged in the negro section of the Clanton cemetery. The characters were all negroes and included Ida Rembert and Fannie Goodgame as principals, both of whom are well and favorably known in this section. There were also two grave-diggers on the scene and perhaps others, who were on-lookers.

The story goes back for some years Fannie's great-niece died. There hallowed memories, but the grave remained without permanent markings.

"Aunt Hannah," Fannie's mother and faithful servant of her "White folks" died; the body was placed, supposedly, beside the body of the great-grandchild whom Hannah had reared.

The two graves had been carefully cemented and were kept in order by Fannie. Then came color and more coloring to the story of these colored folks. For, Ida Rembert, whose husband was a World War veteran and was buried six years ago, contended that Fannie through mistake had claimed and cemented the grave of Ida's husband.

The contending characters, in heroic pose, might be produced in stone or bronze statuettes and thus immortal fame be won for some sculptor. The statuettes of suggestively statuettes in question might be labeled: "Resolution in Ebony." Each character, because of strength, would not bend in compromise, but heroically stood resolute.

The scene became highly dramatic on Wednesday morning, when the grave-diggers employed by Ida, attempted action. Fannie, with a "Thou shalt not" attitude, made more emphatic by the flourishing of a buggy-whip over the grave, for sometime held the entire party at bay.

Fannie was finally quieted into a state of reasonableness and the work of disenterring went on.

When proof was produced, Fannie's warlike attitude gave way to one of humble entreaty. Ida's turn had come to make expression. With nerves worn threadbare over many harrowing recollections concerning the mistake, Ida impulsively issued the edict: "You've got to move your mother's bones from out of my lot."

Calm reflection came: Ida became penitent. She requested of friends: "Go to Fannie, tell her there's plenty of room for Aunt Hannah in my lot. I want Aunt Hannah to rest in peace. I didn't mean it. I wouldn't be that mean. I mean to forget all I've suffered. Poor Fannie! I'm sorry she can't find her niece's grave."

COPIES OF NEWS ON DISPLAY AT RUSSIA PRESS EXHIBIT

The News received a letter last week from the All-Nations Press Exhibition, which is the World's Press Show of 1931-32, asking for copies of this newspaper to be sent to them to be placed on exhibition at this show. This exhibition will take place at Tiflis, Republic GEORGIA. United States of Soviet Russia. Copies of the News were sent on this request.

"DADDY" FOX OPENS UP SMALL STORE, SIXTH ST.

Again, the people of this county who have always liked to trade with W. W. "Daddy" Fox, are going around on Sixth Street to visit his neat little store there. Mr. Fox has recently moved quite a lot of odds and ends to the front of the building next door to the place formerly occupied by his large furniture store and which is now the Tiffin-Klinner Furniture Company.

MOTHER, 4 TOTS ARE VICTIMS OF POISON AT HOME

Five Are Critically Ill; Small Hope Held for Mother Who Administered Dose

A mother and four of her children, ranging in age from four to eleven years, were critically ill in a Montgomery hospital last Monday night, suffering from effects of poison.

The four children were reported to have been found Sunday night in their home at Wallsboro, which is near Wetumpka. Neighbors heard the screams of the children and went to the home.

A glass and some poison tablets were found nearby in the home. The mother, Mrs. R. H. Heaslett, age 30, and the wife of a former state employee and her children were carried to Montgomery to a hospital.

The youngest child, Jack, age 4, was said Tuesday morning to be in a very critical condition, and very little hope was held for the recovery of Mrs. Heaslett, it was stated. The other children are Mildred, age 11; Renfro age 7, and Gene age 6.

Neighbors of the Heaslett family stated that Mrs. Heaslett had been very despondent because of the failure of her husband to find employment after being dismissed by the state. It was also stated that she had threatened her life before.

MR. AND MRS. LILLIE OF WEST VIRGINIA VISITING HERE NOW

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton F. Lillie and children of Elkins, West Virginia, arrived in Clanton the first of the week to spend sometime with Mrs. Lillie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Gentry of near Clanton. Mr. Lillie is a newspaperman of wide experience and was at one time connected with the News here. He has recently been confined in the Government Hospital on account of serious illness and has just been released. Mr. and Mrs. Lillie have countless friends in this county who are glad to see them back for a visit.

NOTICE TO CREAM SHIPPERS

Due to the change in train schedules moving up the time for afternoon trains arriving in Clanton, all farmers who bring cream to the office of the County Agent, are urged to bring the cream in on Saturday afternoons not later than three o'clock.

LOCAL O. E. S. WILL PRESENT POPULAR PLAY

"Dollar Bill of The Sunshine Circus" Being Rehearsed By Eastern Star

A cast made up of approximately seventy-five people of Clanton is being put through practice each night, and have been for the past week, preparing for the presentation of the play "Dollar Bill of the Sunshine Circus," at the high school auditorium here next Tuesday night, June 16, at eight o'clock.

This play is being sponsored by the local chapter of the Order of The Eastern Star and much time is being spent to make it a success. It is not only a most amusing and entertaining play but something of a musical comedy-drama, with plenty of wit as well as a well laid plot.

There will be a chorus made up from many of the younger crowd of people of Clanton, both boys and girls. The program shows that clowns, acrobats, and many other circus features will be presented. It is a Daniel Producing Company production, and they have an experienced coach who has been in Clanton several days coaching each person taking a part. The popular price of twenty and thirty-five cents will be charged.

Following is a list of the characters and the persons playing the part:

Dollar Bill, manager of circus, C. E. Stapp; Celeste. queen of the circus, Charlsie Pyron; Captain Apple-Jack, the ringmaster, Rufus Brown; Tom, a good looking stranger, Dick Kemp; Katie, who works in the drug store, Mary Ellis; Harry, a soda jerker, Harris Hardy; Daisy, queen of the tight ropes, Elizabeth Johnson; Doc Hartley, the town alderman, W. M. Wyatt; Ma, Mrs. Grady Heflin; Little Willie, Lamar Calloway; Mrs. Calamity, Mary Foshee.

JAMES HOST TO ANNUAL SIGN CONTRACTORS PICNIC

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. James entertained several people from Birmingham last Saturday and Sunday at their attractive camp on Coosa River. This was the annual picnic of the Associated Sign Contractors of Alabama.

Among those enjoying this outing at the James Camp were Mr. and Mrs. Berney Vest and family, A. B. Beard, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Smith and family, Mr. and Mrs. Eaves, and Mr. and Mrs R. H. Stevenson of Birmingham and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Duncan of West Blocton.

MRS. T. A. MADDOX IMPROVING AFTER UNDERGOING OPERATION

Mrs. T. A. Maddox of the New Salem Community is improving nicely from the operation which she has recently undergone. She is in the Norwood Hospital of Birmingham. It is the hope of the family to have her home with them within a week or so. The entire community will rejoice with them for in the eyes of the writer no one from our community could have been missed as she is missed, not only at home, but church and community as well. Again we all will rejoice to see her at home again.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Alexander and little son, Robbie, motored to Chattanooga, Tenn., recently. While in Tennessee they visited several points of interest including Lookout Mountain.

Mrs. Gordon Blackmon of Rockford is visiting her brother, Vernie Teel, this week.

New Beauty Shoppe Will Open In Clanton Today; Located In The Johnson Building

Clanton will have a new Beauty shoppe, judging from activities upstairs in the Johnson Building on Main Street. Miss Arcula White of Birmingham will be the operator of the new shop for Clanton and comes here very well recommended as a beauty shoppe operator.

Miss White stated that her shop will be equipped throughout with new equipment of latest types for the newest trends in beauty culture. The opening day has been set for today, Thursday, at nine o'clock a.m., at which time Miss White invites all the ladies, young and old to visit her shop for an inspection and to get acquainted. She also stated that for today, Friday and Saturday, she will have some real attractive offers to make to customers at her shop. This will be for the three days only.

Miss White, with her mother, Mrs. R. J. White, were in Clanton last week making arrangements for the opening of the shop, and will make their home in Clanton in the future.

Miss Effie Howell, of Haleyville, is the attractive guest of her sister, Mrs. J. D. Broadhead and Mr. Broadhead this week. Miss Howell visited Clanton sometime ago, attending school here at the high school.

CHILTON CO. SINGING CONVENTION MET AT COOPERS SUNDAY

The spring session of the Chilton County Singing Convention met in regular order at Chestnut Creek church, Coopers, last Sunday. Services were called to order at ten o'clock by county chairman, Prof. W. M. Devaughn, followed with the opening prayer by Rev. J. S. Hand. A program committee was appointed by the chairman, and the following directors sung before noon: I. D. Huett, Archie Devaughn, N. A. Smith, Akins I. Collins, O. L. Devaughn and L. T. Grant.

At eleven o'clock there was preaching by the pastor, Rev. J. Starling Hand. This sermon was very pointed and thoroughly enjoyed by the congregation. This brought the program up to the noon hour, when an intermission of one and one-half hours was given for dinner.

The house was called back to order at 1:30 by the chairman. Those directing in the afternoon were W. L. Sanders, A. M. Jones, A. O. Boswell, Everett Devaughn, Lee J. Grant, J. B. Hammonds, R. T. Grant, Wm. Jones, L. T. Grant, Willie L. Mims, W. M. Devaughn, G. C. Weldon, H. G. Carter, J. W. Cagle, T. E. Wyatt and J. E. Varner. Two or three quartets and one special number were sung.

Executive Committee Appointed

The president, vice-president, and secretary of the convention got togther and appointed an executive committee, whose duty it is to get a home and date for the fall session of the convention. The committee consists of A. H. Glasscock, chairman, J. R. Robinson, Willie L. Mims, G. C. Weldon, and J. W. Lowery. Any member of this committee will receive applications from communities wishing to have the convention in September, and they will meet some time in the future and decide which will be accepted. So, any place wishing to have the convention in the fall, will please see one of these committeemen as early as possible and make the proper arrangements.

M. L. WARE RETURNED MONDAY FROM BIRMINGHAM HOSPITAL

The friends of Matt Ware, of Matt's Lunch Shoppe, received a pleasant surprise Monday when he arrived in Clanton from South Highlands Infirmary in Birmingham, after having undergone several serious operations, and after being confined there for over a month. Mr. Ware has been busy for the past few days greeting his friends here and says he is certainly glad to be back in Clanton.

He stated that he wished he could get around now and thank the people here for the kind letters and the flowers sent to him while confined in the hospital, and tell them of his deep appreciation of the interest shown for his condition. A visit to Mr. Ware's room at the hospital would have shown one that he really received attention from his many friends. He stated that he feels fine now and hoped to be back soon at his post of duty serving the people here with good food every day and night at his lunch shop.

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

When people deliberately stay at home on God's holy day, we become sick at heart, and the clouds of discouragement gather into our soul, but we are not going to give up. As for me and my house, we are going to serve the Lord. Sunday will find us in our place before the sacred altar. Folks, listen to me, the day is coming when you are going to be sorry of your indifference toward the services of the sanctuary.

At 9:45 we have our Sunday school. At 11 a.m. we have preaching. Our services are not dull. We crowd interesting worship into every moment. Hear the ten minute sermon to the children next Sunday at 10:30. At the morning and night hours the subject will be "The Reigning Redeemer."

The pastor will leave next Monday for a ten days meeting at Centerville. Provision has been made for all of his appointments.

WOMEN HAVE LESS CHANCE OF MARRYING THAN DO MEN

Alabama women have less chance of marrying and of staying married than do the men of the State.

This conclusion is based upon the fact that there are 27,000 more females in the State than males and their marital condition is shown as follows:

	Males	Females
Per cent single	32.1	24.9
Married	62.4	60.8
Widowed	4.7	12.6
Divorced	.8	1.5

Among the farm folks the figures are some different from the average of the State as shown below:

	Males	Females
Per cent single	33.9	26.3
Married	61.2	62.7
Widowed	4.4	10.0
Divorced	.5	1.0

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

Sunday night the young people in one of our churches, bowed their heads and sang, "The Lord Is in His Holy Temple, Let All the Earth Keep Silent Before Him." That was the sentiment of the sages in the olden days, and it should be the feeling of every heart in our generation. I fear that we sing that response with our lips and not with our hearts. Some times we see young people in the League and in the B. Y. P. U. and other church organizations, who are not as respectful toward the church as they should be. If President Hoover should come in to sit through a B. Y. P. U. or a League service, the young people would sit quietly, and be beautiful because of their reverence. The Lord is in His Holy Temple and why not show to Him more reverence than you would show any human being? Let every young life restrain its overplus of giggles and wiggles for some other occasion. They are out of order in the house of God.

I stood on the side walks of Montgomery last Friday and saw the old soldiers of the Confederacy go by. My heart bled as I saw one old man as he stood up in his car and held a flask of whiskey above his head. He had enough of the stuff under his skin to make him a fool and a fool he was. An old man, with one foot in the grave, and yet filling his skin with the fire brands of hell and lifting above his head the thing that has been outlawed in our American life. Some of the baser sort thought him to be "Cute" and they laughed at his silliness, but to the man who was thinking in terms of civilization, and in terms of two worlds, that old man was an expression of satanic defiance. The report is out that the old Confeds were served with all the whiskey they wanted while they were the guests of Montgomery and Alabama. We wonder who did this. If a part of the $50,000.00 of State funds appropriated by the Legislature was spent in buying rum for the honored heroes of the South, it is time for our citizenship to rise up and register a kick.

Just back of Clanton's beautiful cemetery, the city has its junk and its dump head. Trucks run up and down our streets and gather up our waste supplies, and they are carted off to the edge of the swamp. There is much rubbish down there. It is an unsightly place, because unsightly things are deposited there. As we look over our streets and vacant lots there is still much rubbish that needs to be carted away. There should be no room on the inside of our city for filth and rubbish. We have a place for it, and to that place all rubbish should go. Just as rubbish will collect around the best of homes, so rubbish will collect about the best of lives. What are you doing with the rubbish of your thinking and living. Are you letting it rust and rot within your own life, or, are you carting it beyond the limits of your soul life? At the close of every day gather up the rubbish of your life and have it thrown on the dump heap. Never allow soul rubbish to make the premises of your life to look unclean. A home and a soul, without rubbish, is a beautiful thing.

I went into a store not long since to buy some shirts. They had only two in the building that were my number. The saleslady remarked, "These shirts are slightly soiled and we will let you have them at a bargain." Suppose that you look over the goods that are placed on "Bargain Counters" and see if they are not goods that are, "Slightly soiled." The smoke coming from a fire, the dust that sticks, will soil goods and make them cheap. When I see "Smoke stains" on the lips of girls, when I see the tottering steps of young men, I am reminded of tht "Bargain Counter." Young life becomes "Very Cheap" when it is slightly soiled.

We have an unusual garden at the parsonage this year. I walk out to see how it is progressing, and I can not tell whether it is a vegetable garden, or a flower garden. It seems to be both. Flowers and vegetables are all mixed up together. I rather admire the impression that the garden makes, for in it can be seen the beautiful and the useful. That is the way my life should be, that is the way your life should be. It should be filled with things that are useful, and things that are beautiful. Together we should strive to cultivate the useful and the beautiful things of life, and let them grow side by side. A growing tomato looks all the better when above it there is the blooming poppy. A good deed shines all the better when a beautiful character is back of the deed.

I was standing at the door of a filling station while a man was settling his garage bill. A check for thirty dollars was written, and as the man handed it over to the owner of the station, he remarked, "That is the price of carelessness." As little as you think about it, carelessness, is one of the most expensive things that we have to deal with. When two cars crash, when the flames burst from the roof, when health goes, when a life is ruined, that is the price of carelessness. Carelessness is a spigot through which flows our hard earned money. Stop your carelessness and save your money and your life.

Safety Glass
Ford cars are now equipped with safety glass in all doors and windows at a small extra charge
$15 for the Coupe, De Luxe Coupe, Sport Coupe or Convertible Cabriolet
$20 for the Tudor Sedan, Standard Sedan, De Luxe Sedan, Town Sedan or Victoria
THE Triplex safety glass windshield has always been an outstanding feature of the Model A Ford. By reducing the dangers of flying glass, it has saved many lives and prevented countless injuries in automobile collisions.
Now comes a further assurance of safety to every Ford owner . . . polished plate safety glass in ALL DOORS AND WINDOWS at slight additional cost.
The charge for this extra protection is unusually low because of large production and the development of new methods of manufacture. Simply tell the dealer when you buy the Ford that you want "safety plate glass in all doors and windows" and the car will be factory-equipped for you in that manner.
Today, as before, the safety glass windshield is furnished as standard equipment on all Ford cars without extra charge.
FORD OWNERS This announcement refers only to NEW CARS. Ford dealers are not in a position to install safety glass in the windows of your present Ford at the above prices.

General Pershing Inspecting Poilus.

"Great Confusion at Home."

There was ample evidence of great confusion at home due to lack of efficient supervision, even in New York harbor, where experts should have been easy to find. Ships were seldom loaded to their full capacity; supplies greately needed were often left behind; nonessentials were being sent over; many things were broken due to careless loading; troops were often shipped to one port and their equipment to another.

The Washington bureaus often followed blindly some out-of-date supply table perhaps drawn up under a former regime by an antiquated desk soldier long since retired and forgotten. As an illustration, I recall a bill of lading from one of our transports that was presented to me about this time as a curiosity. It listed a number of articles quite useless to an army in the field and provoked the following cable:

"For all departments. Recommend no further shipments be made of following articles . . . bath bricks, bookcases, bathtubs, cabinets for blanks, chairs except folding chairs, cuspidors, office desks, floor wax, hose except fire hose, stepladders, lawn mowers, refrigerators, settees, sickles, stools, window shades. Further stop orders will follow soon."

We were short-handed, both at depots and along the line of communications, in all classes of labor that should have been sent over long before. The quartermaster corps in France was seriously handicapped in handling, caring for and issuing its stores and supplies.

The need for stevedores had become most urgent. Combat troops were still being used to unload cargo and much time was wasted by the use of labor that was entirely unsuitable for this sort of work through lack of experience. Moreover, it was urgent that the combat troops should be sent inland to receive their battle instruction. The French, although short themselves, had loaned us a few prisoners and also some women as laborers to help out, but neither class was satisfactory. Under the conditions there was danger that our ports would become hopelessly congested, although three weeks later, and after further urgent appeals, the War department promised to send stevedores at once.

Line Training for First Division.

My diary notes the following:

> Chaumont, Thursday, Oct. 4, 1917.—Gen. de Castlenau called Tuesday to discuss entry of First division in the line.
>
> Witnessed attack maneuver of the division yesterday and conducted critique.
> Ambassador Sharp came today with Mr. Joseph Reinach for a visit and had lunch with us. Have cabled appeal for officers fitted for general staff.

The French, always solicitous regarding the progress of our training, were anxious that our most advanced American unit take its place in a quiet sector, for the experience. The main reason they advanced for suggesting front-line training at this time, with which I fully agreed, was that it would give new encouragement to their armies and through them to the people. The First division itself was keen to take a more active part and was soon to have the opportunity.

This division had been billeted in the training area since July 15 and had begun to show the excellent effects of the system of training we had prescribed. At the maneuver which I attended the officers handled their units with considerable skill, particularly Capt F. H. Burr, who conducted an attack with his battalion of the Twenty-eighth regiment, and Maj. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who did a similar problem with his battalion of the Twenty-sixth regiment.

Pleased With Efficiency.

At the division school the bayonet exercises, special target practice, firing with trench mortars, bomb-throwing and other trench training were well carried out. I returned much pleased with the evidences of efficiency in this organization, which was later to become famous among the armies on the western front.

My diary says:

> Paris, Wednesday, Oct. 10, 1917.—Spent Sunday at Gondirecourt, First division field meet, with General Harbord, General Ragueneau and Representative Medill McCormick. We lunched with Bullard.
>
> "Yesterday evening the officers at G. H. Q. called to extend congratulations on confirmation of my appointment as general. All heads of permanent staff departments appointed to grade of brigadier general.
> A group of major generals are over on tour of inspection.

The staff department heads who became brigadier generals at that time were: James G. Harbord, chief of staff; Benjamin Alvord, adjutant general; Harry L. Rogers, quartermaster general; W. A. Bethe, judge-advocate general; Edgar Russell, chief of signal corps; G. C. Williams, chief of ordnance, and A. E. Bradley, chief surgeon.

Officers Visit Battlefields.

In accordance with my recommendation, division commanders from the states were being sent over to visit the battlefields, armies and schools in order to become acquainted with conditions and to experience the atmosphere of war. It was important that they should appreciate the realities and become fully impressed with the urgency of thorough preparation of their commands. It was thought they would become impressed with the aggressive spirit that characterized our training in France by coming into close touch with our methods.

These officers were sent to visit the allied fronts and to see demonstrations at our own training fields and schools and were also taken along the line of communications. I took occasion to give them personally my conception of the course of training that should be followed at home, making an especial point of rigid discipline, rifle practice and the instruction of junior officers in open warfare.

A number of the officers sent over were either physically unfit or had reached the age when new ideas fail to make much of an impression, and consequently I recommended that those of both classes be left at home for other duty or to be retired.

CHAPTER XVII

Marshal Joseph Joffre, upon my invitation, arrived at Chaumont October 15, 1917, to see our First division.

The French military officials were anxious to show their respect and it was arranged to have both an American and a French guard or honor drawn up to salute him upon his arrival at my residence. These two small guards vied with each other and both seemed to get a great thrill out of the ceremony.

After an interesting evening with the marshal and his staff as our guests we left the next morning by motor car for Treveray, accompanied by Generals Ragueneau and Alvord, Colonels De Chambrun and McCoy and Captain Boyd.

The troops of the division were drawn up in line ready to receive us and presented a much better appearance than at the review by President Poincare. The men were especially keen to be inspected by a marshal of France and their pride was clearly evident by their perfect lines as they swung by in the march past. The marshal in turn was enthusiastic over their vigorous appearance and military bearing.

One incident occurred that was not on the program. On the way to the field for the ceremony a well-groomed mule that happened to be running loose pricked up his ears, looked us over and decided to trot along with us. One of my staff wagered that this wise animal knew what was going on and would be present to see the march past. Sure enough, when we reached our position this Missouri product had preceded us. Cautiously approaching, he displayed the greatest curiosity in the guest of honor. As all efforts to drive him away seemed futile, he hovered near as an interested spectator of the proceedings, much to the amusement of the marshal.

Review Other Units.

I gave a luncheon at Neufchateau for the marshal's party and my own and the senior officers of the First division. After that we saw the training conducted by the First corps school and visited the American and French billets at the village of St. Blin, where the One Hundred and First regiment, Twenty-sixth division, and the French Sixty-ninth passed in review in excellent form. As we returned toward Chaumont other American and French units were drawn up by the roadside in honor of the marshal.

It was rather late when we started and darkness overtook us while passing on foot through the lines. The trumpets of each regiment sounded as we approached, and with the lights from our automobiles close behind illuminating the trees that bordered the highway and the faces that peered through the shadows to catch a glimpse of the marshal the scene suggested some legendary painting.

Finally we halted and the troops, including the French One Hundred and Fifty-first infantry, which had made a remarkable record at Verdun, marched past us. As the regiments came out of the darkness into the spotlight of our autos they made a picture never to be forgotten.

Denies False Cable Rumor.

Returning to Paris October 19, I learned that a dispatch from Berlin to the New York Times represented me as having said that the German lines were impregnable. The report might have been idle gossip, but it was more probably circulated to create the impression that our armies were starting on a forlorn hope. This report was so far from the truth that I cabled the secretary of war that it was absolutely false and without any foundation whatever.

In every reference to our future operations I had strongly maintained that it was not only possible to break the German lines but that it would be done. The very system of training that we were persistently following was based on the determination to force the Germans out of their trenches and beat them in the open. On no other theory could they have been defeated.

Yet without question there were not a few among our allies and probably some in our own army who thought the task impossible, supporting their view by citing the failures of the previous three years, especially that of the spring of 1917. It was none the less a surprise, however, when a report came directly to me that such views had actually been expressed in the presence of civilian visitors by officers of rank in our army.

I was indignant to learn of that kind of talk, and in commenting on it to the Americans who had heard such statements made I said that "The German lines can be broken, they must be broken, and they will be broken," and those present will recall that it was said with considerable emphasis.

Positive steps were taken at once to eradicate such notions, or at least prevent them from being openly stated, and I was determined to relieve immediately any officer, without regard to rank, who should express any such opinion.

First Division Moves In.

My general impression of the situation at this time was set forth in a cable to Washington October 21:

"During the last week the water-soaked ground in Flanders and on the western front generally has prevented further development of offensive movements. Summing up wastage of German army in this year's campaign, a single offensive, such as the Anglo-French in Flanders in progress since July 31, is insufficient materially to weaken Germany's man power. Next year must see two offensives, continuously maintained throughout summer, if decisive result is to be obtained. This can only be secured through aid of effective United States army on this side. . . . The troops on the western front have been re-enforced by one German division from the Russian front. . . ."

As the training of the First division had now progressed sufficiently it was put into line in the quiet sector northeast of Luneville, under the supervision of the French, for actual trench experience. The division was underofficered and short of horses, clothing and many other things, especially rolling kitchens, of which a few had only recently been received, and trucks, which were borrowed from the French.

Stressed Need of Winter Clothing.

My repeated cables, beginning in July, for winter clothing had received scant attention, and with the coming of colder weather the shortage became critical. The initial stock requested was disallowed, the monthly allotments were totally inadequate and the depots were practically empty.

The explanation that came from the quartermaster general's office, that our requests could not be granted on account of the needs at home, showed a total lack of appreciation of the necessity of properly clothing the fighting man actually at the front above all others. After another urgent appeal a partial supply was sent, but we had succeeded in obtaining a quantity of clothing from the British to tide us over.

CHAPTER XVIII

Upon the invitation of General Petain I went to the French front to be present at their second offensive since General Nivelle's failure in April, arriving by motor at the headquarters of General d'Esperey, commander of the group of armies of the north, on the evening of October 22, 1917.

The plans for the attack were explained to us, and from the extreme care taken in working out the details and from their accurate knowledge of the enemy's forces and his position, there seemed to be little doubt of success.

Soon after their victory near Verdun in August the French had begun to prepare for this offensive, in which they could not well afford to fail. The advance was made by eight divisions of the Sixth army on a front of only seven and a half miles extending along the Aisne, with the object of gaining a more advantageous position for the winter and also still further building up French morale.

Extended Artillery Fire.

General Maistre, the army commander, gave the operation his personal attention, prescribing an artillery preparation covering six days, during which the expenditure of ammunition was even greater than in the offensive of August 20. The long period of artillery fire was considered necessary, as the Germans were strongly fortified along the chalky bluffs of the Aisne, where numerous caverns afforded cover for large garrisons held near the front.

The assaulting lines of infantry, accompanied by numerous tanks, succeeded without difficulty in reaching the limited objectives. Fort Malmaison, the key point, was reduced to a heap of rubbish by the very heavy artillery fire concentrated upon it. The capture of this dominant position by the French caused the immediate withdrawal of the Germans on the right and left, and during the succeeding fortnight they retired behind the Allette.

Victory Is Offset.

This achievement of the French in capturing positions against which the April offensive by Nivelle dashed itself to pieces had a very stimulating effect upon their morale, but it would have been more lasting had it not been followed so soon by the serious defeat of the Italians at Caporetto October 24.

After extending thanks to our host we left for Compiegne, literally covered with mud, stopping there to congratulate General Petain on the success of the day. While at Compiegne we dropped in at the dispensary where some American women under Miss Elsie De Wolfe (who afterward became Lady Mendl) maintained a clinic for badly burned gas cases. We also made a brief call at the hospital nearby to see Colonel Bunau-Varila of Panama canal fame, who had lost a leg at the recent French offensive near Verdun. From his cheerful mood he seemed to be rather proud of his wound

In 1927 I took part in the dedication of the Ossuary near Verdun, at which Colonel Bunau-Varila was present. On the rounds to inspect this fine monument we passed the many bays which contain the bones of men who lost their lives in the great battle. When we came to the bay corresponding to the sector in which he fought, he jovially remarked that he thought his leg must be in there.

Business And Baseball

We were talking the other day with a friend whose main interest in life, outside of his own business, is baseball. We were talking, as most men do when they meet these days, about the business situation.

"The business situation reminds me of the baseball situation," said our friend. "You remember that for the past few seasons an enormous number of big league players were batting home runs? They would stand at the plate, holding the bat by the tip and line them out over center field fence until home runs got to be almost commonplace. People began to get tired of them.

"Last winter the baseball magnates got together to see how they could tighten up the game. They developed a new ball, which is being used this season. The leather cover is thicker and the seams are roughter, which gives the pitcher better control and a sharper break on his curves. Players who used to bat the old ball all over the lot found they could not even hit the new ball half the time. Then somebody began to think back, and recalled that Ty Cobb, the greatest batter of them all, used to hold his bat somewhere in the middle and crouch over the plate. He didn't hit many home runs but he got to first base oftener than any other batter in his time. So the baseball players of this season instead of swinging high, wide and handsome, have just shortened up their bats and are playing for base hits instead of home runs.

"Now it seems to me," our friend went on, "that there is a lesson in that for business men. Everybody in business was batting home runs two or three years ago. But we are playing business with a new kind of ball, and the fellow that swings a long bat and keeps trying for home runs these days does not even get to first base. But the wise business men are just shortening up their grip, playing up close to the plate, and they are batting out base hits, while the ones who have not found out yet that the new ball is harder to hit are beefing about hard times and blaming their troubles on everybody but themselves."

It seems to us that there is a good deal in what our friend said. There are a lot of business men who had things coming their way too easily during the boom, but the ones who are holding their own today and getting ahead are not the ones who are waiting for the old times to come back, but are the ones who are adapting their ideas and their business methods to today's conditions.

All For One --- One For All

One of the most difficult things one is called upon to do is to give up having one's own way, gracefully and join in on the other fellow's plan and help put it across.

There is in every community men who are dynamos in energy and action, but who never use their talents for the advancement and upbuilding of their town because the plan adopted was not their plan. They are afraid that some one else will get the credit and are unwilling to submerge their efforts with the efforts of others in the common program.

It requires a bigger man often times to be a helper in a program and private in the ranks than it does to carry the banner and point the way.

Clanton has a number of men who can sit down around a table and outline a fine, constructive program for this community. Before their program can succeed, it must have the earnest worker in the ranks who is content to work along in his humble position and see some one else receive the major portion of the praise and credit.

Let's all get behind our leaders whoever they may be and work for the common interests of Chilton County.

If Chilton County prospers and goes ahead, every citizen, every business and professional man in Chilton County will win because of it.

We must work together to win together.

The Roadside Landscape

At intervals of a few miles along every state highway in Tennessee there is an inconspicuous sign which reads, "No Advertising Is Permitted Within the Right of Way of Any State Highway in Tennessee.'

For adopting this rule the state of Tennessee deserves a Pulitzer prize, or a Carnegie medal, or a tablet in the Hall of Fame. The state, of course, cannot control advertising signs not located actually on the highway property, but the mere fact that it has adopted this regulation, and is calling attention to it, undoubtedly has an influence on the whole subject of the defacement of the landscape by advertising billboards. These little unobtrusive signs create in the public mind a realization of the fact that advertising signs are a defacement and a nuisance.

Tennessee has some other pretty good highway laws and regulations. There is no speed limit in the state except such as municipalities set up, where traffic is thick. You may drive a hundred miles an hour in Tennessee, if your car will go that fast, but you are held strictly responsible for reckless driving and violation of the rules of the road. One of the things they are particular about in Tennessee is passing a car going in the same direction when both are going uphill. The state traffic police are vigilant, and the usual fine for this offense is $50. Tennessee has learned that most automobile accidents are not the result of speed but of carelessness.

Some other states and communities could learn something from Tennessee.

Opinions expressed in this column by this writer have no connection with the general policies of this paper, being wholly those of the writer, in the manner they are written.

Will go on this week with those experiences I've been having while away from this good old county of ours. Of course I had a swell time, but Clanton and Chilton County looked good to me when I came back.

I see no reason why I should not tell one or two jokes on myself. that happened, nor why I should not tell of some of the predicaments I got into, while seeking a little adventure. Was sitting in the hotel lobby when a rather unusually attractive lady came in. I say 'lady' because I found later that she was really a lady. There was a boy friend with me and he asked if I knew the young lady. I replied in the negative, and at the same time made a bet I could take her out to dinner that night. He took me up. I went about finding out who she was in my best manner, but failed, until I accidentally (on purpose) bumped into her at the cigar counter where she had purchased some cigarettes. That bump fixed things up for an introduction and I immediately asked her to have dinner at the hotel with me that night. She accepted, and at the appointed time we met. and I also met the husband. Next time I'll look at that finger on the left hand. Anyway I won the bet with the friend. Fools rush in where angels fear to tread.

Woke up one morning and at breakfast found a card in my coat pocket with an address and telephone number and some initials on it, with a note to call and talk sometime. Well, I couldn't figure out where the card came from, but it looked like a chance for a little adventure so that afternoon I accepted the invitation on the card, not knowing whether it was written to somebody else, or even maybe a week or so old. If you want a little tingling feeling, just do a trick like that. However, I found the young lady really meant the invitation for me and had slipped the card in my pocket on the dance floor at the club the night before. My first thought was that she was a golddigger or maybe wanted to compromise me or something. But I was all wrong. She said she heard me mention the name of a very dear friend of hers the night before and due to the fact that she was deeply interested in that person, she wanted to talk to me. Well I talked, sitting on pins, so to speak. She wasn't so attractive, and I was looking for attractions.

Was coming down on the elevator one morning, about noon. (after the night before) and some fellow slapped me on the shoulder, saying "What are you doing here?" I stared at him, like someone who had lost their mind, and the next question he asked was, "Where is your wife?" Well, that was about enough for me. I had been rather running around the night before, and with that groggy mind of mine, I had to think about a dozen times to convince myself that I was not married. Next time I'll get my mind clear before leaving my room—if there is a next time.

There was one place I visited that brought back some memories of some days that used to be, when I had few troubles and plenty of time to get rid of them. I found a desk that I had used and had been locked since my visit there several years ago. One whole day almost, I spent there going through some letters, names and addresses, etc. Eventually ended up by cleaning out the whole business, because about seventy-five per cent of the persons whose addresses and telephone numbers I had, were married, and have families now.

Met up with an old friend who used to live out in Aigburth, Liverpool, and spent quite a while talking over old times with him. He was connected with a Stamp Depot in Portsmouth. He asked me about a young fellow named Liposky, from Cincinnati. I think he may be known by some in Clanton. Then there is Alys, the tall slender blond. Well, she's gone on up, out of my style, so don't guess she would want to be bothered with an ordinary columnist. Called on a young lady whom I met once when something of a cub reporter. She and and her family had had something of a rather nasty auto accident the night I met her. Located the little red-headed Irish girl and her entertaining brother, Mac, and I was really glad to see them and their mother again. They are a fine family. And speaking of families, there is the Jewish family, of whom Henrietta, tall slender and attractive, is a member. Another fine family I like.

At my next stop, saw the old friend David, the rather well known writer, and a great old sport. If personality is the subject, then I know it in person, being acquainted with Fay, who became rather widely known in sections as "Miss Personality." Then there is the young fellow who was going to college, and in love with a girl working in an office down town. He was finding things rather tough, with his wealthy parents insisting that he attend college, and he wanting to go to work for himself—and his girl. I'd advise them to let him get a job, however that was several years ago. And old Howard J., well, well, I remember the night he was to be host at an entertainment and when he arrived, late, he had his vest on wrong side out, and I carried him back home. Chanced to run across Benjamin, who is in the U. S. Navy now and who I helped out once. He had never forgotten that, and still talked about it. He's a fine fellow, too. He was on the U. S. S. Coghlan, No. 226.

Located an address, 1903 Second Ave., and couldn't remember who lived there so, when I had time I took it on myself to find out. Who should I find there but Miss Blackburn, the little blond who was the life of a party about several years ago. She wasn't married, but planning on it. Next, a telephone number, 6-0902. Whose number is that? Too much trouble to find out from the book, so why not call and see who lives there. I did, but undoubtedly they had moved away as a little girl answered and didn't know what I wanted.

And so I let my mind go through all those parties and picnics of years past. Gosh, it made me feel old. Next week, I'll probably go a little more into detail on some of my experiences, but you must not be trying to wonder and ask why, about who I am writing about, because you know that when you are not sure, there is a great chance of being misled, and you may wrong someone.

Letters To The Editor

PITTS REPLIES TO SUPERINTENDENT LAWRENCE

If my friend Buford Lawrence can convince the people of Chilton County that two local lawyers of Clanton, Alabama, who are supposed to be of different Political faith from that of our County Superintendent, will spend hours and days seeking to defeat a bill making his office elected by popular vote of the people, without charges directly or indirectly for their services—then, I will say it is quite unusual.

One of these Attorneys has been acting as your Attorney for some time and he informed me several months ago personally that he would oppose the local bill, making your office elective.

These certain Attorneys he refers to were instrumental in having a petition carried around to members of the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County, and having them separately and severally rescind their recommendation to Senator Duncan favoring this bill. The same Attorneys made trips to Montgomery to see the Senator and presented him with the petition recalling their former recommendation.

Two of those members of the Democratic Executive Committee of this County came to me recommending these local bills with the Dr. N. S. Johnson, their chairman, from an open meeting of the Executive Committee. I am advised that the Chairman was never asked to rescind his recommendation, and the petition was never presented to him.

You stated to me personally last week you were "conscientiously opposed to the election of the County Superintendent of Education by a popular vote. Beg to advise that if you were not "conscientiously" opposed, or otherwise opposed, yours would be an exceptional case. Especially since you are holding an appointive office.

Don't get excited Bro. Lawrence, about electing the County Board of Education by Districts, instead of the County as a whole which in my judgment, is the fair and equitable thing to do. This also applies to members of the County Commissioners Court. For your information I was requested to elect the County Board of Education by Districts, and since that time many have requested that the same thing be done for the Commissioners, and let each member be elected by the District he is to serve.

If Senator Duncan will pass the two Educational bills on through the Senate, I will gladly have same law apply to our County Commissioners. Suppose you possibly saw in the same issue of Union Banner your letter was published in, a bill advertised for this purpose. If you recall the bills I fought and defeated through the help of my friends in the 1927 Legislature, they were so drawn in dividing the Districts that our Democratic friends thought they had a wonderful chance to elect a majority of the Board. Also, in the 1927 bill, they sought to take the Chairmanship of the Commissioners Court out of the hands of the Probate Judge. In other words in the present bills we elect our members by Districts, as they are now and have heretofore been designated.

The local educational Bills providing for the election of the County Supt. of Education by direct vote of the people and the one designated to elect the Members of the County Board of Education by the districts they serve have already been passed through the House of Representatives by me without a dissenting vote, and in doing this I have fulfilled my promise to the people of Chilton County. These bills have been sent to the State Senate for action.

In view of the fact that the Hon. J. G. Duncan Jr., our Senator from this district is passing similar bills through the Senate for both the other counties comprising this Senatorial District, and further his attention having been called to the fact that a large majority of the people of this county, regardless of their political faith desire the passage of this bill, I can not believe that he will listen to a minority group and defeat the bill in the Senate. The fact is, about sixty five per cent of the counties have seen fit to pass similar bills.

I regret that you are so conscientiously constructed that you are opposed to giving the people the right to elect their county Supt. of Education by direct vote. I am willing at all time to risk their judgment, and am constrained to believe that if you succeed yourself, after the expiration of your appointment by the County Board you will have to submit your election to the voters of Chilton County.

I trust that you are not conscientiously opposed to a bill that we recently, passed, whereby each School District will in the future have the right to elect by the vote of each school District their school trustees, without the assistance of your department in making the selection.

May I close by asking you two questions which I desire you to answer for the benefit of the people of Chilton county, which are as follows:

State whether or not you are personally, conscientiously or otherwise opposed to the election of the County Superintendent of Education of Chilton County by the direct vote of the people?

State whether or not you have talked to, or discussed with the Hon. L. F. Gerald the proposed local bill making the County Superintendent of Education of Chilton County elective by the vote of the people, within the past twelve months?

Respectfully yours,
PERCY PITTS

LET US HAVE TRUTH, THOUGH THE HEAVENS FALL

Editor Chilton County News:

I feel constrained to again refer to matters concerning our Chilton County Almshouse, and prefer to reduce some of my remarks to affidavit form, copy of which follows:

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

Before me, A. A. Conway, a Notary Public, in and for said state and county, personally appeared W. T. Hand, who being duly sworn deposes and says. While discussing the Chilton County almshouse with Dr. Glenn Andrews, (State Prison Inspector), at Montgomery over long distance telephone on or about June 2, 1931 and while referring to affidavits which had been secured from the inmates and others by State Agents in December 1930, said Andrews stated, they were not favorable nor very unfavorable and said if you will come down here you can see them. Whereupon on June 4, 1931 I went to Montgomery for that purpose arriving in his office about 10:45 A. M. He failed to show the affidavits to me and refused to allow me to see them, notwithstanding my persistence while reminding him of his promise which caused my trip. He said his agents didn't find the conditions as shown by Mr. Harrison and others from the Attorney General's Office but found conditions very good.

W. T. HAND.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the 5, day of June 1931.

ARNOLD A. CONWAY,
(Seal) Notary Public.

Referred to the Governor and Attorney General for the Harrison affidavit, my inquiry revealed that they had been destroyed.

May the following letter tend to add credence to the above statements; my reputation for truth having been assailed.

BIRMINGHAM TRUST & SAVINGS C.
Birmingham, Ala., July 15, 1922.

Mr. Geo. R. Reynolds,
Chairman of the Board,
Continental & Commercial National Bank, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Reynolds: I take this mean[s] of introducing to you W. T. Hand who has been well and favorably known to me for the past thirty-five years. During that time I have had many transactions with him, all of which have been handled in a most satisfactory way.

He is thoroughly straight and reliable and you can accept his word without question. I commend him to you as worthy of your best treatment and any courtesies or favors extended him, will be appreciated by the officers of this bank.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Tom O. Smith,
Vice President

Relative to the court's inquiry set for June 16th, I will not enter any complaint against the conduct of the almshouse from the 2nd (date on court order for hearing) to the 16th inclusive. Everyone knows that conditions there could have been readily ascertained by anyone in authority and promptly remedied.

My latest information is, that new clothing is being distributed, grub is getting better, chickens have died, inmates are chopping cotton under [illegible] ers, that religious services were [illegible] held (the first in about nine m[illegible] That an inmate, J. R. Allen, a [illegible] crippled dwarf (bent and shrunk) from infantile paralysis, one arm and leg perished, and supported by crutches was on June 4, 1931 personally ordered by Mrs. Stapp (chief welfare agent) to appear in Clanton on the 5th for physical examination. Conveyed by the keeper the inspection showed "fit for work" and he was informed by Mr. Gentry that he would notify Mr. Allen through Mrs. Stapp when he found a job for him. His allowance of [illegible] being cut off about a month ago.

My interest in the household of our poor, is inspired from the best motive I possess. Well do I recollect the enthusiasm and delight exhibited by father (L. J. Hand), who was instrumental in securing and building the first home in Chilton County for the poor about one mile north of Jemison some [illegible] years ago. I have no personal grievance in this matter. I only wish for our poor the best there is in life, attended by adequate nursing and medical aid. My investigation does not show that any Commissioner ever saw a meal served, or that the inmates have had any soap "to wash our face and hands with," and if permitted I will be glad to supply this necessary article.

May I not add more to this sad picture?

W. T. HAND.

PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR NINTH ANNUAL CONCLAVE OF WRITERS

(By AGNES WARE BISHOP)

Selma, Ala., June 6.—All is in readiness for the Ninth Annual Conclave of Alabama Writers to be held at Alabama College, Montevallo, June 22-25 inclusive.

The first session will be held Monday evening, June 22, at 8:15 o'clock, in Palmer Hall, with Mrs. Alice Evins Stewart, chairman of the program, presiding.

The full program will be published June 21. The officers of the Conclave are grateful for the cooperation of the writers of the State, and the excellent speakers outside the Conclave membership, which has made possible one of the best and most constructive programs in its history. As the program will be published in full later, this is only an announcement of the various Conclave sessions.

Each session is distinctive and filled with features of help and interest. No writer in Alabama, whether he or she has attaintd success, or is struggling up the difficult path toward achievement can afford to miss one of these sessions. Federation and other prize winning writers, poets, authors of best sellers, editors, speakers of well deserved recognition, musicians, dramatists and the allied arts will enrich the various sessions with their experience and advice.

Monday Evening

Monday evening, June 22, will begin the Conclave, and this opening session will consist of a program of music, talks by speakers of importance in the affairs of Alabama. This will be followed by a "homecoming" reception at which Dr. and Mrs. O. C. Carmichael will be hosts. Tuesday morning will be a miscellaneous session, with illustrations of successful productions in fiction, feature-story writing, drama and music. This might be styled an "all star session" as many prize winning writers are on this special program. F. Melton, of Emory University, and editor of Versecraft, will be the guest speaker of the occasion.

Wednesday Morning

Wednesday morning the Press session will take place and this too has its quota of prize winners and other outstanding writers. Wednesday afternoon will be given up to the very interesting work of the Junior session, when a one-act play by Jack Barefield, of Birmingham, will be staged. Other productions of the young writers of Alabama will be illustrated.

Wednesday Evening

Wednesday evening the Gadsden Little Theater will present a three-act play. Estella Allen Striplin, of Birmingham, will give a group of songs and Robert Evins, of Birmingham, will be the guest speaker. The Conclave is privileged to have Dr. O. C. Carmichael president of Alabama College, preside over this session.

Thursday Morning

Thursday morning's session will be the Press Session, a new feature of the Conclave program. This feature will illustrate and portray the different departments of a daily paper. It will be under the editorship of F. T. Raiford of the Selma Times-Journal. Among those covering assignments will be Marcy Darnell, president of the Alabama Press Association; Grover Hall, of The Montgomery Advertiser; Frank Willis Barnett and Frances Youngblood, of The Birmingham News; Billy Smith, of Clanton, the youngest and one of the most outstanding editors in the State whose paper has been a prize winner Frances Durham, of the Mobile Press, Dr. Rutland, of the English Department at Auburn, and others equally important in the journalistic field. Robert Mangum, of Birmingham, will be one of tht speakers at this session.

Thursday afternoon the only business session of the Conclave will be held, when officers will be elected. This will be followed by a Drama Hour and a Tree-planting exercise at sunset. On Thursday night there will be the banquet which will bring the convention to a brilliant close.

Any writer in Alabama is eligible for membership in the Conclave. N[illegible] are attached except a registration fee of one dollar on arrival at the College and the payment of $1.50 per day for room and board.

The people of Montevallo are invited and urged to attend the evening sessions and will receive a cordial welcome.

Mrs. Paul Smith, of Montgomery, is in charge of the book exhibit and she requests that authors of books, articles, poems or other creative work, will send copies to her address at Alabama College.

50,000 MILE HIKER STOPS AT NEWS OFFICE TUESDAY

Would you hike 50,000 miles for $20,000? Well, Gilbert "Happy" Moran says he is doing that, and that he was given up to die sometime ago, a victim of tuberculosis.

Moran stopped in the News office late Tuesday afternoon to ask for a letter from this newspaper as evidence that he passed through Clanton. He is from Nome, Alaska and has been on his hike since back in 1930.

He stated that sometime ago he became a victim of tuberculosis and had been given up to die by several doctors. At that time he was a miner and timberman in Alaska. He made these bets with the doctors, he said. So far he has visited every governor's office in the union except the governor of Alabama, and was on his way there Tuesday. As proof of this statement, Moran submitted letters from the office of the governors, bearing the state seals, and either signed by the governors or the secretarys of state

Moran will go on to New York before ending his hike, if he can make it he said. When he first started out he weighed only 115 pounds, and now tips the scales at 198.

LARGE NUMBER ATTENDED CRIPPLE CLINIC HELD IN CLANTON LAST FRIDAY

The clinic for cripples was well attended Friday at the Baptist Church in Clanton with Dr. John D. Sherrill examining 45 people during the day. Of the 45 people, 36 were children and 9 were grown-ups. Twelve were from adjoining counties with 2 from Coosa County, 1 from Autauga County, 7 from Shelby County, 1 from Bibb County and 1 from Elmore County.

There were many who the doctor recommended only observation in order to give the defected part time to develop more or to become sounder, while others needed a certain type of shoe and possibly a shoe built up in certain parts to prevent flat foot, the breaking down of the arch, etc., others were recommended for braces and some were in need of operations. Some [illegible] limping, some on crutches, some in braces, some with arms in swings, and some were brought in the arms of others. It is a wonderful opportunity for Chilton County people to have a specialist of Dr. Sherrill's type to be within reach at least once each year. Chilton County has many crippled adults who would not be crippled today had a clinic been available when they were young.

The Pilot Club of Clanton served sandwiches and the Kiwanis Club served ice cream at the noon hour.

SOUR STOMACH

JUST a tasteless dose of Phillips Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes.

But don't depend on crude methods, try the best way yet evolved in all the years of searching. That is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind that the physicians prescribe.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

NON-RESIDENT NOTICE

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Circuit Court in Equity No. 905.
Viola Scott, Complainant, vs. A. J. Scott, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Registrar by the affidavit of Raymond C. Smith that the Defendant is a non-resident or that his place of residence and post-office address is unknown, and that such address cannot be ascertained after reasonable effort; and, further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the Defendant is of the age of twenty-one years:

It is, therefore, ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in the County of Chilton, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring him, the said A. J. Scott to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 3rd day of July, 1931, or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against him.

Done at office in Clanton, this 2nd day of June, 1931.

CHAS. GULLEDGE MAKING BIG IMPROVEMENTS NOW

Verbena will soon have a place of business that it can rightfully be proud of. This place will be the Verbena Service Station, located directly on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway, and owned by Chas. Gulledge of Verbena.

For sometime, the Verbena Service Station has been gaining in popularity among motorists, and now the work of erecting a modtrn automobile repair shop in connection with the station is almost completed. The entire front of the station and the garage has been paved, connecting with the pavement on the highway, which makes it a most inviting place.

Mr. Gulledge stated that his garage will be ready to open within a very short time, and when completed he wanted everyone to stop by and inspect the entire place, which will be more than a one-stop service station for autoists.

Even now, the comfort rooms for ladies and men at the Verbena Service Station are far above the usual class in comfort and conveniences, and when the garage is completed there will be rest rooms for colored motorists. In connection with the repair department of the station, there will also be a paint shop, operated by an experienced painter, as well as a mechanic. In this issue of the News there appears an ad from the Verbena Service Station on Mansfield tires.

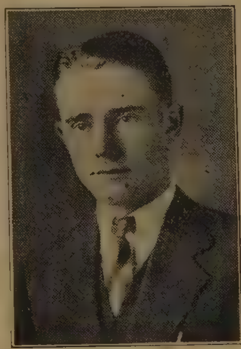
Spent This Week Fishing In Florida

LESTER JONES



F. L. HARRIS

Lester (Breeches) Jones and "Harris" Newton Popwell and Arthur Broadhead, have been giving Florida the once over this week. The pictures above were made when "Breeches" and Harris didn't have fishing on their mind, and we'd like to see a picture of them in Florida with the other boys now.

Newton and Arthur were anxious to see the whole state, fish awhile, swim awhile, boat awhile, and some other things awhile, but must have found the weather down there about as hot as it is here. And when a banker, hardware man, and two merchants get together in Florida you can almost depend on them giving the place the twice over. They are expected to return tomorrow.

Miss FRANCES WILSON, Correspondent

Mr. Rascoe Maddox left Monday morning for North Carolina where he will attend the University during the summer session.

Mrs. Pete Franklin has been very low with pneumonia, but is much better now.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cleckler have returned home from South Alabama.

On Sunday, June 14, there will be Children's Day Services at the Congregational church.

Mr. T. J. York of Birmingham will speak at the Thorsby Baptist church next Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour. He will also teach "Stewardship of Life" each evening next week through Thursday.

Mrs. S. J. Davenport spent the week end in Verbena.

Mr. and Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway, Mesdames R. R. Franklin and C. M. Gray and little Peggy Mims Franklin left Sunday morning at four o'clock for Dallas, Texas, and other points of interest en route there, to visit relatives.

Mrs. Frank Thompson is visiting her mother in Dadeville this week.

Miss Clyde Jones is spending the week with Mary Sue Robinson.

Mr. Fred J. Carter, Mr. Jackson and Mr. James Shearer of Philadelphia are visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Carter.

Miss Frances Maddox and Mr. Wilson Maddox spent Saturday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Smith.

Miss Lois Thompson spent the week end with her grandmother Goodgame in Clanton.

Mr. Clyde Meade, Mr. W. L. Leary, E. N. Bentley, Mr. Jackson of Birmingham and Horace Bean spent Thursday fishing on Coosa river.

Mr. Harry Thompson is moving back to his home in Thorsby.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Meade, Helen Louise and Miss Agnes Leary spent Friday in Birmingham.

Mrs. J. Leonard Hayes, Mrs. R. C. Collins and Mrs. H. W. Marcus visited Mrs. Fowler who is very sick, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hayes and family had dinner Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Collins.

Miss Hilma Collins is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Walter Robinson, of Lay Dam.

The churches of Thorsby have united in plans for a Daily Vacation Bible School to begin June 15, and last thru June 26. There will be classes for the children each day at the Grammar school building from 8 to 12. Every evening there will be group meetings for the young people and older people at the Baptist church. All are urged to send the children and attend the group meetings. It is for everybody interested in the better things—from the tiny tots to the older people in the community.

Dr. G. W. Wright from Vinita, Okla., arrived in Thorsby Monday. He expects to spend ten days with his mother and sister, Mrs. D. L. Ward. He attended the Confederate Veterans Reunion at Montgomery, Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wright from Ashby, Ala., spent Sunday with Mrs. D. L. Ward.

Mr. D. L. Ward was operated on Thursday, June 4, and is getting along nicely. He will be back in about fifteen days.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. D. L. Ward.

The Montgomery School of Aeronautics will present an air circus at Thorsby on Saturday and Sunday, June 13 and 14, with free admission to the public. The field will be located at Plainview farm, two miles south of Thorsby on the Montgomery highway. Pilots will include L. G. Mason, L. L. Brabham and Capt. "Pop" Hanscom, of the Lafayette Escadrille. Featured will be "Buddie" Plunkett, the South's youngest parachute jumper and wing walker. and a plentiful supply of thrills is promised all who attend. The field will be designated as an emergency field between Birmingham and Montgomery, and it is believed that the coming of this troupe of well known fliers will do much to promote air-mindedness in Thorsby and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Pearson and little daughters, Mary Eleanor and Nan Elizabeth, were Sunday visitors to Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Horton.

Miss Vera Anderson and the Misses Bradley of Troy, who have been teaching in the Birmingham schools, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Horton Wednesday.

A miscellaneous shower was given at the home of Mrs. Mack Gray Tuesday evening honoring Mrs. Ethel Thompson Gamble. The house was beautifully decorated in gladiolas, sweet peas, and lark spur. The guests were served punch and sandwiches. Around fifty guests were present.

Important Insurance Information For World War Veterans

Information to the effect that Form 579 (Insurance Demand) had to be filed before July 3, 1931, and that the filing of this form made it unnecessary to file suit on the claims before that time, may have been in error. Shortly after the War most of the men who are now claiming insurance executed Form 526, which was a claim for all benefits arising from the War Risk Insurance Act. Under the regulations prevailing at that time, upon receipt of Form 526 the veteran's case was rated for insurance and compensation purposes, and if the rating was less than permanent total this amounted to a denial of his insurance claim, and within six months thereafter, unless appealed, constituted final disagreement.

A case is now pending in the district court of the Southern District of California involving this specifict point. If it be held by the court in that case that Form 526 was a demand for insurance and that disagreement existed on the denial of insurance based on Form 526, then suit must be filed in all insurance claims before the 3rd of July 1931. If it be held that Form 526 was not an insurance demand, then the present system in operation by the Veterans Bureau (Form 579) is the proper method of procedure. But the California case will not be settled before the 3rd of July, and it may easily be that after that date it will be too late to file suit. The only safe way to proceed is to have suit filed before the 3rd of July 1931 and then it is impossible to be wrong regardless of the decision in the California case.

Under the law, the Veterans Bureau can not waive this point. Even should the Veterans Bureau agree not to plead the statute of limitations, the Attorney General of the United States could instruct the District Attorney to make that defense, and the effect on the veteran would be exactly the same. This does not apply to you if you filed your claim for compensation after June 7, 1924.

All veterans who have claims pending for insurance, or who contemplate filing suit, and who filed claims prior to June 7, 1924, should take the foregoing information and get in touch with their attorneys at once.

Eastview News

A Surprise Birthday Party.

On Wednesday evening, June 3rd, which was my birthday, the Ladies Aid, members of Eastview church and the community met at my home and took me on surprise, before I knew the intent of the gathering. I was carried to two tables filled with nice things to eat, which had been prepared and brought there by the good people. I was told that it was my birthday supper and to just help myself and I obeyed.

I was also presented with a nice Bible by the Ladies Aid Society. Words cannot express my appreciation for this kind and loving favor.

My Bible and I, we've traveled together
My Bible and I, in all kinds of weather
With smiles and with sighs.
In sunshine or sorrow in tempest or calm.
It's friendship unchanging, my lamp and my psalm.
We traveled together, my Bible and I
When life has grown weary and death e'en was nigh.
But all through the darkness of mist and of wrong,
I found there a solace, a prayer and a song
So now who shall part us, my Bible and I?
Shall critics, or scoffers or others who try?
Shall shadows for substance or stone for good bread
Supplant thy sound wisdom, give folly instead?
Ah, no, my dear Bible, revealer of light,
Thou sword of the Spirit, put error to flight
And still through life's journey until the last sigh
We'll travel together, my Bible and I.

Yours in the work for the Master,
—A Calvin Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Nelson visited the latter's parents last Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gray.

Property In West End Has Changed Owners

many regular customers now.

Joe Grooms, another well known merchant with a progressive place of business in West End, has not been there so very long, but has seen an increase in his line. He operates a general merchandise store and filling station combined, located on a corner.

A visit out through that business section of West End in the morning when everyone is wide awake and busy, will show a person that West End is seemingly coming back again to be a bigger part of Clanton, and some day in the near future, it would perhaps not be taking too much for granted to prophesy that large brick buildings will replace the now small wooden structures housing these enterprising little business places.

Luther Williams will soon open a place of business in West End according to reports. He will occupy a new building just beyond the store of J. H. Broadhead, and will probably carry a line of fresh meats, groceries, and will have a filling station in connection. It was not learned just when he planned to open, however, the building has been completed.

Concord-Billingsley

The singing was well attended here last Sunday afternoon. Several visitors from other churches were present. We were very glad to see so many present, and extend to you an invitation to come every first Sunday afternoon and help us sing.

The Christian Endeavor society from here visited the Pleasant Grove society and put on a program there last Sunday night. We were glad of the invitation and the privilege to accept. Sure everyone present had an enjoyable time.

We hope there was something done or said that would help and encourage someone.

The President of our Christian Endeavor society, Mr. Hudson Williams, left Friday for Troy, Ala., where he will attend school during the summer months.

He wil lbe greatly missed in our C. E. and Sunday school work, but we wish him the greatest success and we pray God's blessings on him in everything he undertakes to do.

We have elected Mr. Olin Williams for president in his stead.

If everyone will help him and do their part we can do a great work.

Mr. and Mrs. Fonza Williams and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams.

Misses Bessie and Jettie Williams spent Saturday afternoon with Miss Virginia Little.

Mrs. W. A. Williams and children spent the latter part of the past week with their mother and grandmother, Mrs. W. A. Kynard, of Selma.

Mrs. C. A. Surles and children were the guests of her daughter, Mrs. Homer Turner, last Sunday.

Mr. T. L. Williams dined at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Williams Sunday.

MEETING AT ALMSHOUSE LAST TUESDAY

Statements Given By Those Present Show Opinions That Conflict

As scheduled, the meeting called by the Commissioners of Chilton County to be held at the county almshouse last Tuesday was held, with an estimated group of people of seventy-five present. The meeting was called by the Court, it is said, on account of charges made in letters from citizens of the county in regard to the treatment received by inmates of the almshouse from the keeper, J. D. Bean.

Two attorneys, Percy M. Pitts and Omar L. Reynolds were present, with a stenographer to question the inmates and anyone present at the meeting, in regard to the manner in which the almshouse was being conducted and the treatment being meted out to the inmates. The statements from those who were questioned were taken down on paper and signed.

Approximately eighteen signatures were received by the attorneys doing the questioning. The statements in many instances conflict badly with each other. Among those giving statements were J. A. Shaver, Dr. S. C. Wood, A. A. Jackson, J. H. Teel, Millie Alice Newton, Thomas Isaac Newton, Ellen Cooedy, Mrs J. C. Smith, Oliver Smith, Ollie Brewer, Bill Lowson, negro, E. F. Taylor, Gilbert Kendrick, J. R. Allen, Amos Bean, J. D. Bean and T. A. Maddox.

The statement of J. A. Shaver an inmate of the house told of the food served, saying that the only objections he had was that they didn't get enough to eat, but that he had no objection to the way it was prepared, and that he always had enough fuel in winter to keep him warm.

The statement from Dr. S. C. Wood, practicing physician of Clanton, and authorized physician for the almshouse gave his opinion of the conditions as being "better, or equally as good as in the average home of Chilton county." He also stated that no inmate had complained to him of not having sufficient clothing. He also stated that he knew of no place where M. Bean, the keeper, is failing to do his duty at the almshouse.

CLANTON MAY HAVE A LARGE GOLF COURSE

Plans Are Underway Now To Occupy 35-Acre Field For 9 Holes

Plans were being fromulated Tuesday for the organizing of a real golf course for Clanton, and according to indications it is practically assured.

Although no definite arrangements have been made so far for the work to start on building the course, arrangements have been made to occupy a thirty-five acre field just south of the business section of Clanton, which will take care of a nine hole course. The proposed links will occupy the field near the large gasoline tanks west of South Clanton, hardly a mile out of town.

The golf links will be the property of something of a club to be organized among residents of Clanton, who will finance the building and upkeep. Within the club, it will probably be proposed to elect officers who will direct the work, and a competent man who is experienced in the building of golf links has been in Clanton for the past several days working on the idea.

If this plan materializes, it will place Clanton forward, as there are many visiting persons to Clanton who have asked about the local golf links.

L. F. GERALD IS CONFINED IN BIRMINGHAM HOSPITAL

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence F. Gerald and Miss Celia Gerald, left Monday morning for Birmingham, where Mr. Gerald entered the St. Vincent's Hospital for an operation.

Mrs. Gerald and Celia will spend several days in the city with relatives, while Mr. Gerald will be confined to the hospital for something like two weeks.

ENGAGEMENT, APPROACHING MARRIAGE IS ANNOUNCED

The following announcement was taken from The Birmingham News of last Sunday:

"Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Pitts announce the engagement of their daughter, Elie Merle, to William Gray Orr, the wedding to take place July 16."

Miss Pitts is a most attractive and charming and talented young lady, and has several friends in Clanton. Mr. Orr is known to his many Clanton friends as "Bill," and is the son of Mrs. M. R. Orr of Clanton.

PILOT CLUB OF CLANTON WILL GET CHARTER

Visiting Members Woman's Club in Clanton for Meeting Friday Night

The next meeting of the newly organized Pilot Club of Clanton, an organization composed wholly of business and professional women, as something of an auxiliary to the Kiwanis Club, will be held Friday night.

At this meeting which will be held at the Baptist church, the official charter for the Clanton club will be presented by Harriet McSwean of Selma, general chairman of extension for Pilot International.

Much interest is being shown, and the organization took off at the beginning with a splendid start, with several new members added since its organization only several weeks ago.

Among those from out of town who will attend the meeting here Friday night are the International President, Virginia Rangeley and the International Secretary, Carrie B. Allen of Montgomery also Margaret Ormond, Pres. Selma Pilots, Emily Pointer, Naemi Turnquist, and Harriet McSwean of Selma.

Joe Earl Gowan is spending several weeks in the Citizens Military Training Camp, at Anniston this summer.

Mrs. J. C. Hughes of Billingsley was in Clanton shopping last Tuesday.

Miss Mildred Raney And S. A. Jones Wed

Coming from a short but romantic courtship, the marriage of Miss Mildred Raney to S. A. Jones took place on last Sunday afternoon, June 14th, in Bessemer.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the Rev. Stephens, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Bessemer, in the presence of a few intimate friends.

Mrs. Jones is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Raney of Bessemer. She attended the State Teachers College, in Florence, and has taught in this county for four years. She is considered one of the most popular teachers in the county, and is a member of the younger social set, having visited in Clanton sometime.

Mr. Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Jones, one of the oldest families of the county, and is well known in Clanton as a young business man, being prominently conneeted with Jones Place, local drug store. He is a graduate of the county high school and popular among the young business men of Clanton.

Following a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Jones returned to Clanton, where they will make their home, and where they have been receiving the congratulations of their scores of friends.

SERVICES AT SAMARIA BAPTIST CHURCH ON NEXT SUNDAY

The regular preaching day at the Samaria Baptist church is next Sunday, according to the Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor of the church. Services will be held Sunday morning at eleven o'clock and Sunday night at seven-thirty.

Rev. Jones has been faithfully filling the pulpit at the Samaria church since October, 1930, and has built up quite a bit of interest in church work in that community, however, he states that the people in the Samaria Community are real church workers and should be commended for the progress made in that work. They extend a cordial invitation to everyone to attend the services at their church next Sunday.

Jemison Stores To Take Half Holiday

An announcement was made this week in Jemison to the effect that the stores and business houses of that place would close on Thursday afternoons, beginning June 25th.

This arrangement will continue, it was stated, until August 20th, which is during the warmest days of summer. This shows a step of harmony among the merchants and business men of Jemison, and they deserve commendation in giving their employees a half day off each week during the summer months.

Local Nehi Plant Wins In Contest

According to an announcement and a letter of congratulations to Horsley White, the Nehi Bottling Company of Clanton took fourth prize in a state contest among the bottling plants of that company.

This contest was carried on by the Nehi Company during the month of May, and there were only five prizes, or places offered in the contest. Those ranking ahead of the Clanton plant are Gadsden, Anniston, and Columbus, Ga., towns much larger than Clanton.

Mr. White received hearty congratulations from the contest manager on his award in this contest for District No. 2 in Alabama.

LEON JONES OF NEAR HERE DIED ON LAST TUESDAY

Leon Jones, age 28, died at the Central Alabama Hospital last Tuesday morning following a very short illness. He was carried to the hospital Sunday afternoon.

Funeral services were held yesterday morning at eleven o'clock at Chestnut Creek church, interment following in the Chestnut Creek cemetery, Martin & Sons of Clanton in charge.

Mr. Jones is a member of a well known and prominent family of this county, and has been operating a filling station on the Birmingham-Montgomery highway, at the intersection of the new Rockford road for some time. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Berry Jones of this county, the eldest of the family of fourteen children and the first to be called by death.

Surviving are the parents, his widow who was Miss Delie Jones before her marriage, several brothers and sisters and other relatives.

ROLAND TAYLOR WILL TAKE INTERESTING TRIP SOON

Roland W. Taylor, of the Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company of Clanton is scheduled to leave today for an extended trip that is planned to cover approximately twelve states, all of which are the main wheat producing states.

Mr. Taylor will be in company with two other men, who are prominently connected with flour mills in Alabama, and who are interested in the wheat section of the United States. Mr. Taylor stated that they expected to visit the larger flour mills of the West, and that the trip will consume approximately three weeks.

Clinic For Chilton W.M.U. Members Soon

On next Thursday, June 25th, there will be conducted a clinic at the Liberty Hill church, just west of Clanton, for the purpose of giving instructions to each W. M. U. officer in regard to their duty in the organization.

The clinic will open at nine-thirty o'clock Thursday morning, according to Mrs. W. H. Raybon, secretary of the organization. Everyone attending is asked to bring lunch and stay all day, in order to receive this special study of work.

Dates For Revival Services Announced

The Rev. J. W. Jones, of Thorsby, has announced tentative dates for revival meetings to be held at the Thorsby Baptist church, Jemison Baptist church, and at Samaria Baptist.

Beginning July 5th, revival services are scheduled to begin at the Jemison Baptist church. The pastor is to be assisted by the Rev. W. I. Myers of Vinemont, Ala., and who is a former State Evangelist. This revival meeting will probably continue for ten days, with services at the eleven o'clock hour in the mornings and at seven-thirty at night.

Beginning July 19th, revival services are to start at the Samaria church, with the pastor, Rev. J. W. Jones conducting each service, morning and evening. This meeting will continue for one week.

On July 26th, the revival meeting is scheduled to open at the Thorsby Baptist church, the pastor being assisted by the Rev. F. M. Barnes, pastor of the Clayton Street Baptist church, in Montgomery, and the meeting will continue for ten days.

Further announcements in regard to each of these revivals will be made later, according to Rev. Jones.

TIFFIN-KLINNER GETS THE AGENCY FOR PHILCO RADIOS

The Tiffin-Klinner Furniture Company, located on Sixth Street, in the Fox Building, announced this week that they have secured the exclusive agency in Chilton County for the well known Philco Radios.

Mr. Tiffin, manager of this large furniture concern, stated that they made careful inspection of several makes of radio before selecting the Philco, and invite everyone to visit their store and see the new nine-tube sets on display. They are pushing sales right along on this line. Read their ads in this issue of the News.

MR. AND MRS. S.J. DEASON PARENTS OF FINE BABY BOY

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Deason of Clanton have announced the arrival of a fine baby boy, born last Monday morning early at their home here. Both mother and young son are doing fine.

It might be added that unusual energy was seen in Mr. Deason Monday morning in his regular rounds of delivering ice and investigation disclosed the announcement made above. We can't blame him for feeling great.

PRAYER MEETINGS TO BE HELD FOR STATE-WIDE REVIVAL

Group Meetings To Be Held Every Wednesday In This Section

"Every great spiritual awakening that has swept this and other nations of the world from Pentecost to the present time, has come in answer to prayer," said Bob Jones recently in discussing plans for the state-wide revival campaign to be held in every section of Alabama for three weeks next January.

"The most vital and important thing just now is to get the people all over the state to pray earnestly for this state-wide revival. If the people will lift their hearts to God in earnest, prevailing prayer, He will hear from heaven and will send a great spiritual awakening that will include the entire state."

"In order that people everywhere might be in prayer at the same time for the same purpose, we have set Wednesday of each week as the day and 10 to 10:30 a.m. as the time for state-wide cottage prayer meetings to be held each week until the revival meetings begin. These half-hour prayer meetings are to be informal group meetings with just one purpose, definite prayer for a revival. Prayer meetings are now being held in many sections of the state and we hope to have at least 10,000 prayer meetings organized between now and next January.

"Will you be one to start such a meeting and invite your neighbors and friends to join you in your home for this half-hour of prayer? Remember the time, each Wednesday morning from 10 to 10:30. Make this the keynote of your prayers: "Lord send a revival and let it begin in me."

Anyone in Clanton or in Chilton County who will start one of these Wednesday morning prayer meetings is asked to notify Mrs. Reese Mullins, at Clanton, who is Chairman for the Cottage Prayer Meetings in Chilton County. It is hoped that scores of people in this section of the state will join in these Wednesday morning prayer meetings.

The Wednesday morning prayer meetings are just one phase of a most unique plan ever undertaken in the history of evangelism. The Christian

WHITE'S BEAUTY SHOPPE GETS WARM WELCOME ON OPENING

The opening of the White Beauty Shoppe last Thursday received a warm welcome from the people of Clanton. This shop opened upstairs above The Leader, with new equipment thruout.

Miss Arcula White is the operator of this new shop for Clanton and she stated to a representative of the News that she was well pleased with the visits from the ladies of Clanton, and is this week announcing a special price on permanent waves in an ad in this issue.

A. B. CHILTON IS APPOINTED DIST. ATTORNEY

Will Succeed Grady Reynolds By Appointment of Pres. Hoover Last Week

The appointment of Arthur B. Chilton, prominent Montgomery attorney as United States District Attorney for the Middle District of Alabama was announced last week in press dispatches from Washington.

This appointment will not be submitted to the United States Senate for ratification, as it is a recess appointment.

Mr. Chilton will succeed Grady Reynolds, attorney of Clanton, and son of Judge L. H. Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds has held the position since 1924, by virtue of a recess appointment by President Coolidge. It was stated that it is believed that Mr. Chilton will assume the duties as District Attorney in the very near future, as the latter part of last week the date had not been named.

Mr. Chilton is 41 years old and a native of Alabama. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama law school of 1916, and was a Captain in the Coast Guard Artillery reserve corps when the World War began, and served for a year on the staff of Gen. Douglas McArthur. From 1920 to 1922 he was an instructor at the University of Alabama law school. Mr. Chilton has been identified for a long time with the religious and fraternal groups of Montgomery.

Ice Cream Supper At Fairview School

There will be an ice cream supper at the Fairview School House Saturday night, June 20. Music will be furnished by "Our Band." Everybody is invited. Proceeds will go to the 4-H Club.

MR. AND MRS. DIEFENDERFER TOURING SEVERAL STATES

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Diefenderfer, and two children, Milton and Helen, left Monday morning in their car to visit several places of interest in Ohio, Washington and other states. They expect to visit in Cleveland and Akron, and will spend sometime in Washington.

Mr. Diefenderfer is expected to return to Clanton the latter part of this week, while Mrs. Diefenderfer and Helen and Milton are to remain on the visit for several days more.

MISS ADDIE THOMPSON AND MR. W. NORMAN BAKER WED

Impressively solemnized Tuesday evening, June 9, at 8:30 o'clock at the Rockford Methodist church was the wedding of Miss Addie Thompson, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Thompson, and W. Norman Baker. Rev. J. P West, pastor, read the nuptial vows in the presence of a large assemblage of friends and relatives, including many out-of-town guests.

The church was decorated with lovely cut flowers of the pastel shades, and with greenery of ferns and palms. The center of the altar was made prominent by a larger arch in the distance, a smaller one in the foreground with a pyramid of lights between. On either side a balance of arches in receding heights was made picturesque by a little flower girl poised in each.

The music was directed by Miss Ruby McAllister, pianist, and assisted by the soloist Miss Mattie Mae Kilgore of Weogufka, Ala.

The four ushers, Smith Thompson, brother of the bride, A. B. Rudd, Ralph Harden, and Herschel McEwen, entered to the beginning of the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

Following was Miss Alma Thompson,

MORE INROADS ARE MADE IN LIQUOR TRAFFIC

9 Arrests Reported During Latter Part of Last Week And Monday & Tuesday

The untiring efforts of this county's sheriff and his diplomatic forces are making heavy inroads into the liquor traffic throughout the county, according to reports from the office of Sheriff Gillespie.

With the report as published last week, and the report as given the News Tuesday, shows that twenty-six arrests were made, nine since Thursday of last week, up to last Tuesday.

However, all these arrests were not for violating the prohibition law, as out of the nine reported this week only six were for violating of the prohibition law, one for using abusive language, one for driving an automobile while intoxicated and one for assault and battery.

Seven of the nine were arrested during Saturday and Sunday. Three of whom were arrested at a dance, out west of Clanton Saturday night. The quantities of liquor taken ranged from a pint to half gallons, it was stated.

No trail seems to be missed by the sheriff and his deputies in their efforts at enforcing the law, and according to rumors and reports, there is some fear in the hearts of the violators of the law, when the thoughts of the sheriff and his deputies is brought up.

CEMETERY CLEANING SCHEDULED AT CEDAR GROVE, 25TH

Announcement has been made that there will be a cemetery cleaning at Cedar Grove on next Thursday, June 25th. Everyone who is interested in this cemetery is requested to be there with necessary tools to do this work, and the suggestion was made that they begin early so as to finish before the weather gets too hot.

EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE ENDORSES BILLS

Meeting Held in Montgomery Brings Out Cheers From Legionnaires

Montgomery, Ala., June 18.—In a joint meeting of education committees of the Senate and House last Thursday, aducational bills appropriating $900,000 additional to the equalization fund, $600,000 to the rural school building and equipment fund, and $500,000 to a new fund for school transportation received a favorable vote from the committees.

This open meeting was held in an auditorium of the Jefferson Davis Hotel and was attended by more than three hundred leaders in public education, school board members, district trustees, and members of the American Legion. Dr. A. F. Harman, State Superintendent of Education, made a stirring appeal that the interests of children be placed ahead of any other, and that pledges of the Democratic Party be redeemed. The most inspiring feature of the session, however, came when legionnaires who fought for Alabama in Western France arose in this meeting and told in no uncertain terms of their desire to see the rising generation properly cared for.

Secretary of State Jete Jarman, Col. W. E. Persons, Captain Bill Bloom, and Captain Hargrove Van de Graff represented the Legion group as speakers and brought out some wild cheering from all present as they told what they think should be done for better citizenship in Alabama and as they demanded that "children be first and not corporations, officials, or departments."

A. L. Brooks and T. W. Evans of Birmingham were visiting friends and relatives in Clanton Monday.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT
MRS. G. C. HARRIS

On Saturday, April 18, Mrs. Bessie Durbin Harris, wife of Grover C. Harris, Rural Carrier on Route No. 3, died at Memorial Hospital, Montgomery, Ala.

Mrs. Harris was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Durbin, of Fairview community, Chilton County.

She is survived by her husband, G. C. Harris, Co. Pres. R. L. C. A., a son, G. C. Harris, Jr, and a daughter, Elizabeth

Mrs. Harris was a devotedly religious woman, uniting with the church when quite young. She was a member of Clanton Baptist church, and was active in conducting Sunbeam work, Beginners Department and W. M. U. work. Also she was Past Worthy Matron Order Eastern Star.

Her health failed about five years ago and she spent a great deal of time in hospitals.

A good woman has gone to her reward.

in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well.

Therefore, be it resolved that we bow

Resolved further, that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Association, a copy be sent to the family, The National Rural Letter Carrier and to each of the County papers.

Respectfully submitted,

Mt. Creek News

Miss Hazel Baxley entertained with a lovely lawn party last Thursday evening in honor of her cousins, who are visiting at her home. A delightful time was reported. Interesting games were played and refreshments were served to Misses Hazel Baxley, Louise Bailey, Sudie Mershimer, Eleanor Thrailkill, Bessie Thrailkill, Queenie Pinson, Elizabeth Baxley, Josephine Bailey, Glennie Floyd, Nellie Mae Atkinson, Ruth Atkinson, Messrs. Samuel Cobern, Carl Cannon, Charles Floyd, Amzi Kicker, Luther Cannon, Carlton Baxley, Horace Cobern, Raymond Cobern and John Fike, Otto Norris.

Miss Sudie Mershimer had as her guests this week end her cousins, Misses Eunice and Era Bullard.

Miss Alma Gentry of Clanton entertained Misses Ruth and Edith Hand of Clanton, Messrs. Clayton Culver, Oscar Cobern and Tommie Glenn at her home in Mt. Creek Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Duffey were the guests of the latter's brother, Mr. Herbert Williams, Sunday.

Otis Headley is spending the week with his uncle, Mr. Luther Headley, of Montgomery.

Mr. Vernon Headley was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Henry Gaylor, Sunday.

Mr. Clayton Culver returned to his position Monday morning, which he holds in Montgomery, after a thirty-day vacation.

Mr. G. B. Gaylor was the guest of his brother, Mr. Henry Gaylor, Sunday.

Miss Lois Smith was the week end guest of Miss Inez Eiland.

Mr. Richard Howe and Misses Mabel and Irene Dennis attended preaching services at the Baptist church Sunday evening.

Mrs. Sam Eiland and her father, E. F. Culver, motored to Montgomery Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Rheay were the week end guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Culver.

Mrs. Carrie Atkinson and daughters, Nellie Mae and Ruth, who spent the past week with the former's son, Mr. Newt Atkinson, of Mt. Creek, have returned to their home in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hyde and children, Billy Frank and Wilma, have returned from a visit to the former's mother, at Boothton, Ala.

Mrs. J. N. Atkinson spent a few hours at her home Tuesday afternoon.

Misses Bessie and Eleanor Thrailkill entertained Messrs. Batson Culver and Luther Cannon Sunday afternoon.

We have a splendid B. Y. P. U. and Sunday School now, and invite all who will to attend.

A NEW DISCOVERY TO MAKE THE STRAIGHT HAIR WAVE

DeMabel Beauty Shoppe Has Put in The Famous Parisian Lotion

LaGerardine is a lotion and treatment which trains straight hair to be naturally wavy. It is the result of a patient experimenting that has been conducted in Europe for the last 20 years to find a method of waving satisfactorily to the enormous number of women whose hair does not respond well to permanents or marcels, and also to those women who do not enjoy the application of sticky preparations for wave settings.

LaGerardine method was discovered by M. and Madame Gerard, famous Parisian scalp specialists. For eleven years their Salon at 47 rue des Mathurins of Paris has been patronized by an ever increasing number of chic Parisiennes and foreign travelers, who sought the lustrous, soft lasting natural wave which LaGerardine treatments impart to the hair.

At the insistence of an American patron, M. and Madame Gerard brought their method to America and proved that even stubborn cases would yield to faithful, persistent efforts, and that over 75,000 heads of straight hair have been naturally Wavy. Today we can invite you to your own satisfaction the simple truth of this amazing statement. Now you can test LaGerardine as the smart set of Paris have tested it—by actual use. And with your own eyes see the hair that used to be straight as a string, become more and more wavy with each LaGerardine treatment. The possibility of a beautiful soft natural wave lies in each head of hair. You have only to follow instructions and repeat the treatments faithfully.

Ask DeMabel about this great discovery. It can be bought for home use to set permanents, fingerwaves or to give yourself treatments to make your straight stringy hair curl.

Dock Construction Delayed.

Toward the end of October, accompanied by Gens. Richard N. Blatchford and Mason M. Patrick, and Cols. Charles R. Krauthoff and David S. Stanley, I visited Bordeaux, one of the ports chosen for the use of American troops. As facilities were only sufficient to accommodate a limited amount of additional medium draft shipping, we had started the construction of new docks at Bassens, 12 miles below, where deep water would permit vessels to come alongside. Although considerable quantities of material had been sent over, this new construction was delayed principally because of the lack of piling which the engineers had planned to have brought from the Pacific coast.

An incident happened in connection with the shipments of piling from home that would have been amusing if it had not been so serious. One ship that reached Bordeaux was supposed to be loaded with especially long piling, but upon inspection the engineers found it much shorter than prescribed. Upon inquiry it was learned that to get the piles in between bulkheads the supercargo had sawed the ends off. While speaking of forest products another example of inefficiency that occurred a little later might be mentioned.

One of the vessels from home was loaded by the quartermaster's department with shavings for the cold storage plant instead of steel billets for the manufacture of guns when tons of sawdust and shavings could have been obtained from the logging districts in France.

Trouble With Russians.

Continuing the inspection, we went on Sunday to Cornau, about forty miles from Bordeaux, thinking it might possibly be available for our use later on. It was then occupied by a brigade of disaffected Russians, who, like most of their fellows, had defied their officers and refused to participate further in the war. After being withdrawn from the line they had given the French so much trouble, even to committing depredations on the people, that they had to be sent out of the zone of the armies to this rather remote camp, where they were held practically as prisoners.

There was no transportation to carry them back to Russia, and as they had been allowed to keep their arms it was difficult to enforce discipline among them. I spoke to two colonels and criticized the lack of sanitation, but it was evident that they were unable to compel the men to work, even to the extent of cleaning out stables, latrines or drains, and the conditions may be better imagined than described. The men were a heavy, stupid-looking lot, who, in their new estate, apparently did not care how bad things were so long as the French continued to feed and clothe them.

Progress Is Noted.

Gievres, which lies 100 miles directly south of Paris, became the site of our principal supply depot in France. Under Col. C. J. Symmonds' able and energetic direction construction to cover an area of 12 square miles was going forward with all possible speed. Colonel Symmonds was gradually putting order and system into the place.

Regardless of the adverse conditions under which the line of communications was laboring there was everywhere a fine and enthusiatic spirit among the officers and men, who, without exception, were cheerful and optimistic.

After all, considering the lack of men and material, we were making progress on the physical side of the organization that would feed, clothe and furnish munitions for the great army we hoped to have.

One obstacle, however, was to be found in the number of independent bureaus represented at the ports and the larger centers of activity, not only in our own system but especially in that of the French, and the consequent difficulty of securing teamwork among them. As a remedy I sent to each base section a competent general officer with an organized staff to coordinate and systematize the management of affairs, and in a brief time considerable improvement was noticeable in methods of handling troop arrivals and cargo and in the increased progress of construction.

CHAPTER XIX

Breakfasting with me in Paris November 4, 1917, the British prime minister, Mr. Lloyd George, referred to the Italian defeat at Caporetto as being a most serious disaster, and pointed out that sending British and French divisions to Italy had materially weakened the lines in France. Mr. Lloyd George also spoke at some length on the lack of concerted action among the allied armies.

I agreed with him and added that in my opinion there never had been real co-operation on the western front between the British and French, that when one was attacking the other was usually standing still, and that the Germans were thus left free to concentrate their reserves against the threatened point.

We were facing a grave crisis next year, if not sooner, said Mr. Lloyd George, and no one knew how it was to be met. The enemy might attack each one separately, with the same results as in the case of Italy. He then asked what I thought of creating a supreme war council.

Having in mind councils called to decide upon military operations in the field, I told him that the advice of war councils was not usually of any great value and that the proposition did not appeal to me. I said that authority should be vested somewhere to co-ordinate the operations on the western front, and suggested the possibility of having a supreme commander.

Lloyd George Favors Council.

Mr. Lloyd George replied, in effect, that it was unlikely that the allies would agree upon any one, as the French would object to any but a Frenchman and the British might not like that. He thought the council would be useful for the purpose primarily of bringing the heads of the allied governments together at intervals to determine general policies.

I admitted that such an organization might serve to unite the allies in common purpose, but that the conduct of operations by the combined armies should be under military direction. I got the distinct impression that while he was seeking to secure greater unity of action, he also sought some means of controlling the activities of the British army. During previous months that army had been engaged in almost continuous offensive operations, practically single-handed, with very heavy losses and few compensating advantages.

Mr. Lloyd George went on to say that there was to be a meeting of the prime ministers at Rapallo, Italy, and that he hoped they might reach some agreement that would result in a council such as he had in mind. He thought that the United States ought to be represented at this meeting and suggested that I should attend. As the purpose of a council seemed to be more for political co-ordination than for purely military control, I told him that it seemed best for me not to participate without some intimation from my government to do so.

In the afternoon, at M. Painleve's request, I called on him, and he also told me of the proposal to form a supreme war council and wanted me to go to the conference in Italy. I gave him the same reply that I had given Mr. Lloyd George.

Shortly thereafter the Rapallo meeting was held, resulting in an agreement among the prime ministers of the governments participating, Great Britain, France and Italy.

Approved by Wilson.

The creation of the council did not meet with universal approval, the commanders of the British and French armies and high officials in civil circles being opposed to it. Military commanders were afraid it would result in undue interference with the conduct of operations and in derision it was often referred to as the soviet.

The action of the three governments at Rapallo was approved by President Wilson November 17 and that fact appeared in the press a day or so later.

The President's action strengthened the hands of those who favored the council and probably became the influence that saved it.

The fact is that if the French and British army commanders, in a friendly spirit of co-operation, had made a joint study of the military problem of the western front as a whole and then had seriously undertaken to pull together, as though under one control, the supreme war council would never have been born.

The supreme war council made a favorable start and gave the impression that a wise and conservative exercise of its really unlimited powers would characterize its actions. It refrained from interfering directly with military commanders and operations and confined itself largely to questions of policy, such as the co-ordination of allied resources and the conservation and distribution of allied strength. However, as time went on, the supreme war council assumed greater and greater authority over military questions.

Conflict With Wilson Ideals.

As to the political situation, the undercurrent at the moment, as nearly as could be learned, showed a continued lack of accord among the different nations, which were not at all in agreement with President Wilson's ideals. Each had its own aspirations and each sought to gain some advantage over the others. Some of the divergent war aims had to do with territory distant from France and troops were sent that might have been more usefully employed on the western front.

In a letter to Secretary of War Baker I inclosed a memorandum which was a report of a conversation held by a man in my confidence with a British official high up in the counsel of Great Britain. The date of this conversation was October 24, 1917.

"Perhaps it should not be taken too seriously," I wrote, "but it is an indication of the British attitude."

Sees Difference in Aims.

In this conversation the British official declared:

"The European allies and America are not fighting for the same thing. Mr. Wilson thinks a great deal more of his ideas of people governing themselves, of a friendly working arrangement among all the great powers after the war, than he does of territorials or specific things going to this or that country. What he wants is to smash the German military power and have a society of democratic nations afterwards. But to England, France and Italy these things are phrases, useful, perhaps, but of secondary interest.

"England wants to maintain her colonial possessions to keep her position on the sea, and her commercial place in the world. We know what France wants—Alsace Lorraine, as indemnity and security for the future.

Italy has definite territorial claims. Thus the governments of these countries think a great deal about what they want for themselves and less about ideals, unless these ideals are incidental to success. So there is no clear unity among the allies in Europe and America."

CHAPTER XX

Soon after the First division entered a quiet sector of the Vosges the peaceful aspect of the situation was disturbed by a German raid on an isolated post of the Sixteenth infantry November 3, 1917. A group was caught in a box barrage and although the men made a courageous resistance, three were killed, five wounded and twelve captured.

These were the first casualties that had occurred in our army to units serving in the trenches. The dead were Corporal James B. Gresham and Privates Thomas F. Enright and Merle D. Hay, all of company F.

The French took charge of the funerals and turned out a formal guard in addition to our own. The services were conducted by the French general, Bordeaux, who came with his full staff and delivered a beautiful oration over the graves. A large number of French troops also came informally to pay their final tribute. This joint homage to our dead there under the fire of the guns seemed to symbolize the common sacrifices we were to make in the same great cause.

Ammunition Question Acute.

The ammunition question again became acute at that time, despite our agreements with the French and their positive assurances that they would make prompt deliveries, but their explanation was that we had not furnished the full amount of raw material required.

In my early reference to the prospects of procuring artilery of 75mm. and 155mm. calibers and ammunition for its use, it had been expected that nothing should diminish our efforts at home in their manufacture, but when the probability of delay and possibly failure of the French to furnish ammunition for these guns was reported to Washington my cable met the complacent reply, much to my surprise, that "the French government must furnish it, for there is no other way of getting it. At the present time there is not in this country any actual output of ammunition of the types mentioned. None has been expected."

Home Ports Overcrowded.

The difficulty of providing the French with raw material was largely traceable to the lack of shipping, and, of course, the unscientific use of what we had. The fact is that the ports at home were overcrowded with all sorts of material and supplies awaiting vessels. The French had over 600,000 tons of supplies at seaboard, which they were unable to move, and were clamoring for 150,000 tons additional of steel rails.

As the situation in which we found ourselves regarding artillery ammunition was approaching a crisis, it became necessary to lay the whole question before the interallied munitions board. After a full investigation of their resources, both the French and British concluded that they could undertake to meet our requirements, with the distinct understanding that their plants must be greatly increased in capacity and that we should furnish raw materials promptly.

The late Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, chief of the War department general staff, represented us in the allied conference and reported results and agreements reached. He had brought the latest data from home and his knowledge concerning steel and munitions enabled him to give valuable assistance to my chief of ordnance in our efforts to find a solution to the difficult munitions problem.

A letter from Secretary of War Baker, dated September 10, had only recently been received, and gave me an idea of some of his problems. In part he wrote as follows:

"I am especially concerned that our troops should not be engaged in actual fighting in France until they are there in such numbers and have made such thorough preparation that their first appearance will be encouraging both to their own morale and to the spirit of our people here. I think it goes without saying that the Germans will make a very special effort to strike swiftly and strongly against any part of the line which we undertake to defend, in order to be able to report to their people encouragingly about our participation and also with the object of discouraging our soldiers and our people as much as possible.

"In the matter of selecting corps and division commanders I constantly feel that I ought to have your advice and judgment. From all that you have said, supplemented by all I have learned elsewhere, the need for young and physically strong men is apparent and I am perfectly willing to go any limit in meeting this requirement.

"It will, of course, necessitate passing over a substantial number of our older generals who are very eager to go to France and who, in their own ideas and that of the country, have certain right to be preferred. But their occupation here in the training of troops is, of course, a valuable contribution to the cause and, whenever I can feel sure in the selection of the younger man that he actually has the capacity to develop to a sufficient extent to justify his being preferred to a man of greater experience I shall not hesitate."

Mobilizing of Army Delayed.

In view of the emergency that was so clearly set forth by the Joffre and Balfour missions when they visited the United States, and which was confirmed after my arrival in France and reported with all emphasis, I have never been able to understand the unnecessary delay caused by waiting six months for the construction of large cantonments before calling out men and assembling them for training.

Of course it was particularly urgent that the specialists and laborers needed in France to build up our facilities should have been provided as fast as they could be profitably employed, but nothing should have postponed the immediate mobilization of the combat units of the regular army and the National Guard.

D. W. Haskew, Pastor

We have a class and plenty of room for you next Sunday morning at 9:45. One of your greatest needs is that you go to God's house on Sunday morning and study His word.

We have a special treat for you at 11 a.m. in the message delivered by A. C. Evans. This is Layman's Day and a layman will have charge of the hour. We urge all to hear Mr. Evans. He will also conduct the service for us at Isabella at 3:30 Sunday afternoon.

The pastor is spending this week at Centerville conducting a revival, and will not be in Clanton next Sunday. However our services go on as usual, with the exception of the night service. We have no preaching Sunday night.

The pastor returns next Monday and will be in readiness for regular work.

Railroads
our most regulated industry

The railroads of the United States are operating under stricter and MORE regulatory measures than any other major industry in the world.

Such regulations cover, among others, and under penalties for violation, the building, buying, leasing and discontinuance of lines; issuance of stocks and bonds; making of rates as shown through published tariffs; changes in wages and working conditions; maintenance of rolling stock up to prescribed standards; care of live stock in transit; maintenance of ticket offices and stations—and even the amount of money which the railroads are permitted to earn.

Comparison of these regulations with those under which common-carrier buses and trucks are permitted to operate over public highways in direct competition with the railroads reveals a startling unfairness, in which the public is vitally and individually concerned. Here are a few interesting facts:

Railroad service must be maintained whether operating and traffic conditions are favorable or not—no such requirement governs buses and trucks. Railroads must adhere strictly to their published rates (the cost of publishing tariffs on this railroad in 1930 was $564,508). Motor carriers charge whatever they please and change their rates at option. They are governed by no Interstate regulations whatsoever.

Railroad employes work under certain standards of wages and hours as required by law—motor carrier employes work under no such regulations; and their employers are free to establish any basic day and to pay any compensation they desire.

Railroads pay heavy taxes (about $1,000,000 a day) in support of town, city, county, state, federal and school activities, and in addition maintain their own roadways. Taxes paid by motor carriers are inadequate, and in some instances they pay practically nothing. Moreover, they operate over the highways which the railroads help to maintain.

The Railroads Must Earn To Spend

¶ Such competition is grossly unfair. It is seriously cutting down railroad earnings and impairing railroad credit, with consequent injury to the railroads and to the public.

¶ The solution of America's transportation problem today is a fair and equitable adjustment of taxation and regulation so that every form of transportation may compete for the Nation's travel and traffic on an equal footing. That is all the railroads ask. The railroads built this nation—they must continue to be the backbone of its transportation system. Give them a square deal.

After The Depression --- What?

We are indebted to Rockwell Smith, a real estate man of Van Nuys, California, for the collection of certain facts about financial depressions in the past, which should be valuable in predicting the future. Mr. Smith went thru a file of newspapers back to the 1850's and finds these facts:

There was a business depression in 1857 lasting twelve months.

There was a business depression in 1869 lasting eight months.

There was a business depression in 1873 lasting thirty months.

There was a business depression in 1884 lasting twenty-two months

There was a business depression in 1887 lasting ten months.

There was a business depression in 1893 lasting twenty-five months.

There was a business depression in 1903 lasting twenty-five months.

There was a business depression in 1907 lasting nearly twelve months.

There was a business depression in 1914 lasting eight months.

There was a business depression in 1921 lasting fourteen months.

The important thing about these past panics, however, is that every one of them has been followed by flush times. and the longer the depression lasted, the longer and more active the "boom."

The present depression has now lasted nearly twenty months. We can hardly say that the "boom" which will surely follow it has begun, but it is clearly on its way. And when it comes—oh, boy!

Over The City Folks

Summer is here and we are changing our eating habits for the warm weather. The canners and the preservers do wonderful things, but somehow or other even the best canned goods don't taste like fresh vegetables right out of the garden. It is not to be wondered at that city folks all try to spend their summers in the country. People that never go outside the big cities don't know what really fresh peas and sweet corn and lima beans and the rest of the garden products taste like. And as for fresh eggs—well, we are just sorry for city folks.

With all the talk about depression and unemployment, we notice that people are eating just about as much as they ever did. That is one great thing about these United States, we can make an awful lot of fuss about hard times, but it is only in a very few parts of the United States that anybody has really suffered for lack of food through all of our recent difficulties. There has been a great deal of very genuine suffering in the regions affected by last year's drought. but that has not primarily been due to hard times, and the people of the rest of the United States have been generous in their response to the need. So it seems a fair statement that there are no conditions approaching starvation anywhere in the United States. And, as for the great majority of our people, they not only have plenty to eat, but more than they need, and now for the next few months they will have what we think is the finest food in the world. That is, the fresh stuff out of the gardens.

In the South the watermelon season has begun. It will work its way north until New England's melons are ripe, just a few days ahead of the first September frost. If there was nothing else to look forward to in summer, the watermelon alone would almost be a sufficient excuse for living. That is something we have that they don't have in most other parts of the world. It is hard to believe it, but there are literally hundreds of millions of people in Europe who have never had a chance to taste a watermelon. And cantaloupes! Some old-fashioned folks still prefer to call them muskmelons. They taste just as good under one name as under the other. And sweet corn? We don't know who invented Golden Bantam, but he ought to have a medal and his statue in the Hall of Fame. They have been picking strawberries in Florida since January, but it will not be long now before all the rest of the country will be eating fresh berries out of our own strawberry beds. Another week or two of sunshine and the meadows and pastures of the northern states will be covered with wild strawberries. They are a lot harder to pick, but they are a lot sweeter and juicier than the best and biggest berries ever grown in the garden patch.

Once we get started writing about good things to eat, it is hard to tell where to stop. What we are really trying to say is that this is the season of the year when we folks who live in the small towns and the country have it all over the city people who don't know anything about what good eating is until they come out to the rural districts. Well, come on you city folks. We are always glad to see you, and we feel kinda sorry for you when you have to go back to your kitchenettes and canned stuff.

If I remember rightly, I left off last week telling of some experiences of mine and some predicaments I got into, and judging from some expressions I have heard, several of you have been doing a lot of guessing lately. No more of those accounts of experiences of mine this week.

Rabbi Ben Azai once said, "Despise not any man, and do not spurn anything; for there is no man that has not his hour, nor is there anything that has not its place."

That was a mouthful old Ben spoke. I have seen it run true time after time. It means in good old Clanton slang that "Every dog has his day." But some say that they must have had their when they were puppies.

I'M WONDERING—

Who let the air out of my spare tire the other day.

If I'll ever get fat.

What is all this I hear and read about our almshouse.

Just what kind of burial is given deceased inmates of the county almshouse.

If negro men sit on top of caskets of inmates on the way to the cemetery.

If conditions have been bad at the almshouse and if they have improved since this controversy began.

Which side is right.

If the weather will get much hotter.

If so, what the dickens I'll do.

How many people read this column each week.

Who wrote me that letter the other day calling my attentios to her husband's improvements.

How I can note such improvements when I don't know the man's name.

Why a certain merchant didn't buy a man's eggs the other day.

Why he talked so much after the man left his place of business about other people.

If he ever thought about himself and his actions.

Wh ya man didn't keep his promise to me last Tuesday.

What you think of our new District Attorney.

If we can be as proud of that name there, as we are of the name of our county.

Why some people are like they are.

Why I am like I am.

What I will wonder next.

"Dollar Bill of The Sunshine Circus" will pass. It was well coached, and I think the characters were equally as well selected for their parts. Cohen Stapp was truly Dollar Bill, and Mack Wyatt with talents as shown in the Kiwanis Minstrel and the play Tuesday night, ought to go on the stage for a side-line, or hobby. He's pretty good. The Eastern Star should be congratulated on this presentation.

I hope that the revival meeting under consideration for the Baptist church will go over in a big way this year and there will be no trouble in getting it started. Past revival meetngs in the local churches have always met with a great deal of enthusiasm, and the proposed one for the Baptists will no doubt meet with hearty interest in the whole county.

The rain for the past few days helped out wonderfully down in these parts, and while I'm writing this column now, it looks like we are going to have some more of it.

DOOKER POOKER GETS 'EM TOLD

The Great Dooker Pooker, International Authority on Wimmin, and the originator of the famous Dooker Pooker Pucker, the latest 1932 rinkle in osculatory art, and dispenser of Dooker's Pretty Pills, lets out the following in The Coal Bin in The Birmingham News the other day:

Dear Pooker: I am 25 and in love with Dick Taiter, but he doesn't know it. I am sweet and pretty, but can't talk much. I feel like I will die unless I become hisn. Can you help me? I tried Dorothy Dix, but without results.—MATTIE GASCAR, Clanton, Ala.

Fear not, Mattie, the International Authority ain't goin' to let you die from disappointment. I recently appointed "Doug," of The Chilton County News, as that county's Certified Critter-sizer. Meet "Doug" and Dick Taitor is yourn. He will qualify you with the D. P. Pucker, and show you how to talk with your eyes.

Dooker, I might tip you off that I have gotten in touch with Mattie, and with a little managing, we were able to be alone under the dangerous spell o' the moon the other night, and after your referring her to me, she was completely willing to allow me to give her the first lesson of your course mentioned. Miss Mattie only needed a little coaching. She's got all the qualities, but they just haven't been properly developed, and I believe my attentions to this for a few nights will fix her up in accordance with your wishes and desires. Mattie wanted to use her tactics on Dick Taiter, but just couldn't seem to get started just right, and now since I've been giving her lessons, I believe she has about decided to give Dick the gate, and I may have her on my hands for awhile. She is very anxious for the second lesson, and said she hoped there were lots more lessons especially about the pucker. Don't send any pretty pills, down here for her, because she don't need them, and if she got hold of any, I'm afraid I couldn't stand the pressure. If you get any more letters from here, let me know, and I'll take care of them if I can. Have you got a good supply of pills on hand? I may need some for myself soon. I'm getting a little fatigued.

And Dook, if you see Maud Lynn, tell her that I want to see her, and I would like to see Jane Anne, too.

Letters To The Editor

OBJECTS TO LOCAL BILL

Clanton, Ala., June 15, 1931.
Editor Chilton County News,
Dear Sir:

I guess you will be surprised to get a letter from me but I would appreciate you publishing my views on the Chilton County local bills that are before the Legislature.

As a tax payer of Chilton County, I object to the bills. I feel that those who handle the affairs of the entire county ought to be elected by the people all over the county. One commissioner has, or can have, as much to do with the affairs of the entire county as another and he should have the right, therefore it does not look right to me for a small group in one district of the county, say one-twelfth or one-fifteenth of the voters of the county to designate one-fourth of the governing part of the county and on the other hand the larger districts, say the fourth, which has I would guess most one-half of the voters in the county living in it and probably most one-half of the roads in it. just electing one-fourth of the governing force of the county in a financial way. It does not look nor sound like Democracy to me.

Practically the same thing will apply to the election of the School Board by Districts as outlined by said bills.

So far as electing the County Superintendent of Education by popular vote is concerned, the way I see it, the County Superintendent is a clerk of the School Board, or an agent through which the Board does business, the Board being responsible for the acts of the Superintendent, just as the Commissioners do through their clerk, road overseer or truck driver, so if we elect one, why not the other? I do not think it right.

We used to elect one man to superintend our schools and we left it all to him, now instead of electing one man we elect five men to run and manage our school business and give them authority to select a man or woman competent to assist and advise them and that is the Superintendent. The Superintendent is not a member of the School Board. He never has a right to vote on any question or matter that comes before the Board and has no say about the affairs of the Board unless it suits the Board. I believe the members of the School Board should be elected by the entire county and choose whom they desire as their clerk or County Superintendent so long as they meet the qualifications set up by the State.

It appears to me we would be electing two agencies to do the same work, each independent of the other. I think a bill to elect the County Superintendent should also abolish the School Board of the county for it appears to me it might happen that the two agencies for the self same purpose and they being entirely separate and distinct agencies responsible to the people for their acts and not to each other, might work a disadvantage to the best interests of the schools and to the Children, which interest is the main object after all and not the satisfaction of some men or some set of men.

I hope the people will take these few thoughts and ideas for what they are worth and consider them seriously. I wish to state further that I believe in the people and that they should elect all their governing officers by all the people.

Yours Very Truly,
W. H. HAYES.

Meeting At Almshouse Held Last Tuesday

nent merchant of Lomax, stated that he saw the burial of one of the lady inmates of the almshouse, and that on the way to the cemetery, the casket had a negro man sitting on top of the box in which the corpse lay. He also stated that when the corpse was carried from the vehicle, the negro carried one end, while a white man bore the other end.

Another inmate of the almshouse, J. H. Teel stated that he knew nothing of whippings going on at the house, and spoke of the food, describing some of the meals served.

Millie Alice Newton, a woman inmate of the house said in her statement that "he came into her room and beat me with a stick, and he said, I'll beat hell out of you." She also stated that "he meant to kill me, I decided, and I stayed away for a couple of nights. I hadn't done a thing in the world. . . it was a large stick that came off a peach tree in the yard. She went on to say she had no complaint to make concerning the food served at the house. "I have seen Gip run in his room and said, Lord have mercy. And Mr. Bean was right behind him. I have seen no other whippings."

The testimony of Isaac Newton, husband of Alice Newton, and another inmate stated that he was being well treated at the almshouse, and had no complaint to make. He also told of some of the scrapes his wife got into with Mr. Bean, the keeper, and how he, Mr. Bean, gave her a little thrashing because she ran away from the house once or twice. Newton also stated that his wife's mind "was a little bad," and that he had to threaten her with his knife one day to make her behave.

The statement from Ellen Cooedy, who lives near the almshouse said that she could think of no complaint to make against the keepers of the almshouse, but that one day she saw Shavers throat was pinched. She also stated that she heard Mrs. Bean tell Mrs. Newton, an inmate, "you sorry no-account thing, get back in the house," the report stated.

Mrs. J. O. Smith, another resident near the almshouse stated in her testimony that she saw Lloyd Bean knock Gip McQueen, an inmate of the house, down three times out in the public road at the far building. Her testimony also said that some of the inmates came to her home and begged for something to eat.

Oliver Smith, who lives near the almshouse, stated in his testimony that he saw Lloyd Bean, son of the keeper, knock Gip McQueen down, and that the latter had come to his house asking for something to eat.

Ollie Brewer, another who gave a statement at the meeting Tuesday told of how he saw one of the inmates at a funeral once, and that the latter was dressed in poor clothing.

A negro, Bill Lowson, testified that he assisted in the burial of one of the women inmates of the almshouse and that he helped carry the casket containing the corpse to the grave. He also stated that he had heard some of the inmates grumbling about the food they were being served at the house, saying they could not eat it. The negro also said that one of the women inmates had come to his house to get something to eat, and when he told her she had better get back to the house, she told him how Mr. Bean had beat her.

J. R. Allen, another inmate of the house stated that he had no complaint to make about the food, that "it is enough food, owing to how hungry a fellow is." He also stated that he had been at the almshouse for thirteen months and had never seen Dr. Wood in their dining room.

The statements as copied by a stenographer at the house Tuesday, showed practically all the way through as answers to questions, and not as voluntary undisturbed testimonials, according to copies made, some signed by those giving them. Many of the statements jumped from one subject to another with no connection.

Dr. Glenn Andrews, of Montgomery, State Prison and almshouse inspector was present at the meeting and issued the following report. He was the only state official at the meeting:

Montgomery, Ala., June 15, 1931.
Hon. Court of Commissioners,
Chilton County,
Clanton, Alabama.
Gentlemen:

Enclosed herewith you will find a copy of a report relative to conditions found existing in your county almshouse, upon an investigation made by a deputy of this department on June 8th.

I would respectfully suggest to your honorable board the advisability of a search being made for the inmate who is said to have run away, and have him returned to the home as early as possible for proper care.

Please note the recommendations as pointed out in the report, and institute such measures as are necessary to carry them out.

Very truly yours,
GLENN ANDREWS,
State Prison Inspector.

——o——

June 11, 1931.
Hon. B. M. Miller,
Governor of Alabama,
State Capitol.
Dear Sir:

On June 8th the Chilton County almshouse was inspected, and the following report is respectfully submitted:

Thirteen white women and eleven white men were inmates at the time of the inspection.

One woman died recently. Gip McQueen, an inmate, had run away. It was reported that he had been returned to the institution several times, but the members of the Court of Commissioners had determined they would let him remain away, or return of his own accord. He is feeble minded, and repeated efforts to have him accepted at Tuscaloosa had failed, so it was stated.

Workmen were engaged in installing water at the time of the inspection. It is to be placed at the door of each cottage, and connected with the bathrooms in the recently erected hospital unit.

It is advised that connections for hot and cold water be provided for the kitchen, which was taken under consideration by the member of the Board of Revenue who is supervising the work underway.

The rooms of the inmates, with the exception of one, were found to be clean, the beds clean, well supplied with bedding and good mattresses, and all free from bed bugs. The inmates were well clothed and clean personally.

Several of the inmates are hospital cases, requiring close attention. All of these should be provided with either moisture proof mattresses, or other means of keeping their beds dry and clean. This will aid materially in the care of the patients.

A practical nurse is to be placed in charge of the patients and rooms generally, so soon as one that is competent can be had, so the Judge of Probate stated.

An employed cook should also be in charge of the cooking under the supervision of the wife of the keeper.

The county physician has examined several of the patients and in a written statement permits them to do certain work of a light nature, including assisting with the cooking.

The food supplies on hand were adequate, varied and suitable. Milk and butter is produced at this time and served to the patients.

Fresh vegetables are available from the farm and garden, and are being used daily.

The inmates stated that they had ample meals and that the food was changed from day to day.

It is advised that all the mattresses be supplied with slips made of unbleached domestic and securely fastened on. These slips can be removed when necessary and washed, and ro mattresses thus protected and its usefulness prolonged indefinitely.

All surplus clothing and bedding should be removed from the rooms, properly marked, and kept stored in the room recently built for this purpose. All nails were directed to be removed from the walls, and no clothing permitted to be hung about the rooms.

Where clothing has become too w to be of use it should be destr unless that which can be salvage washed and stored for use as cloth in case of sickness.

The pantry in the kitchen pur for the groceries should have addit al shelf space, and only the groceri and supplies kept therein.

Tin cans or properly constructed should be used to store all article food.

All the inmates should be requi to bathe at regular intervals, or as oft as is necessary to keep them clean fresh clothing supplied from the st room, the soiled clothing being pl in the room designated for such.

Provision has been made for t regulations to be carried out, and only a matter of supervision to see it is done.

An ice box of adequate dimen was in course of construction at t time of the inspection.

Window shades should be prov for all windows.

All refuse and debris that will accumulate about premises should be moved when necessary and burne otherwise destroyed, in order th could not be brought back by som the patients who wander about grounds.

The patients should be restr from going over the neighborh without the knowledge of the ke or his wife. Several of them ar such mental status as to render th roaming about disagreeable to the munity, and also they run the risk injury from the traffic on the roads.

Later the investigation was discussed with the Judge of Probate, who st it was the purpose of the board to the institution placed in a comfortable condition, and to provide quarters the negro patients as soon as th building could be occupied.

Respectfully yours,
GLENN ANDREWS

WHEN FOOD SOURS

ABOUT two hours after eating, many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been overstimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia, the kind physicians prescribe to correct excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

DEATH OF JOE BLACKMON

The death angel visited the home of Mrs. E. D. W. Shirley on June 9th and bore the spirit of our kind and loving father and grandfatehr, age 85, to the Great Beyond.

Mr. Joe Blackmon had to mourn his loss seven children, four girls and three boys: Mrs. Della Shirley of Lomax, Mrs. Lizzie Blackmon of Montevallo, Route Two, Mrs. Mable Farr of Birmingham, Mrs. Urre B. Howell of Columbiana, Mr. Andrew Blackmon of Talladega, Mr. Ellis Blackmon, Goodwater, Mr. E. G. Blackmon of Siluria, several grandchildren, great grandchildren, other relatives and a host of friends.

Oh, it was so hard to give him up, but the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord. We feel assured that our loss was heaven's gain, as he told us he was ready to go.

Mr. Blackmon was carried back to his old home place near Columbiana by Mr. Hawkins, undertaker of Anniston. Funeral services were held by Elder Tucker, Rev. Ezell and Rev. Wooley.

A precious one from us has gone.
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

COTTON POOLERS GETTING CHECKS

Montgomery, Ala., June 17.—J. A. Beaty, acting manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Cotton Association, has announced that checks for several thousand dollars are being placed in the mails for delivery to members of the association.

This is being done, Beaty explained, to meet legimate claims of members on the association on cotton which they have delivered for marketing. Completion of the mailing of the checks will mean that members have been paid all of the initial advance of 90 per cent of the value of the annual pool cotton based on the market price the day the cotton was pooled, he said.

It has been announced that $120,000 of the cotton association funds were involved in the crash of the First National Bank of Prattville, but these checks meeting obligations to growers are being mailed in spite of the catastrophe.

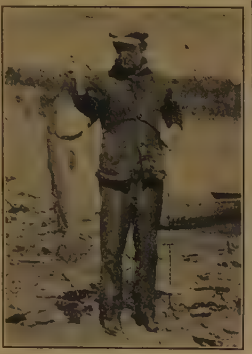
SAM POWERS, LAY DAM SHOWS EVIDENCE HERE



SAM POWERS

Sam Powers, Superintendent of Lay Dam, near Clanton is showing the evidence in a big way in this picture, with a twenty-four pound drum caught at the dam recently. The fact that the fish was caught will go undisputed, and we are under the impression that the statement that Mr. Powers caught the fish will go undisputed. This drum is said to be one of the largest, if not the largest ever caught at Lay Dam.

Aspir-Mint
Suffering? There's a new, pleasant, mint-flavored, tablet that relieves ordinary headache and neuralgia, muscular pains and functional pains. It's excellent for Coryza —cold in the head—and for the sore throat that often accompanies it.

Physicians have been writing prescriptions for a similar combination for years.

The Dr. Miles Medical Company has standardized this well balanced formula and is glad to offer it in the form of a stable, palatable, mint-flavored tablet for home use. Pocket Size 15c, Regular Package 25c

WOMEN: watch your BOWELS
What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all drug stores keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

THREE DAY MEET FOR INSTITUTE TO BEGIN SOON

Supt. W. M. U. Urges Large Attendance for Chilton And Unity Assn.

In a statement issued this week by Mrs. S. J. Ezell, superintendent of Unity W. M. U., she is urging that all who can start now to make plans for the Missions and Methods Institute, to be held here for three days beginning June 30. Following is the statement from Mrs. Ezell:

"Begin today to plan to attend the Missions and Methods Institute which will be held in Clanton for three days beginning June 30. Men, don't dismiss it as a woman's affair. It is for Men, W. M. S. members don't think you are the only ones who ought to go. It is for all Children and Young People. Pastors, please do not think this lets you out. It is Especially for Pastors.

"Everybody is invited. A program is being planned that will be interesting and valuable to all. The very best speakers are being secured. Dr. L. O. Dawson will be here to deliver an address each day.

"Some fine missionaries will be secured. Mrs. F. A. Vernon, Vice President of Eastern District, Mrs. L. H. Dawson, District Young People's Leader, Miss Kathleen Hagood, State Young People's Secretary, Rev. John Cunningham, State R. A. Counselor, and many others. Baptist Boys! Begin to practice up on baseball, too. Some of those R. A. Chapters from Billingsley, Maplesville. Marbury or Clanton will beat you, if you don't look out. Mulberry or Sardis will make it hard for you, too. There will be fun and play for the young folks as well as information and inspiration.

"The Superintendents of Chilton and Unity W. M. U. urge all pastors to begin to talk up these meetings, as well as to plan to come themselves. They begin each morning at ten o'clock and will last through the day. There will be no night sessions, but Clanton will gladly entertain all who will stay each night.

The Merry Minstrel Four, a quartet of radio and stage stars will appear at the Wadesonian tonight. The quartet contains two premier Blackface comedians in the persons of Dan White the "Blues Yodeler of Dixie," and Buddy Shepard, the very funny "Laughing Coon." The offering will be a treat to lovers of old-time minstrel shows. These four young men will appear in person on the stage at the Wadesonian Theatre tonight.

J. D. Evans Feted At Birthday Party

A clipping from a Winston Salem newspaper, occupying a prominent place on the society page, tells in a most elaborate manner the account of a birthday party given in honor of J. D. Evans, on his twenty-first birthday, by a friend of his, who, according to the write-up spared little in making the celebration one of the main social events of the younger social set of Winston Salem, last week.

J. D. is a Clanton product, one to be proud of, having gone out and is making much progress in the business world, now being connected with a prominent brokerage firm in Winston Salem. He is the son of Mrs. J. E. Evans of Clanton, and a graduate of the local high school. His progress in his work has been most commendable, having become connected with the firm of brokers in Birmingham sometime ago, shortly after completing his studies here, and was later transferred to Atlanta, and then to Winston Salem, where he has been for sometime.

maid of honor, sister of the bride. She wore a clever frock of flesh chiffon with a corsage of rosebuds.

Preceding the bride little Janette Stewart, and Margaret Davis daintily dressed in green paved the way with rose petals from their baskets of pink.

The bride wore a lovely creation of powder blue chiffon with velvet ribbon trimmings. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and valley lilies. She ahd her father were met at the altar by the groom and best man, Erle Mauldin of Trade, Ala.

Immediately after the ceremony, the young couple left for a motor trip to the Carolinas where they will spend their honeymoon.

Following the wedding rehearsal on Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson entertained members of the bridal party, relatives, and out of town guests at an informal reception.

During the past month the bride has been the honoree of a number of delightful social festivities.

She is a graduate of the Coosa County High School and State Teachers College at Jacksonville, Alabama. During the past year she taught in Tallassee, Alabama.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Baker of Harpersville, Ala., has a degree from Birmingham Southern College and has done graduate work at the University of Alabama. Prayer Meetings To Be Held For Revival people of Alabama are being asked to unite in a great state-wide revival to be held in all sections of the state for three weeks next January. This section is to be included in this movement and people of all denominations are being asked to co-operate.

The thinking people everywhere agree that the greatest need of the hour is a turning to God in repentance, confession and faith. If the people of Alabama will do this, there would not only be a revival of religion of the only true sort, but a revival of prosperity as well.

SENATE VOTE RECOUNT STILL SHOWS RESULTS

Bankhead Makes Net Gain Of Fifteen Votes In This County, Report

By Russell Kent
In The Montgomery Advertiser

Washington, June 21.—A meeting of the Senate sub-committee handling the Heflin-Bankhead contest is to be called by Senator Hastings of Delaware, chairman, as soon as he can find a date agreeable to the four other members. Future procedure will be determined by the sub-committee at this meeting.

With more than half of the ballots hich were cast in the senatorial election in Alabama last November recounted, 36 counties having been completed, Senator John H. Bankhead's [illegible] majority has been reduced temporarily by only 1,258. This is not a permanent reduction, for many of the ballots set aside for future decision will be restored to his column. It serves to demonstrate however, the futility of the contest filed by former Senator Tom Heflin if the ballots are to decide the contest.

TWO ROBBERIES REPORTED LAST WEEK IN COUNTY

Jemison And Maplesville Get Visits From Burglars; Small Losses

Two robberies were reported in the county during the past few days, from the office of the sheriff. Although several places of business were broken into, the loss was comparatively small, it was stated.

Jemison received a visit from burglars and three business houses were broken into in one night. According to the story given the News, the prowlers broke into a shoe shop at Jemison, and secured a pick or some iron instrument with which they broke into the hardware store there.

After gaining entrance to the hardware store, they secured a brace and bit and proceeded to burglarize the general merchandise store of C. G. Glass, gaining entrance by boring a hole through the door, and lifting a latch by means of a bent wire.

It was stated that the burglars then helped themselves to all the cigarettes in the store, and fitted themselves with shoes. Apparently there were two of the prowlers as only two pairs of shoes were missing and were of different sizes. Some overalls were also taken.

Sam Crysell then fell victim to the thieves, as they pried the lock from his garage door, and took his car, a Whippett sedan, in which they made their get-away. No trace of the thieves had been found late Monday night.

Burglars entered the store of John W. Foshee in Maplesville last Friday night and made away with a large quantity of merchandise, including shoes, and other articles of clothing.

A part of the loot was recovered soon after the robbery, having been seen near the railroad, near Maplesville, by an engineer on a train.

No arrests had been made up to Tuesday afternoon in either of the above robberies.

NO OPPORTUNITY SCHOOLS TAUGHT IN CO. THIS YEAR

Information from the office of the Superintendent of Education this week stated that there will be no chance, so far as is known, of the Opportunity Schools being taught in Chilton County this year.

This is due, it was stated, to the lateness of state funds with which to pay teachers for the past term, and the need for funds to pay some amounts already due teachers.

It was understood that Prof. H. A. Harris, yearly organizer of the schools, has made almost every effort to get the schools in the county again this year, but so far has not met with any degree of success, and it was stated that unless some miracle occurred, there would be no Opportunity schools for Chilton County this summer.

Miss Marie McClanahan, of Hartselle, arrived in Clanton several days ago to accept a position as stenographer in the office of T. W. Bryan, justice of the peace, in the Wilson Building. Miss McClanahan comes very highly recommended from her home, town by leading citizens, and is making her home at the Latham home on Eighth Street.

Grover Harris, Jr., is spending sometime with relatives in Mobile.

BARBECUE AT MAPLESVILLE IS PLANNED FOR JULY 4TH

There has been planned a big barbecue at Maplesville for July 4th, according to an announcement this week. The barbecue will be for the benefit of the ball team at Maplesville and will be held at the Maplesville School building. The Maplesville baseball team will play two games on the afternoon of the Fourth and everybody is invited.

COMMISSIONERS MAKE REPORT ON ALMSHOUSE

Report States Inmates Being Cared For As Well As Average Citizen

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County issued a formal statement or report recently, and a copy given the News this week, in regard to their conclusion concerning the condition of the county almshouse, reached, following a meeting called by the Court at the almshouse on June 16th.

At this meeting on June 16th, testimony was heard by the Court about conditions at the almshouse and treatment of the inmates of the house, from persons attending the meeting.

The report from the Commissioners Court, stated in part, "The Court proceeded to hear all charges and accusations against the management of the Almshouse and J. D. Bean, its keeper, and the Court concluded that the charges were frivolous and the result of prejudice of certain parties against the keeper J. D. Bean. . . . The Court might state that there have been several examinations by the state authorities prior to the one herein set forth and certain suggestions made, which the Court have in each instance followed, Also the last Grand Jury, which met in March, 1931, made no

V. A. SHORT SENDS IN A COTTON BLOOM THIS WEEK

To V. A. Short goes the credit of sending in to the News office the first cotton bloom of the season. Mr. Short is one of the progressive farmers residing on Maplesville, Ala., Route 2

Mr. Short mailed the bloom in to the News office, and we would liked to have asked him something about it. Anyway, it is the first seen at the office this season, and the credit goes to Mr. Short. Who is going to be the first to send a watermelon in?

L. E. DIEFENDERFER RETURNS FROM EXTENDED MOTOR TRIP

L. E. Diefenderfer, operator of the popular Dief's Service Station in Clanton returned Sunday from an extended motor trip into the state of Ohio.

Mr. Diefenderfer was accompanied by Mrs. Diefenderfer, and children Helen and Milton, who are remaining to spend sometime with friends and relatives in Ohio. The trip was made without any trouble whatever, Mr. Diefenderfer stated.

ONLY SIX ARRESTS ARE REPORTED BY THE SHERIFF

Reports from the office of the Sheriff of Chilton County showed that since Wednesday of last week up to Tuesday of this week, only six arrests have been made.

One of these was for petty larceny, one for reckless driving, one for abusive language, one for desertion and two for violating the prohibition law.

WRESTLING AND BOXING HERE FOR JULY 4TH

Local Post American Legion To Sponsor Attractions Extraordinary

Last week it was announced that plans were underway by a committee of members of the Chilton County Post of the American Legion to stage boxing and wrestling matches in Clanton on Saturday, July Fourth.

This week it was definitely announced and the matches have been made, according to Max Scholder, of Birmingham, who has been engaged by the American Legion to outline plans and secure a number of boxers and wrestlers. Mr. Scholder is a fight promoter of prominence of the Magic City, and has been in Clanton recently in connection with the Fourth of July plans.

The bouts and wrestling matches will take place at the ball park of the local high school, and are scheduled to start at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, July 4th. The ring will be elevated and a goodly number of ring-side seats will be built. In addition to the ringside seats, there will be a general admission plan whereby everybody will be able to witness the bouts, etc.

One of the features which will open the affair, will be a battle royal, in which five or six negroes will go into

H. L. BINFORD BACK ON HIS NIOLIN COFFEE ROUTE

The merchants through this section who buy coffee from the A. H. Niolin Company are glad to see that Hugh Binford is making his rounds again. Binford has been with the Niolin company, coffee roasters and tea distributors for sometime, but has not been working this territory until recently.

Binford is one of those salesmen we like to have call, and his personality, coupled with the brand of teas and coffee he sells, has made for him many friends in the county. Binford commented favorably last week on sales made in Clanton.

Wallace P. Pruitt, Jr., of Chatom, Ala., who has been attending school at Gadsden, was a pleasant visitor in Clanton and the News office last Saturday.

Roger Babson, Statistician, Stakes Reputation On Business Opinion

Speaking before the convention of the Advertising Federation of America Tuesday of last week, Roger W. Babson, best known and most reliable of statisticians, said at the close of his address in which he discussed business conditions:

"I am willing to stake my reputation based on thirty years' experience (1) that business has seen its worst; (2) that although the change will be slow it will be in the right direction; and (3) that within a reasonable time this country will again enter a period of marked prosperity. In short statistics today point to another period of prosperity just as three years ago they pointed to the present period of depression.

As a postscript Mr. Babson said to the advertising men: As you go back home, tell your merchants that now is the time to advertise and give their customers an opportunity to benefit from present low prices. Some day these merchants who take your advice will be so pleased that they will have these ads of 1931 cut out and framed.

ATTENDING PILOT MEETING IN PENSACOLA THIS WEEK

ROCKETT HAS ON SPECIAL PRICES, FRUIT JARS, ETC.

Dewey Rockett, of the Clanton Building Supply Company, has a special message this week to the people who are contemplating canning, preserving, etc. this year, and this message appears in the News this week in the form of an ad.

Mr. Rockett stated he has placed some extra special prices on fruit jars, and wants to see just how fast they will sell at the low prices he has on them. Find the ad in this issue and see for yourself.

PASSION PLAY TO BE SHOWN HERE FRIDAY

Local Methodist Church To Bring Big Picture to High School Friday Night

Coming to Clanton under the auspices of the Clanton Methodist Church, "The Passion Play" will be shown on the screen at the high school auditorium tomorrow night.

Many people in Clanton have seen this great play on the stage, and now it will be possible to see this magnificent and colossal play as though you traveled to Bavaria to witness the original prduction by the Oberammergau Players, who are known the world over for the parts they play in "The Passion Play."

In this picture will be protrayed Christ, His Disciples, Pilate, King Herod and all ancient characters, together with five hundred Roman soldiers and civilans. The picture is reproduced in beautiful colors, and is scheduled to start at eight o'clock tomorrow night at the high school auditorium. There will be a special musician here to furnish appropriate music along with the picture.

L. F. GERALD AND FAMILY EXPECTED HOME THIS WEEK

News was received from Birmingham this week, stating that Mr. and Mrs Lawrence F. Gerald and children. Lawrence, Jr., and Celia, are expected to return home this week.

Mr. Gerald has been confined in the St. Vincents Hospital for sometime following an operation, and latest reports state that he is expected to be able to return home this week.

Kiwanis Club Will Go To Mitchell Dam

Members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, and their guests will go to Mitchell Dam Friday night, where they will be the guests of Kiwanian John Hollis.

This meeting will take the place of the regular Thursday noon luncheon, and the greater part of the program for Friday night will take place on a large boat, while the party is taking a ride up the river.

Members of the club will bring their wives, or other guests and lunch will be served on the boat. Col. R. H. Mangum, of Birmingham, will be present and give the gathering an interesting talk. Billy Smith has charge of the program for Friday night.

At the luncheon last Thursday, C. E. Stapp had charge of the program, and had as guests of the club, several of the members of the Boys Calf Club of Chilton County, and F. W. Burns, livestock specialist of Auburn. Several of the boys told the club how they judged purebred stock and the things they are learning as members of the Calf Club. Mr. Burns also spoke, telling of the aims of the Calf Clubs over the state.

W. H. SARTOR EXHIBITS A FREAK IN CORN GROWING

W. H. Sartor, well known merchant of Clanton and owner of The Fair store here, was showing something at his store the other day that was truly a freak of nature, or something on that order.

This was a young stalk of corn, with tassels in their proper place at the top, the center, or main tassel had turned productive and was becoming an ear of corn. There were no shucks on the corn, and the kernels were perfectly formed, with silks as usual.

The other tassels were showing signs of turning into ears of corn There were also several kernels forming in the crotches where the tassels were growing at the top of the stalk. When asked what he did to make it grow that way, Mr. Sartor said, "I worked it and it just grew that way." It was the Hastings Prolific variety and grew in Mr. Sartor's garden.

JEMISON DEFEATS DOGWOOD MINES LAST SATURDAY

The Jemison baseball team met the strong Dogwood Mines team on the Jemison field last Saturday afternoon and after a hard fought game turned the invaders back with a score of 11 to 9. Watkins, who pitched for the Jemison team turned in some very fine work in holding the Dogwood team to nine runs while his team scored eleven runs. Langston playing for the Jemison team was the star of the day, getting two triples and a double out of four times at bat.

Foozello: I'm sorry that my engagements prevent my attending your charity concert but I shall be with you in spirit.

Solicitor: Splendid! And where would you like your spirit to sit? I have tickets for two, three and five dollars.

Fond Love: My kisses must be getting better. Your slaps have weakened into pats.

Some Baby: I know, I'm tired.

TOO HANDY WITH GUNS

Another most regrettable double killing by a quick-triggered deputy sheriff is reported from Oklahoma, where two Mexican youths, one of them a cousin of President Rubio, were slain on the public highway.

The slayer and another deputy accompanying him say one of the boys drew a pistol as the officers approached their parked car to question them as to what they were doing. Whether this be true or not, the boys are dead and can not give their side of the case.

When a person is halted on the public highway, he does not know whether he is being held up by bandits or officers of the law. In either case if the citizen makes any show of resistance he is likely to be killed.

Innumerable killings and woundings of innocent persons by peace officers in recent years indicate that many of these officers are entirely too handy with their guns. On the other hand, the readiness of bandits to shoot officers makes the latter's position difficult at times.

Such is the state of civilization in the United States in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred thirty-one.

RISKING TOO MUCH

While sharing the universal admiration for Lindbergh's courage and skill as an aviator, we can not help feeling that in his proposed flight across the Pacific with Mrs. Lindbergh he is risking two much.

Conceding that two adult persons have the right to risk their lives in any manner they choose, we are thinking of the Lindbergh baby, who would be left motherless if disaster should befall his parents in their daring enterprise.

Mrs. Lindbergh has already demonstratd her own bravery and skill in the air to an extent which should satisfy anyone. No possible practical benefit can come to the science and art of flying by her taking the desperate risk of a trans-Pacific flight. Even the great Lindbergh is only human, and he may tempt fate once too often.

However, we wish the brave pair luck in their proposed flight, although we consider the hazards involved entirely out of proportion to anything of benefit which it may accomplish if successful.

Setting The World Right

Carle Conway, head of the Continental Can Company, has a customer in Massachusetts who makes cranberry sauce. One day when Wall Street was thinking that the world was going to the dogs, Carle dropped in on this Yankee manufacturer and found him very serene.

They dined together, and after dinner the talk turned to world business conditions which, says Carle, "seem to have eliminated prohibition from conversation, so that there is that much to be said in favor of depression at least."

The cranberry man said: "During the war I was making cranberry sauce and we were not able to get sugar except at an exorbitant price. Everyone in the industry said we had better go out of business because we had to have sugar to make cranberry sauce, and sugar at thirty cents a pound would stop sales.

"I went into a huddle with myself that night and came to the conclusion that I would let the customers decide whether they would buy cranberry sauce made with thirty-cent sugar: that I had just one job in the world and that was to run my business, and I was going to let the world take care of itself, and everyone else take care of himself, and I was going to figure how I could take care of my business and solve the problems each day as they came along

"I did not think I was big enough to help or harm the world's progress, but I did think I could help or harm my own business."

One thing which makes this depression seem more discouraging than others is the fact that all countries have been so closely knit together. In other periods of slow business we in the United States did not worry because the [illegible] market was bad in Brazil or the corn plaster industry had collapsed in Timbuctoo. We had our own troubles to fight.

This year our newspapers, through their truly wonderful news gathering forces, have brought us all the bad tidings from everywhere. The result is that the average American business man is going around trying to carry the troubles of the whole big world.

I may be all wrong, but my idea about the other countries is that they are all having serious difficulties, just as we are, but in everyone of them there is a solid backbone of people just like you and me—hard working, sensible men and women who have their homes and families, who do not want to see the social order overthrown and who are doing their individual best to solve their own problems.

Ultimately, I believe, this silent majority will win.

In the meantime, when anybody comes into my office to discuss world conditions, I courteously ask to be excused. I am trying hard to work out my own salvation.

If everybody in the world does that the world will be saved.

The So-Called Room Tax

The so-called room tax is nothing more nor less than a minimum charge which uses the number of rooms in the building served as basis by which the minimum charge is determined. It means in actual practice that the fellow with the large house, and therefore the larger potential power requirements, pays a larger minimum price than the small fellow with the smaller requirements.

In Alabama these utility rates are fixed by the Alabama Public Service Commission after full hearing from both the utility and the public, and represent the mature judgment of the members of that Commission based upon the evidence submitted. From their findings both the utility and the public are given the right of appeal to the courts.

Birmingham Men To Aid In Rating Alabama Boys' Entries In July

Birmingham, June 18.—(Special)—Preparations were being completed here this week for the judging of all the miniature Napoleonic coach models which boys throughout Alabama have been constructing in competition for the four university scholarships and 980 other awards offered by the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild.

All the boys in Alabama who are entering models in the competition are to bring or send their coaches to the Harris Transfer and Warehouse Company, 8 S. 13th Street, Birmingham, between now and July 1. This company will act as custodian of the models until the state exhibition and judging which will take place here in July.

The judging and exhibit of coaches will be held in the Birmingham Y. M. C. A. Boys' Building, 5 N. 20th Street. This convenient location has facilities for displaying the boys' models to the best advantage, and also has ample room to accommodate the throngs which the judging will attract. All are welcome to come.

It was also announced this week that the two local judges of the coach models had been appointed. They are W. H. Caruthers, Scout Commissioner, and V. J. Douglass, supervisor of Manual Training, Birmingham Public Schools. These two judges, sitting with a third judge from Guild headquarters, will judge all the coaches which have been constructed in Alabama. Their finding will select two boys to go to Detroit as representatives of the state at the first annual convention of the Guild—there to compete for the four university scholarships of four years each. They will also make the distribution of the numerous state cash awards.

THE CHILD PROBLEM

Interesting discussions concerning child training marked a conference on the subject at the University of Iowa. It appeared to be the concensus of the educators present that more rational methods and less sentimentality should be employed in dealing with the young.

Properly understood and properly dealt with, the tendency to independence which characterizes the youth of the present is not to be deplored, according to some of the speakers. Children must be led to do things because they are right and beneficial for them, not simply because someone lays down arbitrary rules.

Mrs. C. G. Wodehouse, head of the Bureau of Economics in Washington, declared that "the church and the law have lost their hold because both are so bound by prejudice that they are out of touch with modern needs," and that "religionists must revise their doctrines to meet modern problems.

Summed up, the conclusions appeared to be that children of the present and future must be governed, if at all, by principles which appeal to their intelligence rather than to their emotions.

A good business man will not buy a farm or any property without first looking it over to see what it is worth.

However, some will buy or loan money on land without an abstract.

Isn't it equally as foolish to buy a farm without looking it over as to buy it and not know whether the titles are good or not? Without an abstract you do not know where you are getting the land you looked at or not.

Before investing in land in any way have an abstract made and be safe.

MEAT—

Meat packers are making a great to-do over the advice of the U. S. Public Health Service that people should eat less meat in Summer. The packers have sent a protest to the Government, saying that Eskimos live on meat the year around and do not suffer from it.

This is an interesting example of the way in which commercial interests try to influence Governmental affairs. The public health is a secondary consideration with the packers; they are concerned with selling more meat.

Americans are the largest meat eaters in the world. Also we have the highest rate of deaths from heart disease and hardening of the arteries. I asked an eminent heart specialist the other day whether there was any connection between these two facts. His reply was that meat is a highly concentrated source of muscular energy which should be used sparingly by everybody who does not regularly do a great deal of heavy physical work or exercise.

"Eat what you like, but all in moderation." was his advice, which sounds like good common sense.

GAMBLING—

A colored man in Boston won $150,000 in a gambling pool on the British Derby. Thousands of other Americans won large sums and the city newspapers have printed columns about their winnings, which will make it easier for the sellers of chances on these events to rope in more suckers next year. Lotteries and other forms of gambling are illegal in most of the United States, but it is questionable whether they do any more harm than unlimited speculation in stocks or grain. The desire to get something for nothing is inherent in human nature. Mankind has always gambled and always will.

Nevada has recently legalized gambling and is licensing gambling establishments. A curious result of this is that a great gambling center will be set up close to the Government's "model city" at the Boulder Dam, on a twenty-acre strip which the authorities overlooked in acquiring land for the town site. Prohibition laws, it is said, will be strictly enforced, but it is easy to foretell where a considerable part of the wages paid to workers on the big dam will go.

TELEVISION—

So many miracles have been performed by science in the past few years that we are ready to believe that anything is possible. That explains why the public has been so easily "sold" on the idea that before long we shall be able to see distant events while they are occurring, by radio television.
